Resume of the News of the Week from All Parts of Oregon

The outlook for Coos county and the Coquille valley in 1917 is certainly very encouraging. In the first place there is employment here today for all our people who are able and willing to work. More lumber is being cut in Coos county now than ever before, and that keeps a small army of men busy. While there are a couple of idle mills on the river, plans are under way to put one of them in operation in the near future. The Johnson mill here has contracts that insure its steady operation throughout the year. The demand for more ships is so insistent that the Kruse & Banks yard at North Bend is turning out one after another, and the prospect that several more yards will begin operations early in the year is excellent.—Coquille Sentinel.

The list of betterment enterprises on the North Bank, Oregon Electric, Oregon Trunk and United Railways lines for the year will total approximately $500,000, according to the incomplete figures submitted to President Gilman's office from the engineering and operating divisions of the lines.

At the close of the annual Lane county budget meeting at Eugene Saturday afternoon members of the county court announced that the 1917 tax levy for Lane county will be 17.5 mills. The tentative levy as estimated in the published budget is 18.75 mills.

Dr. Henry Suzzalo, Seattle, president of the University of Washington, and Dr. Carroll Pearce, Milwaukee, president of the Wisconsin State Normal school, in addressing the sixteenth annual convention of the Oregon State Teachers' association at Portland Thursday, both urged that the teachers broaden their activities. Many teachers are narrow and should know more of the world into which they fling their pupils, argued Dr. Suzzalo. Dr. Pearce said the teachers should become helpful to communities at large as well as to their pupils.

The McMinnville grange at a recent meeting appointed a committee consisting of T. L. Van Orsdol, Owen A. MacGill and I. T. Moore to appear at the county budget meeting and ask for the reinstatement of the county agricultural and school fair. The local grange believes that the fair is a worthy institution which should be continued. At the election of officers Mrs. J. R. Goodby was chosen master and Mrs. Owen A. MacGill was elected secretary of the McMinnville grange.

The wool market in Lake county was opened last week and up to the present time over 50,000 fleeces have been contracted for. The prevailing price being paid is 30 cents, although some have been sold at a slightly lower figure. Up to the present time no price in excess of this has been reported.

Most of the buying has been done by E. H. Clark, who is representative of Elsemann Bros., of Boston, Mass., although a few contracts have been made by Charles Umbach. No sales have been reported by H. Jones, a buyer from Portland.

Because of the poor condition of the present market and the belief that the market cannot grow stronger, because of the effect of prohibition in the countries of the world, Polk county growers are plowing up their hop yards and sowing them to other crops. Abel Uglov has ten or twelve acres which he had in hops the last few years, but which he will put into white beans for next year. J. M. Grant has decided to turn his 12 acres north of the city into prunes. Chet Coad and J. M. Grant have not decided whether to discontinue hops on their 18-acre joint yard or to plant to something else. W. T. Foster is still undecided as to what to plant on the eight acres he has in hops. His land is not suitable for prunes, and L. N. Billeu of Bridgeport is considering putting his 15 acres of hops to something else. It is reported that the unused Hallock yard at Ellendale will be plowed under.

At a recent meeting of the state board of control it developed that Oregon flaxseed has a new market opening before it. A cablegram was received from Agnew and Hamilton, large importers of Belfast, Ireland, offering $14.40 a bag for flaxseed, or $4.11 a bushel, f. o. b. Belfast, a bag representing three and a half bushels. Superintendent Crawford explained that heretofore these importers received all of their flaxseed from Holland, but war conditions have wiped out the Holland production. The board decided to cable the Belfast concern that it would deliver 4000 bushels of flaxseed, as desired, at the rate of $2.75 f. o. b. Salem. This is about 30 cents a pound more than has been procured at Salem.

While the proposed plans will be handicapped to a certain extent by the recently adopted tax limitation amendment, according to A. B. Cordley, director of the Oregon export station, who was at Hood River to confer with the advisory board of the Hood River branch of the station, efforts will be made at the next session of the legislature to have a continuing appropriation of $5000 a year made for the local institution. To supplement this aid from the state, Hood River county will offer to raise for the next three years an annual amount of $2000, to be used in the purchase of a permanent experimental farm and the construction of proper buildings thereon.

Acting upon recommendations made at the last meeting of the Douglas county court, the members of that body have increased the bounty on coyotes from $10 to $20. Reports have been received by the court to the effect that coyotes were becoming very numerous and that the sheep industry of the county is threatened with destruction in the event no action is taken to exterminate the pests. As a result of the increased bounty it is predicted that a number of trappers will be attracted to Douglas county and that the coyotes will eventually be exterminated.

When McMinnville college throws open its doors for the new term following the holidays, students who before the vacation used tobacco in any form will be among those missing when the first roll call of the new year is read in chapel. That is, they will be missing if they haven't discontinued the habit. President Riley two weeks before the college closed for the Christmas recess, placed the lid upon the smoker and chewer.

Eighteen dozen eggs was one of the Christmas presents received by Joseph E. Warner, rural mail carrier on one of the routes running out of Albany. Appreciating his faithful service and especially that he worked Christmas day to deliver their delayed Christmas packages, the people on his route telephoned the word along to give him an "egg shower." With the eggs he was given six chickens, a duck, a pound of sausage and eight bushels of oats.

The directors of the Hubbard Creamery company met at the creamery Thursday, Dec. 21, and as a result of the session every stockholder of the creamery has been wearing a smile that won't come off. A seven per cent dividend was declared.

Sheriff John Orr of Polk county will try the plan of summoning jurors by mail. The summonses for jurors drawn for the January term of the circuit court will be mailed, with a return postal card enclosed for acknowledgment of service. All returns will be checked carefully with the list in the office as fast as they come in.

Miss Leah N. Gruber, deputy county clerk of Yamhill county, who has presided at the marriage license counter at McMinnville for some time, resigned her position a few days ago to take effect Saturday. But before doing so she issued a license to herself and Hugh L. Peoples of McMinnville.

As 1916 draws to a close Washington county can look back upon an uneventful year which, while not witnessing, perhaps, such marked advancement as some which have preceded it, still is conspicuous for an absence of disaster. Being an agricultural county, chief interest centers in soil production, and the year is noticeable from the fact that while early climatic conditions threatened, crops were uniformly good and have mainly sold for prices averaging higher than for many years.—Hillsboro Independent.

The Polk County Observer says the Polk county poultry fanciers have decided not to hold a show this year but are planning for bigger things in the future. It has been decided, however, to call a meeting of poultry fanciers sometime in January at the county court house for the purpose of organizing a Willamette valley association to take in the counties of Polk, Yamhill, Marion, Linn and Washington, and have one big show annually instead of a number of small ones.

February 19 to 24 will be merchants' week in Portland. During the first three days will be held the eleventh annual convention of the Oregon Retail Merchants' association which, aside from snappy business meetings and competitive talks on business conditions by merchants and lady visitors, will include original entertainments, sight-seeing tours, theatre parties, etc., to be provided by the convention entertainment committee.

Miss Adah Mass, who completed her studies at the Monmouth Normal school this term, was selected as a teacher in the Eastham grade school by the Oregon City school board. Miss Mass will take the place of Miss Ethel Risley, resigned. She formerly taught at Barlow, but for the past few months has been at Monmouth completing her studies. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Mass of this city.

FUSSY AUNT SALLY.

She is One of Those Who Always Find a Task Undone.

Our Aunt Sally always has one or two more things to do at night before she can go to bed. We were at her home a few weeks ago, and all of us sat up until late. At about 11 o'clock Uncle Buckram gave a yawn, and in thirty minutes everybody was under the cover listening to the rain—everybody except Aunt Sally. She decided that while everything was quiet she would sew the buttons on the new trousers she was making for Buckram. When this was finished she started to bed, but she remembered that she hadn't set her yeast. She went back into the kitchen and worked for about twenty minutes, and then it seemed that she was through with everything for the night.

We were almost asleep when she brought in another quilt. She said it might turn cold during the night and that we could pull it up if we needed it. She went back to her room and stood perfectly still for a few seconds. Evidently she was trying to think of something else to do before going to bed, and she thought of it. She decided she had best sprinkle down her clothes so they would iron better next day. When this was finished she folded the rough dried pieces and put them away.

At last the house was dark. The rain was pouring down, and we turned over for a good sleep. After we turned we were facing the barn, and we saw Aunt Sally out there with a lamp. She managed to keep the lamp dry, but in a few minutes it went out. A little later we heard her enter the house, and while feeling for a place to set the lamp she said: "I declare that fool hen hasn't any sense. I put her up in a dry place and she wouldn't stay there. She seems determined to drown, and I ought to let her do it, but I guess I'd better go back and see about her."—Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

VISITORS TO NEW YORK.

They Crowd the Natives Off Broadway and Into the Side Streets.

It has often been remarked by visitors from Denver and other scientific investigators that New York's Broadway is apparently patronized by people from all over the world except the native residents of New York. And it is probably true that Seattle knows its way about the Rialto at least as well as does East Seventy-second street, and the cabarets along the great white way see more money from Des Moines than from Amsterdam avenue.

The fact of the matter is that the out of town visitor, descending upon the metropolis trained to the minute, with the express intention and determination of taking in Broadway, succeeds largely in crowding the native off the walk. Hence it has come about that other New York streets which never attain more than a local fame have become pleasure grounds for the real New Yorker, who leaves the streets and the restaurants of world reputation to the hordes of the invader. Such a street, for instance, is One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street, often called by its frequenters the "uptown Broadway." One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street lies in the apartment house section, about in the middle of the long, narrow city that is modern New York. From here to the Battery is a long ride on the express trains, and from here to the limits of New York, up beyond the Bronx, is a longer ride by local. The dweller in this section rarely takes either of these rides. He goes down to the office in the morning and in the evening returns to his own little side street. If he craves amusement he strolls down One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street.—New York Letter in Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Large Power Easily Controlled.
In some cases a 1,000 ton or 1,500 ton press may be controlled by one finger upon the clutch lever, so that the ram will rise one-eighth of an inch or so at a time. More often, however, a press is set so that the ram will always stop at the top of its stroke, and the control of this condition is usually made by a foot treadle, although sometimes with a handle also or with a handle alone. Generally such presses are arranged for continuous running. This is often practicable with long, slow strokes.—Overlin Smith in Engineering Magazine.

A Common Cause of Failure.
"What happened to Flivver? He was always full of ambition and just about to accomplish great things, but somehow he has failed to achieve anything in particular."
"Oh, he hitched his wagon to a star and forgot to fasten the rear end gate."—Kansas City Star.

All Depends.
"What shall I charge for fixing up whiskers?"
"All depends," answered the boss barber. "Some I give a bit of a clip for nothing. Others you want to charge the same rates a laundry gets for lace curtains."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Why It Worried Him.
"What are you looking so glum about, old man?"
"Somebody stole Dawson's umbrella."
"But why should that worry you?"
"It was stolen from me."

No Strange Experiments.
"Did you have a homily when your minister came to dinner, Mrs. Jims?"
"Dear me, no, men. I don't never try them strange dishes."—Baltimore American.

WEST TRIUMPHANT

State U. Team Smothers Hopes of Pennsylvania Football Team

Oregon returns from the fray triumphant. And this time the victory is notable from the fact that the west and its young men have proved superior in skill and in power to the vaunted athletes of the east. The football eleven of the University of Oregon wallowed the much praised and justly famous team of the University of Pennsylvania at Pasadena, Cal., on Monday by a score of 14 to 0.

While the entire coast takes a just and pardonable pride in the athletic supremacy of the state university team, Clackamas county is bearing a larger burden of that pride than most any other section. The game Monday was featured by the playing of several prominent collegiate athletes, but none showed more brilliantly through consistent, brainy playing than did Risley, center of the Oregon team and a son of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Risley of Milwaukie, and Bartlett, right tackle, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Bartlett of Estacada.

Risley is given great credit for blocking a kick from the Pennsylvania line at a crucial point in the game. His playing was of the highest order throughout the contest. Of the playing of Bartlett, Roscoe Fawcett of the Oregonian, who watched the game, says:

"Shy Huntington and Bartlett were the real stars of the day in our opinion. Crane, a Tacoma boy, subbing at end for Penn, was supposed to handle Bartlett on offense, but Crane might just as well have tried his hand on a bull bison. Bartlett ran roughshod over him and broke up play after play for losses. Snyder and Risley also maneuvered at top speed. Risley had a tough customer to handle at center in Lud Wray."

The university's victory is perhaps the most notable athletic entry in the history of the west. It shows the young men of the Pacific coast to be not only equal, but superior to the brawny athletes of the east, for the Penn team was reputed to be the east's premier product this year.

HARRINGTON RETIRES

Popular Tax Collecting Deputy Accepts Traveling Salesman Position

Deputy Sheriff George Harrington, brother of County Clerk Iva Harrington and in charge of county tax collecting under Sheriff W. J. Wilson, has resigned that position to accept a place as traveling salesman for the Dupont Powder company. Mr. Harrington has already taken up his new duties.

Before taking the deputyship under Sheriff Wilson, Mr. Harrington had been travelling for a powder company. With the new company he will cover southern Oregon territory and parts of Washington, probably making his headquarters in Eugene.

I. D. Taylor, well-known resident of Oregon City and a prominent lodge member has been selected to succeed Mr. Harrington. The same force is employed in the office aside from the chief.

Worth Attention of Women

When you feel too tired to work, when dark puffs appear under your eyes, when you wake up weary, with backache or pains in sides and loins, when muscles and bones ache, when you suffer rheumatic twinges, when lumbago puts you down, then you know the kidneys are weakened or disordered. Mrs. T. J. Bucknell, Route 1, Hardy, Neb., writes: "I am recovering from an attack of lumbago, by the aid of Foley Kidney Pills."
