THE DAIRY FARMER.

The formula for making good cows is not complicated. The first step is to use a pure bred sire.

Veal, if you will, the dairy bull calf, but save the heifer and raise her well.

The dairy cow should have ample heart girth and great capacity, with clear, full, bright eyes and large nostrils.

Notice how your cows stick up their noses at hay that has been picked over by sheep, and then feed both cows and sheep in their own racks.

Dairymen realize perhaps far better than they have ever done before the value of summer silage in tiding the animals over slim pastures.

FEED THE DRY COW A LIBERAL RATION

It is generally assumed that dry cows do not need much feed. It is true they are not converting feed into milk, but the unborn calf is making heavy demands and the cow, to be most profitable later, should be so fed as to accumulate a little reserve. A cow that has gone through a long lactation period needs this dry period to recuperate, and if kept on too meager rations the full advantage of the rest is not secured, says the Kansas Farmer.

There should be plenty of protein in the feed at this time, for, while a very small amount is required for mere maintenance, the dry cow soon to be fresh is doing more than maintaining her own body. Little or no grain is required if the roughage is of good quality. Straw and corn fodder are not suitable because they are too high in carbonaceous. It takes protein to build tissue. The dry cow should have some such roughage as alfalfa, clover or cowpea hay.

It will not hurt in the least to have a good milk cow accumulate some fat

Dutch Belted cattle are distinguished by a band of white around the body, the rest of the body being black. They are very hardy, easy to keep and give a good supply of milk of excellent quality. The animal here shown is a pure bred Dutch Belted bull.

during this resting period. Some dairymen seem to have a great fear of feeding their cows so they will get fat. A milk cow that gets fat while being milked is not profitable because the feed that should go to milk is being stored as body fat, but during the dry period even the most highly organized milk cow can with profit be so fed as to accumulate a considerable reserve of fat. In the cow possessing the dairy temperament, this reserve will be drawn upon during the first few weeks following freshening and more milk will be produced than if she has been so fed as to prevent the accumulation of any fat.

A cow coming up to calving time carrying considerable fat will gradually fall off in flesh until she has reached her normal working condition. We believe this is a point that owners of cows of dairy breeding should not overlook. If the cow is bred right the extra feed stored as fat in the few weeks before calving will be a distinct advantage in enabling her to give a maximum flow of milk during the beginning of the milking period.

Oats in Dairy Ration.

In a test at the Wisconsin station four cows were fed a ration consisting of six pounds of clover hay and all the corn stover they would eat up clean, with a grain ration consisting of ten pounds of ground oats and two pounds of corn meal. Two of these four cows were given ten pounds of wheat bran and two pounds of corn meal. These four cows were fed these rations for a twenty-one day period alternately, and it was found that when oats were given in place of the wheat bran the cows produced about 12 per cent more milk and 11 per cent more fat. Bran is richer in protein and therefore will be more efficient than oats in balancing a grain ration. Oats is a very good feed when added to other grains and at a price of 30 to 35 cents per bushel will be found a profitable feed for dairy cows.—Orange Judd Farmer.

Feed Bran Dry.

It is better under most conditions to feed bran dry. Wetting the meal portion of the ration does not provide for the same stimulation of the salivary glands as does dry feed. Cows, at the time of freshening or when somewhat out of sorts, may be given a warm wet mash.

Grind the Grain For Cows.

The way to prevent loss in feeding corn to cattle is to grind it. When whole corn or oats are fed the loss may be from 15 to 20 per cent or more of the feeding value of these grains. It is a very wasteful practice to feed whole grain to cattle.

HOLD EXERCISES

McLoughlin Institute Concludes Very Successful Year

The annual commencement exercises were held at the McLoughlin Institute on Monday evening and diplomas were presented to a class of nine pupils, which was graduated from the tenth grade. The evening was devoted to the annual bazaar and exhibit of school handicraft and to the very interesting program of the commencement exercises.

The annual bazaar proved a very profitable feature of the year-end program this year and many articles were disposed of to good advantage by the children. The exhibits of classroom work were very creditable productions and the display was unusually complete. Eastern manufacturers were also represented in the exhibits which were placed in the McLoughlin hall.

Among the children who exhibited were: Agnes Brady, Dorothy Draper, Mary Rypinski, Mauden Michael, Julia Rinkus, Katie Entner, Marjorie Zorn, May Tobin, Mary Brady, Arna Petzold, Mary Nuroby, Margaret Turney, Mamie Gaylor, Marie Rissberger, Jeanette McBain, Catherine Long, Mary Planton, Katie Gerber, Long Forsythe, Helen Webber, Frances Ambrose, Anna Serres, Jannie Rebol, Alice Gibbons, Marie Descloux, Marie Roethe, Josephine Soreghan, Marie Descloux, Marie Burk, Cecelia Soreghan, Minnie McAfferly, William Ice, Cyril Justin, Walter Nathey, Philip Soreghan, George Fischer, Charles Laues, Gregory Gerber, Joseph Rimbken, and Frank Siffic.

The members of the tenth grade class were: Arthur M. Rothe, Jacob Borowick, Frank B. Michels, Leta M. Smith, Edna C. Lund, Ida Pearl Long, Frances R. Gawista, Genevieve McGarrity and Mathilda A. Michels.

The eighth grade graduating class was composed of the following pupils: John Barry, Edward Hoffman, Joseph Burch, Leonard Meagher, Richard McGarrity, Edward Hanlon, Adolph Kessler, Everett Blackburn, Regina Satera, Margaret Brady, Regina Valentine, Valita Reilly, Violet Odekir, Catherine Long and Josephine Hodes.

Five pupils received diplomas for efficiency in penmanship under the Palmer rules. They were: Violet Odekir, Mary Rypinski, Catherine Long, Adolph Kessler and Simon Rimbken.

The commencement program was complete and very successfully rendered throughout. It opened with a piano solo by Eva McNulty with violin accompaniment by G. Klemens. An epilogue was delivered by Nick Michels and was followed by the presentation of the quaint fantasy, "David Swan," in which a number of the pupils took part.

Other features of the program were orchestral selections, an alumni chorus, piano solos, recitations, violin solos, quartette numbers and a song by the graduating class. Preceding the presentation of diplomas the Rev. Abbott Placidus, O. S. B. delivered the graduating address.

Indiana Man's Experience

Frank Moseley, Moore's Hill, Ind., writes: "I was troubled with almost constant pain in sides and back and attributed it to weakening of my kidneys. I got a package of Foley Kidney Pills. Great relief was apparent after the first doses and in 48 hours all pain left me. 'If you have rheumatism, backache, swollen, aching joints or stiff, painful muscles, why not try Foley Kidney Pills? They stop sleep-disturbing bladder ailments, too.'—Jones' Drug Co.

NEW ASSESSMENTS MADE

Tax Receipts for 1916 Probably Less Than Last Year

The work of assessing the property in Clackamas county is practically completed and all but one of the thirteen deputies put into the field by County Assessor J. E. Jack has reported the valuation of all taxable property in the respective districts.

The deputy who has not yet made assessments is W. A. Moran, who is detailed in the Mount Hood district, where heavy snows cover a large area. This condition is unusual for this time of year and the assessments in that district are usually in before this date. Weather conditions have retarded the melting of the snows, however, and Mr. Moran has been unable to make his rounds.

As soon as conditions will permit Mr. Moran to go forth he will load a complete camping outfit on his vehicle and with his wife will cover the extensive territory in his district. The couple will camp out at night and expect to enjoy a thorough outing while at work, doing their cooking over a camp fire and eating the hardy fare of camp life.

Assessor J. E. Jack estimates the assessment for the county at a somewhat lower figure than that derived from taxation last year. He attributes this to the damage done to timber lands by the heavy east winds of the past winter. Timber properties were greatly injured and an adjustment of the assessment was necessary in a number of cases. Adjustments have been necessary in several other important cases also.

As far as the county seat assessments are concerned, Mr. Jack believes that the figure will remain about the same, or perhaps a little greater, than it was last year.

CANNOT PAY FARES

Four-Mill School Tax Voted by Clackamas School District

At the annual school election at Clackamas on Monday the voters favored the levy of a four-mill school tax, which is 1/2 mills less than the levy of last year. A measure upon which the voters balloted was that to provide car fare for the pupils who attend the school of the district. This proposition received very little support and was voted down. The ballots provide for the regrading and improving of the school grounds, an

TO SELL LAND

Government Announces Sale Within This County

The sale of a tract of land containing 16 acres has been announced by the government to take place at the court house in this city on July 15. The tract comprises the government property formerly used as a fish hatchery and discarded by the authorities when the hatchery was moved to Clackamas. It is located about eight miles from Oregon City and is a slightly piece of property.

The tract is to be sold by bid and the highest cash price takes the piece, although the government reserves the right to reject any or all bids. A cash deposit of one-third the amount of the successful bid is to be made at the time of the sale and the balance upon delivery of the deed.

Wm. Randall, son of George Randall of this city, is at the Oregon City hospital suffering with blood poisoning from an injured hand.
