NEWSPAPER READERS and all who follow police and court work, must be impressed with the frequency of disappearance cases. These cases are of two types, the real and the fake. The newspaper reporter who looks up the case goes to the home expecting to find the wife dissolved in tears at the loss of a husband whose vows she confided in too trustfully. Actually, however, she does not always seem much upset.

The true inwardness of some of these situations was explained the other day by a man who had investigated a number of such cases. A husband will often leave secretly for another place, obtain work and send money regularly to his wife. She meanwhile will live in some degree of comfort, particularly as she has a seemingly good excuse for not paying bills. When the duns become too pressing, she can follow her husband. But until that time she sometimes is able to get relief from municipal pauper departments, meanwhile receiving regular remittances from her husband.

The majority of disappearance cases are probably not of this type. But there are enough of them to signify a certain social irresponsibility, an unwillingness to bear one's part of the life and labor of a community, and to fulfill the obligations imposed by debts, marriage, and the possession of a family.

No doubt in many cases the wife is openly flouted and left completely on her own resources. The plight of a trusting woman, unfitted by motherhood for hard labor, but left by some worthless human trash to feed herself and her children, is about the most painful thing in life.

The man guilty of such an act deserves the limit of punishment. Only prison life may suit him too well. He may prefer it to the labor of supporting a family. Women should realize what chances they take when they marry men who lack a record of steady industry.

IN THE USE OF WOOD, Oregon counties have an effective way to fight the so-called bridge trust and, at the same time, promote the state's principal industry and save money. It took an eastern paper, the Christian Science Monitor, to recognize first the opportunity offered western states and in a recent issue, considerable space is devoted to the subject.

The existence of a bridge trust in the middle western states is not much questioned. It has been found that structures of a certain size will go to one firm, of another size to another, indicating that there is an understanding to their common advantage among the contractors. Even in Oregon, now and then we hear reports of a mutual agreement among bridge builders.

Oregon, with other heavily timbered states, is offered an unusual opportunity. Many engineers and builders have long insisted that wooden construction under proper conditions will outwear steel work. A late issue of the Timberman contains a testimonial to the lasting qualities of fir timber in bridge construction in the form of a communication from L. N. Roney, of Eugene, who has superintended the erection of bridges in Lane county for several years.

Mr. Roney reviews his experience with the wooden bridge across the Willamette river at Eugene which was destroyed two years ago after 37 years of use. He found that its timbers were absolutely free from decay and he is of the opinion that the structure would have been good for many more years of use if it had been possible to replace the piers and renew the bottom cords. He believes that the trouble was not with the bridge but with the superstructure.

The Eugene man also tells of two other bridges in Lane county which were built of wood 40 years ago. These bridges are still in use and the county has found it necessary to renew only the piers.

Mr. Roney draws the conclusion that a bridge of Oregon fir, if built on a permanent foundation of concrete or stone and with the spans carefully protected from the weather, "will outlast steel bridges and certainly the upkeep, in flooring, etc., is nothing in comparison to that of an uncovered structure."

DOWN IN MULTNOMAH COUNTY they are asking what pavement shall be laid in the big system of trunk highways to be constructed with the bond issue recently approved by the voters. The conflict is not unlike the war in Europe with two main forces at work.

On one side is the Warren Construction company and on the other the concrete forces with their allies and a small group of neutrals. The Warren company, the object of many an attack by the other interests, has the support of several smaller firms which are controlled by the larger company or dependant on it for material contracts. The concrete forces are composed of dealers in cement, the contractors who are after the job and the wood block and brick men who would have the Multnomah county court do the work in installments.

Much feeling has been injected into the conflict by the combination of many of the smaller companies to oppose the Warren Construction company, so-called trust. Both sides are doing everything possible to attract the attention of the public and, wherever possible, organizations and individuals are being lined up.

The split in the forces of permanent highway men is one of the conditions that is delaying the more general spread of hard surface throughout the state. Even in counties where bond issues have been passed, the success of the campaign has often been marred by disgraceful quarrels in the camp of the victors.

The danger of such a development in Multnomah county is too evident. Too great interests are at stake for any of the paving companies to quit as long as there is a possibility of success.

THE BANK OF OREGON CITY
34 YEARS IN BUSINESS

There is a reason why the present diplomatic correspondence of the state department should be based on sound international lines. The basis of a great proportion of it, especially that which deals with critical questions, is furnished by John W. Foster. For many years he has been in touch with foreign matters, and has been a part of many of them. He was our minister to Spain and was secretary of state under President Harrison. He is the author and negotiator of many trade treaties, and has written many volumes on diplomatic subjects. He is the father-in-law of Robert Lansing, the man who has done so well as counselor of the state department, and who now becomes acting secretary. Mr. Lansing is not only a cool-headed, well-poised official, but he has great respect for his father-in-law's opinion on diplomatic subjects. They live in the same house in Washington, and at through the present situation Mr. Lansing has had the advantage of Mr. Foster's advice and counsel, and from this he has profited greatly. Moreover, it was under Republican administration that Mr. Lansing was connected with the state department when he obtained his knowledge of diplomatic usage which is now standing him in good stead. So the real diplomacy that is being used at present is distinctly of the Republican brand.

Now that the note to Germany has been dispatched, the attention of President Wilson and Acting Secretary Lansing is being devoted to the preparation of a firm note to England demanding a cessation of interference with American commerce. Such a note, it will be recalled, was prepared by Secretary McAdoo during President Wilson's recent absence, when he went to New York to review the fleet. Some intimation of its contents was permitted to reach the press, but on the president's return he promptly put it aside. The state department believes that England's interference with American commerce is unquestionably in violation of the rules of international warfare and that this country has a perfect right emphatically to protest. This war has conclusively shown that when nations are fighting for their lives they disregard both treaty obligations and the rules of warfare. That it is the duty of neutral nations to protest against such violation is also true.

The McAdoo administration of the treasury department is developing some real financial geniuses. An official of the department of agriculture was sent to Florida recently on departmental business. He found himself on one side of one of the numerous lakes in that state when he had business on the other side of the lake. He paid a native 50 cents to row him across the lake. To go to the same destination by carriage or automobile would have cost $6. When the expense account of the official was examined by the auditor for the department the item of 50 cents was disallowed on the ground that the trip to Florida did not normally include "water travel." Had the official spent $6 for carriage hire he would have been reimbursed. He had to pay the 50 cents from his own pocket.

There may be a special session of congress. But there will be no revision of the tariff, no matter how desperate the state of the treasury. More direct taxes, a bond issue, the stopping of public work, more enforced vacations for scrubwomen, further refusal to pay letter carriers what congress has said they shall have—these or any other expedients may be looked for to help the shrunken treasury. But a restoration of tariff duties, never. The minute the Democrats in congress propose this, they confess what all the country knows—that their fundamental theories of providing for the national expense are erroneous and that their whole party program has been based upon a misconception. This is the last thing to be expected from a Democracy which is bossed by a doctrinaire.

The letter of Arthur McVey printed elsewhere in this paper is not charitable. The article can be better understood when it is realized that V. F. Cooper, McVey's principle object of attack, is blind. This explains such expressions as: "... but it is not up to you to make these accusations and spit venom ... for these privileges we reserve to the crippled and the blind"; and "It seems to me that anyone but a blind man could see that Oswego is forging ahead." Then of course there is that sweet sentence where Mr. McVey calls his fellowtownsmen "brutes". It is such spirit as this that has held Oswego from being one of the largest towns in the north Willamette valley.

And now the Customs Court holds that the five per cent rebate on goods imported in American bottoms must be paid; and paid not only on such goods but on all goods brought in by ships of the "most favored nations"—which means all ships. The decision involves some twenty millions dollars, and though the case will be taken to a higher court, this sum stands as a contingent liability of a treasury already nearly empty through Democratic mismanagement of national finances, and the case serves as another costly reminder of the inability of Democrats to legislate.

There is nothing startling, nothing surprising in the success of Clackamas county at the Panama Pacific exposition. It shows that the north Willamette valley is as rich as any part of the entire state and that Clackamas county farmers are more enterprising than those in other sections. The success of the display is largely due to O. E. Freytag, of the Oregon City Commercial club.

It is fitting and proper that the Courier should label its leading article in the editorial column, "editorial." Otherwise how should the poor reader realize what it was?

SAFETY OF LIBERTY BELL IS ASSURED

PRICELESS RELIC WILL TRAVEL ON SPECIAL CAR ACROSS CONTINENT.

Most elaborate precautions are being made for the safe transportation of the Liberty Bell across the continent through Oregon to the San Francisco exposition next month.

The bell will be handled on a special train. It will be under guard every moment from the time it leaves Philadelphia until it is returned there. It will be carried on a special gondola freight car, equipped with all the safety appliances necessary to enable it to be moved in a passenger train. The gondola will occupy the same position as an observation car at the rear of the train, that the residents of the cities and towns through which it passes may view the bell.

The bell will leave Philadelphia on July 7. Safety of transportation and the population of the country traversed by the railroads determined the routing. It will pass through Chicago and Kansas City, and thence be transported to Omaha, where it will be taken in charge by the Union Pacific. The latter road will carry it through Denver and Salt Lake City to Ogden, where the Oregon Short Line will assume charge and take it to Boise. From Boise, it will go to Portland; and after being on exhibition there six hours, the Southern Pacific becomes its guardian. This will be on July 15. On that day, the Southern Pacific will begin its transportation to San Francisco via the Shasta Route. The residents along which will be given an opportunity to view the historical reminder of the War of Independence. The bell will leave Portland at noon.

July 15. It will reach Salem at 2 p. m. of the same day, be on exhibition until 2:30, and will then be moved to Eugene, arriving there at 5 p. m. The people of Eugene will have 15 minutes in which to view it. Arriving at Roseburg, it will be on display the same length of time, arriving there at 8:15 p. m.

On Friday, July 16, the bell will be in California. It will reach Marysville at 12:15 and be on exhibition fifteen minutes. At 2 p. m. it will be in Sacramento, where it will remain for one hour and then be moved to Oakland and San Francisco. July 17 will be Liberty Bell day at the exposition and people from every corner of the state are expected to visit the fair on that day.

NO FRANK HEARING

ATLANTA, Ga., June 15.—Arguments before Governor Slaton on the final appeal for commutation of the death sentence of Leo M. Frank are expected to be completed tomorrow. No hearing was held today as the governor was forced to fill a speaking engagement. He would not say how long Frank's case would be considered before a decision is rendered.

ACCUSE AUSTRIANS OF SNIPING

ROME, June 15.—Austrian soldiers are sniping Italian troops from the rear, hoping to induce retaliation against non-combatants, an official statement declared here today. "The plan has failed," the statement continued. "Several of the Austrians have been captured and confessed."

DENIES BARRACKS REPORT

BREMERTON, Wash., June 15.—Reports to the effect that the disciplinary barracks here are to be abolished and the prisoners transferred to Mare Island are untrue. Acting Commander Bramar declared today. The change has been discussed, he said, but no official action has been taken.

45 GRADUATE IN LARGEST CLASS OF OREGON CITY HIGH

FIFTY PER CENT WILL ENTER COLLEGE, ESTIMATES SUPER-INTENDENT TOOLE.

OPERA HOUSE IS PACKED AT THE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

Four Boys, As Members of Newspaper Staff 20 Years From Now, Review Activities of Members of 1915 Class.

Twelve long years of work in the grade and high schools were brought to end by 45 students of the Oregon City high school Friday night when the members of the largest class in the history of the institution received their diplomas.

Shively's opera house where the commencement exercises were held was crowded and many forced to stand. F. J. S. Toole, city school superintendent, acted as chairman of the meeting.

Of the 45 graduates, Superintendent Toole estimates that at least 50 per cent will enter college. Several will take up post graduate work and others will become teachers with the opening of schools in the fall. The Oregon Agriculture college and the University of Oregon are the most popular schools with the graduates.

The exercises began with an orchestra selection and the invocation by Rev. Otto Schultz. The salutatory, delivered by Miss Alene Phillips, and the valedictory, by Miss Sylvia Schultz, both expressed the appreciation of the members of the class for the education they had secured. The class history was read by Miss Evangeline Dye.

The class prophecy, presented by four boys, Rosa Grimm, Otto Pfahl, Clarke Story and Arthur Farr, was one of the most novel and most popular features of the program. The stage represented the local room of a newspaper with Arthur Farr as city editor. Each of the other three boys were reporters and the events of the day reviewed. The time represented was twenty years from now, and, strange to say, every member of the 1915 class of the Oregon City high school figured in the news of the day.

The class poem, which was written by several of the girls graduates, was read by Miss Edith Parker. Its theme was the development of character. Miss Shirlee Swallow, who won the oratorical contest of the Clackamas County School League, delivered an oration. The class will, read by Miss Roberta Schuebel, bequeathed their interest in the school to the incoming classes. Maxine Telford, with Miss Florence Grace as accompanist, offered a violin solo which was one of the successes of the evening. Dr. A. L. Beattie, chairman of the school board, presented the diplomas.

The graduates are: Bernice E. Buckles, Emma Iona Derrick, Charlotte Evangeline Dye, Walter Dungey, Esther Lydia Downer, Maude Sylvie Davis, Leola Rose Fisher, Arthur N. Farr, Ethel May Green, Gladys Eliza Beth Green, Florence Grace, William Ross Grimm, Myrtle Alvaret Henderson, Helen Harris, Cleora Pearl Heatter, Helen Marie Hartke, Isabel Rebecca Hatten, Dora Grace Jackson, Marshall H. Jackson, Dorothy Elizabeth Latourrette, Ada Maude Langley, Freda Edith Martin, Therlow W. McKine, Mary Opal Mattley, Ralph B. Madison, Milton Marion Miller, Eleanor Alice Miller, Marion Mudgett, Marjorie Jane Money, Ruth Dell Parker, Edith Mae Parker, Alene Margaret Phillips, Otto J. Pfahl, Opal Irene Rains, Grace Elgin Spizer, Roberta Margaret Schuebel, June Ruby Scott, Sylvia Luella Schultz, Shirlee Swallow, Robert Clarke Storey, Donald Eugene Sileo, Maxine Virginia Telford, Della Woodfin, Alvin Frederick William Wiewers, Bertha A. Wourms.

Why Let a Terrible Cough Hang On and Wear You Out?

Loosen Its Grip with that Wonderful Throat and Lung Medicine, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound.

Coughs that "hang on" mostly settle on the lungs, and they fairly eat the life out of you. They use up your strength, lower your vitality, and pave the way for serious lung and bronchial diseases.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound leaves healing behind it as it glides down your throat. It covers raw, irritated, inflamed surfaces with a soothing healing coating. It loosens the racking, tearing cough, and eases stuffy wheezy breathing.

WILL G. RICHMOND, Englewood, Cal., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar acts so well in harmony with nature, it is more like a food than a medicine." E. J. SARGENT, Dallas, Texas, writes: "I had a terrible cough which would not let me sleep. I spent much money and tried many kinds of treatment, but found nothing which would cure me. At last I tried Foley's Honey and Tar and it completely relieved me of all my troubles and my cough entirely disappeared." For all coughs, colds, croup, bronchitis, asthma, whooping cough, throat and lung troubles, you will find it a medicine without a peer. Every good druggist is glad to sell it, for it gives satisfaction to his customers and contains no opiates. You cannot get a substitute to do for you what Foley's Honey and Tar will do. 25c, 50c, $1.00 sizes.  EVERY USER IS A FRIEND. Jones Drug Co.

105 GRADUATED BY BARCLAY AND EASTHAM SCHOOLS; NEW RECORD SET

One hundred and five pupils graduated from the eighth grade of the Barclay and Eastham schools Thursday at Shively's opera house.

The attendance was large at the graduation programs of both schools. The opera house was full and many persons were on the steps and outside the door unable to find room inside. Tables and pianos were piled high with flowers.

The program of the Eastham school pupils began at 10 o'clock Thursday morning with a number by the orchestra, followed by the salutatory by Juanita Sullivan. The class song, "A Lesson in Giving," and "The Summer Night," was given by the class. The following musical numbers were on the program: Piano solo, Florence Andrews; vocal solo, Kenneth Caldwell; and piano duet, by Emma Calvan and Esther Staats. The valedictory was given by Florence McElhean. N. W. Howland, principal of the school gave the class address, followed by the presentation of certificates by Superintendent F. J. Toole. Following a selection by the orchestra was a farce, "Box and Cox," by Gordon Hamsted, Lisle Took and Alma Lieberg. After the program the graduates returned to the school for cards. Eastham's colors are pink and green; Eastham, "Hush on, keep moving."

The Barclay school program was given at 1:30 Thursday afternoon, the opening number being the commencement song by the class. The salutatory address was given by Ernestine Hart. A musical number, "Come Where the Bluebells Ring," followed. The class history of the girls was read by Lawrence Hull. Emerson Hovey, Mabel Morgan and Birdsell Ladd rendered several selections on the violin. The class history was given by Carrie Cross. A pantomime, "The Star Spangled Banner," by Lillian Harris, Margaret Clark and Maude Lageson, followed. The Barclay valedictory address was given by Birdsell Ladd. Principal J. R. Howland, gave the class address. Following a song was the presentation of diplomas by Superintendent F. J. Toole. A peace play, portraying the ultimate victory of peace over war was given by the following:

MILLIONS SPENT IN U.S. FOR WAR ORDERS

NEW YORK, June 16.—New war orders received in America add to the stupendous sums being spent for war munitions and supplies. Italy is spending seventeen millions with one concern alone, in Bridgeport, Conn. The plant makes projectiles and will be kept busy for over a year filling the order. The contracts now being worked in the Lehigh valley reach the great total of $200,000,000. Besides the Bethlehem steel works, other large concerns are working night and day turning out shells and shrapnel. The French government is asking for bids for seven million shells valued at $8 each, and for about ten million dollars worth of shrapnel. In Hartford, Conn., work on seven million dollars worth of munitions is proceeding. The Colt, Remington, Winchester and Smith & Wesson plants are working overtime. The Dupont powder plants are being constantly extended, as are those of the Bethlehem steel company. Baltimore manufacturers are handling several millions in contracts for projectile material. It is estimated that Canadian firms are working on war munitions valued at $156,000,000. The Canadians are now turning out 20,000 shells a day and expect to reach 50,000,000 a day.

FRENCH DEMAND FACTS

PARIS, June 16.—Owing to the fantastic rumors circulated recently about French losses in the war, the League of the Rights of Man has petitioned the government to publish the exact figures. The league says other nations have published lists without disastrous results. "Surely," concludes the petition, "the government will agree that French people, who have shown from the outset heroic serenity, also are capable of hearing the truth. We venture to add that it has the right to hear it."

Following: Columbia, Mable Morgan; Utele Sam, Albert Buckles; war, Clerk Hughes; valor, Emerson Hovey; self-sacrifice, Frank Buckle; endurance, Sam Shaw; peace, Grace Danbach; love, Hazel Kenney; prosperity, Edith Presson; liberty, Audrey Shively; honor, Hattie Gross. The Barclay class motto is "We climb the elevator to success is not running;" the class flower, white rose, and the class color orange and black.

The following is a list of the graduates of Eastham eighth grade: Norma Bette, Emma Calvan, Lennie Ott, Alice Hermann, Aigle Gutberg, Morris Holman, Carl Wrovesick, Marie Anderson, Florence Andrews, Hazel Fenton, Neal James, George Field, Richard Howell, Ivan Frost, Margaret Heaton, Walter White, John Saunders, Claude Kern, Martin Hays, E. LUSITANIA WAS UNARMED

NEW YORK, June 16.—That the Lusitania was unarmed was the testimony of four witnesses here today in the federal grand jury hearing of perjury charges against Gustav Stahl in connection with the point at issue.

TURKS DESTROY POSITIONS

CONSTANTINOPLE, June 16.—Destruction of several strongly defended positions of the allies near Avl Burum is claimed in today's official announcement from the war office.

Turkish aviators assisted in the attack, dropping bombs upon the allies with considerable success.

Camels are ready for work at the age of five and begin to decline at 25, though they live to the ages of 35 and 40 years.
 Bilious Attacks
 When you have a bilious attack your liver fails to perform its functions. You become constipated. The food you eat ferments in your stomach instead of digesting. This inflames the stomach and causes nausea, vomiting and a terrible headache. Take Chamberlain's Tablets. They will tone up your liver, clean out your stomach and you will soon be as well as ever. They only cost a quarter. Obtainable everywhere. (Adv.)
