GET AFTER THE SPIES

Sworn testimony in a New York court of law shows that the expenses of a great labor meeting at which Mr. Bryan delivered an impassioned speech that we "kept out of war" were paid with German money. Most people will freely admit that Mr. Bryan did not know that he was playing the Germans' game; but all people will recall that he was often warned that, whatever his motive, his action was certainly helpful to the German cause. The German spy system in this country, its ramifications and the acuteness of its instruments have always been a subject of conjecture. We are now learning that they still exist to some extent. The administration would do well to apply some of its energies to ferreting out and destroying these agencies of espionage and propaganda, instead of trying to get penury powers over the honest and patriotic press of the country.

KEEP A FLOCK OF HENS

A small number of chickens can be kept in almost any back yard.

They can be housed at small expense in piano boxes or other large packing cases.

They can be fed to a large extent on table scraps and vegetable waste.

Their eggs should make a substantial addition to the family food supply.

Surplus cockerels from hatchings and old hens will take the place of a considerable quantity of purchased meat.

Separate roosters from hens after the hatching season and produce infertile eggs. Such eggs are much more easily preserved in good condition than fertile eggs.

Preserve surplus fresh eggs in water glass or lime water.

COUNTRY STILL DOPEY

"Gentlemen, it is difficult to make the people of the United States realize that their country is now actively involved in the most terrible and colossal war of all time"—Secretary McAdoo at Chicago, Ill. Naturally it is. Up to last election day they had been stuffed with peace dope and "he kept us out of war" soothing syrup until a small majority of them had sunk into the coma of faith that with Wilson there could be no war. How rudely they had been disillusioned. How difficult it is to shake off the toxics engendered by this false sense of security. What dream is this? A warlike Wilson and a militant McAdoo! "Methought I heard a voice cry 'Sleep no more! McAdoo does murder sleep.'"

GROW VEGETABLES AND FRUITS

Don't let your land loaf. Keep it working all season.

Don't assume that the season is too far advanced to begin garden operations. Some vegetables may be planted at practically any time until past the middle of the summer.

Start new crops between the rows of others that are soon to be removed.

Begin over again in late summer and plant vegetables that mature best in cool weather, such as radishes, lettuce, spinach and kale.

See that your garden toward fall is full of potatoes, beets, turnips, cabbage, and other staple foods that can be stored for the winter.

Grow lima and navy beans for harvest when ripe.

S. L. CASTO TAKES A FLING AT PATRIOTISM OF LOCAL LIVE WIRES

CARUS, May 31.—Editor of the Enterprise—She is certainly a funny old world. Now comes the sedate Live Wires scabbing on the farmers. Not being contented with their efforts in trying to put over a paying trust graft they are going to operate a bannery, and Saturday one of their numbers told a small group of us farmers that we should not plant any more beans. I wonder why. The only reason I can conceive is to protect the price of beans to the Live Wires.

The other day I met Chris on the street and he invited me up to his office to show me how the highway commission were going to eliminate paying royalties. Now if the paving companies and Mr. Benson were so anxious to give up royalties why was not this idea not incorporated in the bill? Mr. Benson should have seen to this when the meeting was held in the Benson hotel last fall. This is simply the first of the last resorts. Am looking any day for the "poor widow with the wash board" scare.

You say the automobilist are willing to pay for it all. Not if Carus precinct is any criterion. Not one automobile owner in the precinct is in favor of the proposition. And they are more than "sore" over the double taxation bill. And no doubt there will be something done at the next meeting of the legislature to repeal this law.

Why are our bond friends so sure that the number of autos will increase so rapidly? I am told by responsible parties that Ford cannot now be gotten at any price. Isn't it possible that other manufacturers may become as patriotic as Ford?

Here's another tidbit. We are told the bond-buyers will not take this auto proposition as good security, and in the same breath we are told it's good business. Then why ask the people to take it. If its good business for bondholders why not for the people? Don't be deceived fellow-farmers, there's a nigger in the woodpile some where.

If we vote this down, thus ridding ourselves of the paving company influence, we will no doubt have presented at our next election a safe and sane "pay as we go" amendment. So let's vote her down.

CENTRAL GRANGE OPPOSES ISSUE OF ROAD BONDS

Central Grange at its last meeting adopted resolutions opposing the $5,000,000 bond issue for road improvement to be voted on Monday. The text of the resolution follows:

Resolved, That Central Grange, No. 276, favors the construction of market roads, where they will be of the greatest benefit to the most people, and, Resolved, That we are opposed to the $5,000,000 bond issue and the expenditure of so much money on roads paralleling railroads.

OREGON

(By Samantha of Clackamas County.)

By the side of a rushing mountain stream
There ripples the song of a bird,
Rising joyous and full and clear,
Yet he carols but one sweet word.
The tune you've heard, and the song
Goes on, "Oregon, dear Oregon!"

His mate perched high on a bending twig,
Peers into the dell below,
Sun-kissed, and fanned by the mountain breeze,
Sweet, sweet, is her twitter and low,
While her love's glad song keeps ringing on,
"Oregon, dear Oregon!"

The murmur of rivers broad and deep,
Shall be lost in the ocean's roar,
But the Oregon birds on their verdant banks
Shall be singing forevermore.
In Willamette Valley they're singing on,
"Oregon, dear Oregon!"

TOO DARN BAD—SPENCE

There was no joy for Charles E. Spence, master of the State Grange, Tuesday, when the result of the $6,000,000 road bond election reached a stage where there was no longer any doubt.

"How is she going?" queried Mr. Spence, over the phone.
He was speedily informed.
"To darn bad!" quoth he, and hung up the phone.

Later Mr. Spence was asked to make a statement, but he politely refused, intimating that he was too hot, so soon after the election.

MILL EMPLOYEES DRAW LOTS FOR GARDEN TRACTS

Drawings were held Friday for the selection of lots for the competitive gardening of the Crown Willamette employs at Willamette Heights tract near Sunset school, West Linn. Twenty-four applications were received for lots, and work of seeding has already begun.

The Crown Willamette Paper company fenced the tract, plowed and harrowed 15 acres and turned the property over to its employees without rental. Prizes, ranging from $25 for first, to $10 for fourth, will be awarded by the company in October or November.

When the crop is harvested, a committee composed of one from the company, one from the men and a third, selected by these two will act as judges of awards.

MOTORISTS NARROWLY ESCAPE DEATH WHEN AUTO BACKS OFF CLIFF

Mr. Riebhoff, a well known farmer of Clackamas county, and a Civil war veteran, whose farm is located near Logan, in company with his wife, had a narrow escape from death while riding in their new automobile on Sunday afternoon.

They were passing along a grade, when the engine died, and the driver becoming confused lost control of the automobile, which backed down the steep roadway over a cliff and landed right side up in a clump of trees.

Below was the Clear creek, logs and rocks, but the aged couple were unharmed, and the driver opened the door of the machine and he and his wife stepped out onto the branches of the trees, and onto safe ground.

Witnesses of the accident were horrified to see the machine backing towards the precipice, but the couple landed in the trees free from harm. As there is an unusual heavy travel along this roadway on Sunday, many machines gathered within a short time ready to give assistance in getting the automobile from the tree tops.

Mr. Riebhoff is 70 years of age, and this was the first time that he had taken the automobile along this road alone.

HOME IS ENTERED AND FURNITURE REMOVED WHILE OWNER IS GONE

Upon returning Saturday from a five months' visit in Washington, Frank Niely of this city, entered his house at 16th and Division streets, only to find that every article of furniture had been removed during his absence, the pictures either taken from the walls or destroyed, his trunks ransacked and removed and his naturalization papers the only article left by the robbers, scattered about on the floor.

Inquiry revealed the fact that several months ago a moving van had appeared at the house and for five hours workmen were busy removing the furniture and hauling it to a local junk and second-hand store, where it was sold.

The merchant who bought the goods has since gone out of business, but the man who sold the goods is known and a warrant for his arrest will be sworn out tomorrow.

AN ADDITION TO OREGON CITY'S FACTORY GROUP

Manufacture of Woolen Goods is Begun in Modern Sanitary Plant of the Oregon City Manufacturing Co.

(By Pearl Gregory Cartledge.)

The spacious new addition to the Oregon City woolen mills, now in operation, gives Oregon City the distinction of being the home of the largest mills for the manufacture of Indian and novelty blankets in America. This is no mere booster statement, but an actual fact.

The new structure might be said to be built of glass, supported by reinforced concrete. It is 100 feet wide and extends from the old building 250 feet along Third street to the river. It is strictly modern throughout, no expense having been spared to make it an ideal factory.

The inadequately lighted and dingy old building, constructed in 1864 when factories were built like fortresses, is being remodeled and repaired for other uses.

The new addition is three stories feet of floor space and gives the mills now approximately 185,000 square feet and basement. It adds 60,000 square feet. This additional room has made it possible to relieve over-crowded departments and to install much new machinery. In the weaving room alone 43 new machines have been added, representing a 50 percent increase. The garment factory has added forty new machines, giving employment to that many additional operators.

On entering the building the writer had visions of the sweatshops of the east, and expected to encounter like conditions here, but instead found the work-rooms to be delightfully cheery, splendidly lighted and ventilated, with windows on either side, some having skylights where the building would permit, making a veritable room of glass.

Rest rooms, overlooking the river, and spacious, sanitary lavatories have been provided for the employees. And as soon as the last machine is moved out of the old weaving room it will be transformed into a cafeteria.

The arrangement of departments in the new building has been well planned. On the ground floor, convenient to transportation facilities, are located the shipping and sales departments, with offices for heads of these departments, and sample rooms for display of the lovely velvet-colored robes, blankets, mackinaws, rugs and the numerous other products of these mills.

On the second floor is the weaving room, with 108 machines. Every fabric and pattern has its own special loom, and yards upon yards of flannel, as blankets of many different kinds, cassimeres and woolen goods as well as manufactured each day.

The top floor houses a garment factory. All sewing machines are in this room and they are of many sorts—machines for hemming and felling; machines with double needles for making double stitching on the edges of mackinaws; machines carrying eight spools for stitching and facing the front panel of shirts all done at one operation; machines with circular work base for felling sleeves; machines for making and cutting button-holes; and one that any domestically inclined woman would like to own, sews buttons on to stay, in five seconds, and when the button is on tight it ties the thread. This garment factory now operates 150 machines and employs 200 operatives.

The offices of the company remain in the old building where carpenters and painters are making a pleasing transformation. The main offices will be commodious, with beamed ceilings finished in Oregon fir.

The government has contracted with the woolen mills for a large percentage of its output and soon blankets from Oregon City will be warming our soldiers on the soil of France.

It seems a fitting tribute to the memory of our primitive predecessors, the Indians, that the choicest heritage they left us—the "Art Craft," exemplified in the weaving of their blankets—should be perpetuated by such a splendid factory, erected on the very rocks where they were accustomed to meet and spread their blankets of gorgeous handwork before the council fire.

The Oregon City woolen mills is one of the few big plants in this country where every detail in the manufacture of woolen goods is completed under one roof. Its products are well known all over this country and in foreign lands and this splendid new factory will make it possible to widen still further the scope of business and bring added prosperity to Oregon City.

ROAD BOND MEASURE LOSES IN COUNTRY; SAVED BY MULTNOMAH

PORTLAND, Ore., June 6.—Practically complete returns from all the counties in the state give a majority of approximately 17,000 in favor of the $6,000,000 road bond issue.

The figures as compiled are yes, 58,618; no, 51,288; majority for, 17,280.

Complete returns from Multnomah county except one small precinct give a majority of 19,033 for the bonds.

The counties giving the heaviest vote against the bonds were Baker, Benton, Clackamas, Lane, Linn, Marion and Union. In Lane the vote was nearly four to one against. In Linn it was three to one.

Although under the provisions of the law Multnomah county is to receive nothing from the state road fund for construction, the passage of the measure is due to the large vote it received in Multnomah county.

LINN COUNTY STRONG FOR BEANS; SHORT ON WHEAT, HOGS, SHEEP

ALBANY, Ore., June 6.—C. J. Hurd and J. W. Lewis, agriculturists engaged in making a crop and livestock survey of Linn county, completed their work and closed the Albany office yesterday. Their findings show the fall wheat acreage is 10 per cent short, and spring wheat acreage 12 per cent greater; the oat acreage, 10 per cent greater; corn, 10 per cent larger; hay, 10 per cent larger, and beans, 1700 per cent greater than last year. There is a 20 per cent increase in the number of cattle this year, and there are 20 per cent less hogs, 13 per cent less sheep and 20 per cent more poultry.

Mr. Hurd, who has spent considerable time in Douglas county, expects a call to the council for defense shortly, and expects that the council will open permanent offices in the various agricultural sections.

The survey also shows a serious shortage of farm and orchard help. Seven hundred more men will be needed during the crop season and, should the military organizations in this section be called out, the shortage will reach more than 1000, he declares.

Our County Roads—Let one of our citizens visit Salem, and he will be more than impressed with the fact that good roads are absolutely a necessity. The streets of that city are thronged daily with well-kept horses, attached to good substantial wagons, belonging to that class of farmers, who are yet to build up the state, and we understand that the same may be said of nearly all towns along the river. The credit of our city, its enterprise and business importance, demand that some action be taken, and that immediately, in regard to the matter of public highways.
