HARKENING BACKWARD

The American voter of today is not so glib as he was a generation or a decade ago.

He treats his own judgment above the dicta of leaders or the pledges of platforms.

He looks at the candidate first and his associates afterward.

If the one seems good and the others seem bad, he knows that little of benefit can come to himself by an association of the two.

Spies of rhetoric, inflamed oratory and factional appeals do not move him to vote against his own studied sense of the situation and its enveloping conditions.

He must be shown rather than directed.

Every great political campaign has become a campaign of education in which the mind and not the passions must be addressed.

Mr. Hughes has not for many years been an active figure in politics.

Peculiar conditions made him the nominee of his party.

What his position on the great issues of the day shall be, only time can reveal. What he at present hopes to accomplish if elected is locked up in his own breast.

But what those about him, the men who made him the nominee, propose to do is easily within popular conjecture.

When we see the old guard of the Republican party rallying to him, we know that it's purpose is to secure in exchange for privilege the same old masters who so long maintained it in power for their advantage.

When we see such men as Crane of Massachusetts and Lodge of the same state, Penrose and Oliver of Pennsylvania, Reed Smoot of Utah, Brandegee of Connecticut, Lippitt of Rhode Island, Dupont of Delaware, Gallinger of New Hampshire and Sherman of Illinois, not to mention others of minor importance, we see at the same time the old senatorial cabal at work for self galvanization and recrudescence.

We see the proposed return of privilege to power, of partisanship to perpetuity, of plutocracy to the saddle.

We see a government that is to be run in the interest of capital and an orgy of legislation that bodes ill for the millions.

We see tariff legislation that will put the burden off the shoulders of the former and upon the backs of the latter.

We see the bartering of places and the restoration of the lobby.

We see the European war taken advantage of for political purposes and the hazard of bloody devilry threatening the peace and honor as well as the prosperity of the nation.

We see the Mexican situation held out as a bait to Mexican-American investors in adventurous enterprises in that misery-ridden country, and the latter's destiny imperilled by the jingo cries of those who would gain money profit from its invasion and degradation.

It is the same old crowd—disguise them or their purposes you cannot—and they mean to restore the old order with Hughes, their available means to a deplorable end.

Unless all portents err, the American people know all these things and are prepared to act accordingly.

COUNTY AGRICULTURISTS

On one of the reclamation projects in Idaho, there is a government official in charge who has become famous over the whole western country for the success of his work. No prospective settler ever comes on his project without being given every suggestion and advice as to the disposition of his money. He is told about how much capital will be necessary to carry on farming operations of the different natures. All of the figures of former farmers are laid before him, so that he immediately has the experience of hundreds of those who have made a success before his time and does not have to spend years in securing this information by himself. So says the Livestock Reporter.

This government agriculturist fills the part of a doctor, a lawyer and a minister to the people in his project. It is said of him that he can go in the school room and take the book from the hand of the teacher and carry on the work of the classroom—that he is able to go into the farmer's home and take care of the baby, if necessary, knowing all the simple home remedies which go to keep it happy and well—that he is a judge of good bread; that his expert knowledge was gained at the tables of all of the various housewives under his jurisdiction; that he can diagnose pretty correctly the ills of live stock, and when it comes to the end of the week that he is able to go into the church and talk of brotherly love and kindred subjects. In fact, that the man is the best loved and most sought man in the whole country—that his influence reaches everywhere and that his work is always for better rural conditions. It was said of him that no office in the gift of the people, in his particular section, was beyond him in case he would say the word.

The above merely proves our assertion that a county agriculturist is the most important person in his county, and we are glad to see officials from the agricultural department in Washington give full recognition to the splendid class of work which is being done along this line in this western country. So soon as properly trained men are available, we feel confident that every county in this western country will have a county agriculturist. This is a mite which the county commissioners should take into consideration at the present time and make provision for it in their annual budget.

RAINBOW HUGHES

The mobilization of the army on the Mexican border has had a salutary effect upon the central powers and also upon Mexico. It has shown the world Uncle Sam can suddenly wake up and get a move on him, when necessary. It has also been a good thing for the American people. It has been a valuable lesson in preparedness.

President Wilson has handled the Mexican situation better than Taft, for Taft simply left it where he found it. But President Wilson is pursuing a course which is neither war nor intervention—a course which will eventually solve the hard problem of ending banditry and revolutions and will place the Mexican government on a firm foundation.

Hughes declines against this presidential policy and yet he cannot suggest a better policy. Neither Taft, Roosevelt nor Hughes himself would have left us in any better condition at home or abroad today had he been president—for he must have chosen either war or diplomacy. Wilson's diplomacy is better for the country than Hughes' war could have been. Conditions will continue to improve under Wilson's leadership, as they cannot possibly under any republican president—even Rainbow Hughes—with a democratic congress.

The country is well satisfied with the time-tried and fire-tested policies of Wilson. It will not abandon them for any visionary schemes of rainbow chasers.

RUNNING AMUCK

And now the country is edified by the spectacle of an erstwhile dignified justice of the supreme court casting aside the ermine, the judicial decorum and the sacred guardianship of the law, to enter the ranks of the politician, ward-heeler and mud-slinger.

How edifying, indeed, to see a justice of the highest court in the land, a member of the most august judiciary on earth now become, not a statesman, but a politician and office seeker; who, in his self-seeking public belittles the president and his policies, domestic and foreign, which today, amid a world cataclysm, find this country in peace and prosperity unscathed!

Such is Hughes. Once the soul of dignified honor—now a defamer of the president of his country. How is the mighty fallen! And Hughes is running amuck for votes. Does he smite Woodrow Wilson's structure of statesmanship? He should erect a better one in its place. But Hughes, the politician, has not done this.

HUGHES WANTS WAR

President Wilson has just published Germany's guarantee that there will be no more "Lusitania" horrors. So the diplomacy or "words" of Wilson won a victory for us without recourse to "deeds," or war, for which Teddy and Hughes have been clamoring.

Why then is Hughes shouting for "deeds" not "words"? Does he want war with Germany? If he does he is not fit to be our president; he is not worthy the attention of any self-respecting, patriotic citizen. But it Hughes does not want war with Germany why does he shout for "deeds" not "words"? Oh, just to have something to shout about; just to create some kind of an issue to fight about with the hope of bamboozling the voters into hoisting himself and the "old guard" and "stand pat" clique into power.

Will the fathers and mothers of American boys vote for such a Shylock for president? Not on your life!

CARTOONING PRESIDENT

The president of the United States of America should not be held up to ridicule by the cartoonist. Be the president republican, democrat, prohibitionist or what-not, he, as the representative American and head of a great world-power, should be protected by public sentiment, by national pride and if necessary by law, against insult and in the press. We are made the laughing stock of every petty state, as well as of the leading powers of the earth, by this idiotic and unpatriotic practice of every cheap-John scrawler.

The Americans are cheapened by these unrestricted flings at the chief executive. As a matter of national spirit and public self respect and foreign public opinion and simple decency, we should protest against further tolerance of such cartooning and should demand its discontinuance.

SEEN FROM THE OPTIMIST'S TOWER

The Eureka (Kans) Herald reports that a member of the legislature of that state received the following communication from his wife recently: "Husband, dear husband, come to me now."

I'm sniffing the odor of spring; You've stayed long enough in the capital there.

You're much safer under my wing. The old horse is pawing the stable like mad.

The colt's in a terrible stew. The small brindled heifer has got a white calf.

And the cattle are bawling for you.

"The voice of your Betsy is calling you, dear. It's nearly time to make soap; And some of the women are saying, my love,

I'm giving you most too much rope. They say there is desperate flirting up there.

With widows and maids not a few—I haven't been kissed since the morning you left. But, dearie, how is it with you?"

The richest blessing God ever gave to an unworthy human male animal on earth is a good wife. A recent number of the Albany Daily Democrat contained an article on "Crooks," in which the results of recent investigations of the conditions surrounding the commission of crime were tabulated. This record reveals that——Nine-tenths of criminals are unmarried.

—Only one half of the married tenth had children.

—Most of this tenth were separated from their families.

—As a rule female criminals are unmarried.

The expert conviction expressed is that early marriage is a deterrent from crime.

On Thursday, August 3, seven airships raided the eastern counties of England, dropping 80 bombs, killing 9 horses and injuring three more. After reading of the colossal British blunders at Gallipoli and Kut-el-Amarna we are led to wonder whether the trouble with the raiders was not that they were too far distant to distinguish the length of the animals they were shooting at.

Under our former license law no liquor could be sold to a habitual drunkard, or to a minor. One clause of the proposed "Brewery amendment" to the state constitution reads—"It shall be lawful to manufacture and sell and deliver in this state by the manufacturer to any person or individual * * * such fermented malt liquor containing four per cent or less of alcohol" (beer). This means that if a five year old boy or a confirmed inebriate asks for beer "in the original package" (which means by the bottle), the Brewer's agent can sell it and you can't stop him, provided this measure becomes part of the constitution of Oregon. You can bank on this, if Oregon gets this amendment into its constitution it will be the woaviest old soak in Christendom outside of Bavaria.

Our former license law confined the sale of liquor to the licensed saloon. This remarkable amendment reads—"It shall be lawful to manufacture and sell and deliver in this state." This empowers the Brewery to bring its saloon to your very door. Think of the convenience, mah beloved hearers! When you rise in the morning with a taste in your mouth like a corporation lawyer's conscience, all you have to do is to hail the daily booze delivery wagon, get your bottle, and live happy forever after.

The man who votes for the "Brewery amendment" is about as practical as the Jinks family. Si Strong says: "Them there Jinks folks is the most practicalest cattle ye ever knowed. That there Jene, for instance, he says he'll be vummed of the average modern wumman knows how to buy things, so he's goin to marry one of them thar college girls that's studied a course in Biology. Then his sister Sally. Ye know she was such an excitable gal that she'd allers fly in pieces over nuthin'. Well, she's all fixed up now. She went and married a composer."

A recent number of the Oregon Labor Press contains Rex Lampman's creed, part of which is as follows:

"In the first place—I want to say that I believe—with all my heart—in human nature.

"—And that it's the best thing that we have in the world.

"—And that it's responsible for all human progress.

"—And it's getting better all the time."

We would respectfully refer Mr. Lampman to the fact that General Grant refused to use liquid fire in the Civil war on the score that it was too barbarous for civilized nineteenth century warfare. Yet Kultured Germany adopted its use in the twentieth century, and enlightened France and England followed suit.

We would refer him to the fact that a Germa airship raid made early this year across England from Suffolk to Staffordshire, dropped 392 bombs killing 27 men, 25 women and 15 children, and maiming 45 men, 53 women and 19 children. A retaliatory raid was made by French aeroplanes upon Karlsruhe, Germany, on Corpus Christi day. They dropped 100 bombs and murdered 30 men, 5 women and 75 children, and wounded 48 men, 20 women and 79 children. Not a soldier was killed in either raid—all non-combatants.

We would respectfully refer him to the submarine, which, like the airship, is about as adequate in war as Henry Ford's peace policy is in Belgium, or a single electric fan will be in cooling the atmosphere of the future home of the royal geeks responsible for this scrimmage in Europe. The only thing either machine is good for in war is to butcher innocent women and children and non-combatants. It is to the lasting shame of all non-combatant nations that they do not destroy on sight every armed submarine and battle airship, and hang their crews for pirates besides whom Captain Kidd and Morgan and Bluebeard were cultured gentlemen. Yet all warring nations use them.

It takes the same kind of courage to make an airship raid or to sink an unarmed merchant vessel from a submarine that it does for a full-grown man to kick the stuffing out of a two year old baby. When it comes to a gentlemanly way of disposing of the women and children of an enemy the Comanche and Apache Indians had the modern European skinned a mile. Yet "human nature is getting better!" Bah!

With the baboon the will of the female of the species is sacred. No brute known to nature ever violated the sanctity of the will of the female of its kind. It remains for Mr. Lampman's "human nature," "The best thing we have in the world to-day," to drug its helpless victims into complacency, or to grind their hearts between the millstones of the sweatshop until they must sell their innocence for bread. Human nature, alone, in all God's great laboratory of life, annually sends tens of thousands of heart-broken and helpless and hopeless innocents down by the way of the great red road to hell. Yes—"It's getting better all the time!" Bah!

When did you ever hear of a gorilla filling up on bad booze and going home to batter up his wife or to beat the brains out of his babies? Did you ever hear of a bear breaking all the crockery in the house over the nut of his mate in a fool fit of anger? Ever know a billy goat to cram his hide so full of dope that his brain was as woozy as a hallowe'en nightmare? Or a rattlesnake to smoke "Two fer's" until his breath shamed the open mouth of a city cesspool in August?

"Beastly!" What a slander upon the beast! No beast since the first amoeba began to digest the slime of the tepid ocean at the dawn of time ever did such things. They are all devices of that "Best thing we have in the world, "Human Nature!!!"

Left to itself human nature has always been a muddle of things. But God has placed in the world His own Spirit, and whenever man comes in touch with that Spirit he becomes a new creature. Hence the Optimist will venture to propose a creed of his own, which is as follows:

"I want to say that I believe—with all my heart in the possibilities of human nature when rendered Divine by the touch of God.

"That, left to its own devices it is the most devilishly selfish and sensual thing in the world, but stamped with God's likeness it is the best thing in the whole created universe.

"That God's presence with it and His power in it is responsible for all human progress.

"—And that, only as it catches the vision of its Redeemer does it get better all the time.

"—And the logic of facts, and the facts of history, are with the Optimist, and not with our friend, Lampman.

CANDIDATE IS POPULAR

Albany Attorney Endorsed by Prohibition Workers in State

Mark Wetherford of Albany, democratic candidate for Congress, to succeed W. C. Hawley, has been endorsed by branches of the prohibition party throughout the district and this week his selection as the candidate of that party was filed with the secretary of state. In Oregon City the W. C. T. U. of Clackamas county endorsed the Albany candidate because of the broad and open stand he has taken on the question of the liquor traffic.

Mr. Wetherford is a brilliant young attorney of the Hub city, where he is deservedly popular. He was nominated at the primary election this spring as democratic candidate for Congress and his name will appear on the official ballot as the candidate of that party as well as the candidate of the prohibitionists.

Mr. Wetherford has been prominent in the civic life of his home city and has taken great interest in state and national politics. It is considered that he is thoroughly capable for the duties that would devolve upon him in Congress.

A hatred that will bring such men as Penrose and Roosevelt together in opposition to Mr. Wilson must be stronger than death and more cruel than the grave.

WHY WOMEN WRITE LETTERS

To Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co.

Women who are well often ask "Are the letters which the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. are continually publishing, genuine?" "Are they truthful?" "Why do women write such letters?"

In answer we say that never have we published a fictitious letter or name. Never, knowingly, have we published an untruthful letter, or one without the full and written consent of the woman who wrote it.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such grateful letters to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. is that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and suffering. It has relieved women from some of the worst forms of female ills, from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, nervousness, weakness, stomach troubles and from the blues.

It is impossible for any woman who is well and who has never suffered to realize how these poor, suffering women feel when restored to health; their keen desire to help other women who are suffering as they did.

Getting Your Money Out of The Bank

If the bank rendered no other service to the community than to protect its valuables it would render a useful one; but it would be a mouse-trap proposition, you could only go one way; but the bank makes it easier to get money out than in, and in the outgoing process assumes risks and renders benefits too often lost sight of in the busy whirl of business.

We take many things for granted and live in a matter-of-fact age. We want our morning paper at the breakfast table with never a delay and with little thought of what it costs to collect, transmit, type, print and deliver the news. We want our train on the dot or we get impatient. We want our milk and our wood, blizzard or no blizzard. We likewise expect the bank to do our business smoothly, efficiently, and without thought of the cost or the risks attending.

When your bank hands you a check book, it gives you license to draw as many checks, in as large or as small sums as you wish, with the only provision that you do not overdraw, and promises to honor your checks as presented as long as your balance is sufficient to pay them.

Whether you want to pay your creditor in the next block, or a thousand miles away, the checking privilege of a bank account permits you to make your payment with ease, safety and despatch.

When you mail your check your trouble is over and the bank's has just begun, for the bank warrants to you three things, all for your own protection and at its own risk. It is well to know them.

It guarantees (a) That it will pay only the checks you have signed. If your name is forged and the bank pays the check, it cannot charge the amount to your account; (b) That it will pay only in the sum originally drawn. If some one gets your check and raises the amount, making it apparently a genuine check, the bank can only charge the amount in which you originally drew the check unless it can show you were grossly careless in so drawing that you invited fraud. Therefore be careful to draw your checks properly; (c) To pay to the party to whom you ordered the amount paid and none other. If the check gets into the hands of strangers who forge the indorsement, so that the party to whom you ordered the money paid does not get it, the payment is at its risk, and you are harmless.

All this is ultimately for your good as a depositor. You know that your account cannot be drawn against except on your order. You know that the party you want to receive payment gets it. You get back the most perfect voucher known to the business world. Many a dispute has been settled and loss and law suit avoided by producing bank vouchers that told in no uncertain way that payment had been made according to the intent of the drawer. Therefore for your own good you ought to keep your money in a bank, and draw it out by check.
