

LANE DID BIDDING

Believes State's Sentiment Justified His Vote on Resolution

Senator Harry Lane of Oregon voted Wednesday night against the passage of the war resolution when the measure came up at Washington. He made no speech in the senate, though present throughout the day, and up to the time the result of the vote was announced. Later, at his office, he made the following statement of his reasons for voting as he did: "I obeyed the instructions of an enormous majority of the people who have been writing me from Oregon. Their prayer was for peace. I have had hundreds of such letters. And I firmly believe the people of this country, and of Oregon—I mean the rank and file—if their views could be ascertained, would not be for war. I would have favored a national referendum that the opinion of all the people might have been ascertained, and feel confident that such a referendum would have shown an overwhelming majority against war. My vote, I may add, represented my honest conviction, and I take the responsibility for it."

"We are to fight for the freedom of the seas. I do not see how we can in fairness go in with clean hands if we do not demand freedom of all the seas, making no distinction between the powers which have been our friends. Until they all grant this privilege I do not see how we could jump on one and not on another."

"Furthermore, it seems to me there was a strong effort being made on the part of pretty heavy interests to crowd the people of the nation into war at this time—a critical time because Russia is just now becoming disrupted. I am afraid that we may be placed in a position where we may have to take her place in the European conflict. Russia may be on the eve of an agreement with Germany, and if so, we will find ourselves in a most serious predicament."

"We find ourselves now in a position where England has just made a call upon the United States—made a demand that America now step in and use all her means, all her men and all her resources to enter into this war. This is asking a good deal of a new ally. England is not sending any of her warships to this country to convoy or protect commerce between this country and that, and it looks to me as though probably we would be placed in the position where we would have to do the torpedo hunting and submarine chasing and assume all the risk without any promise of help whatever. We are bringing the goat."

"We are not acting in a spirit which will lead to general good will and good feeling. Of course, the country has had many insults placed upon it, but we have had insults from others. We have had it from Mexico time and time again."

"Those who led the fight for the passage of this resolution bore down on the point that our quarrel is not with the German people, but with the German government, yet, by our action we are declaring war on those same German people, for whom we profess the friendliest of feelings."

"Through the day I have talked with many members of the house, who have been crowding the senate chamber, and from those talks I feel safe in predicting that if a secret ballot could be taken in the house on the resolution passed in the senate tonight it would be beaten two to one. But the house members are afraid of the smashing they would get from the press. Furthermore, I say that if this resolution could have been voted on at a secret ballot in executive session of the senate, it would have passed by a very small majority."

CAPTAIN ANSWERS THE LAST COMMAND

of one of the early day lines on the Willamette.

And then came the Civil war! Another dramatic feature of the life of Captain Apperson. The north called this southern born youth to the colors as a member of the 1st Oregon cavalry. He gained promotion from the ranks rapidly and before he was mustered out of the service was a captain. He also became a captain during the steamboat days. The cavalry in which John Apperson was enlisted was a home guard, but it gave to the pioneer youth the brand of the soldier—the broad shoulders, the clear eye, the quick thinking capacity that stood him in good stead in later years.

Twice did the people of Oregon send Captain Apperson to the state legislature. They also sent him on a futile mission to the republican convention of 1884, when he cast a vote and the energy of his labor in behalf of James G. Blaine. Once the hardy citizen was elected sheriff of Clackamas county, and for four years he was registrar of the land office in this city. Twenty votes were cast for Captain Apperson in the convention which nominated Moody for governor.

And other honors were heaped upon Clackamas county's sterling citizen during the fruitful years of his life. He was one of the first regents of the Oregon Agricultural college and held that position until the day of his death, always a leader—a pioneer—in educational work. He was a president of the Oregon Pioneer society and of the State Agricultural society, in addition to holding high offices in the Masonic, Odd Fellows and Elks lodges.

Captain Apperson's life enriched the history of Oregon. In that respect there have been few citizens his superior in this county, and many stories of his manly worth are on the tongues of hundreds of Oregonians as he is laid to his final rest.

Today a mound in the Masonic plot of Mountain View cemetery was moulded over the sleeping body by the loving hands of his lodge brothers. And beneath the sod that covers Captain John T. Apperson there lies but one regret. That is a regret that such a mound as now covers the son could not have been built over the father, who gave his life in the search for the land of hope, and whose burial place on the plains of Wyoming is lost under the same sands of time that counted the score of the Oregon pioneer of '47 who rests today at Mountain View, his wish to find the grave of his father resting with him—a task that the least wanted Captain Apperson to do—a task that must forever be undone.

DECLARATION OF WAR FOR NATION

The objects of the United States in entering the war, the president said, are to vindicate the principles of peace and justice against "selfish and autocratic power." Without selfish ends, for conquest, or dominion, seeking no indemnities or material compensations for the sacrifices it shall make, the United States must enter the war, he said, to make the world safe for democracy, as only one of the champions of the rights of mankind, and would be satisfied when those rights were as secure as the faith and freedom of nations could make them.

The president's address was sent in full to Germany by a German official news agency for publication in that country. The text also went to England, and a summary of its contents was sent around the world to other nations.

Referring only briefly to the long diplomatic correspondence with Germany in his effort to bring her back to the bounds of the laws of humanity and nations, the president launched into his denunciation of the course of the German government, which, he declared, had forced the United States to become a belligerent.

"The wrongs against which we now arm ourselves," he said, "are no common wrongs. They cut to the very roots of human life."

Second Papers Asked

Gebhard Etnier, of this city, Thursday filed application for final citizenship papers and his name has been added to a long list of those who will be heard on June 11. Etnier is a native of Austria, 56 years old, and came to America from France on April 6, 1891.

To collect on the unpaid balance of a bill for merchandise, the Portland Flouring Mills company Thursday filed a suit against Ferris Mayfield. The amount sought is $105.

Figure Skating.

To learn figure skating one must devote himself to figure skating. There is a special figure skate, curved on the bottom so as to make curves and circles entirely possible. It is round toed, and on this forward curl are deep corrugations for toe spins.

"One of the principal features of figure skating," said an expert, "is the curve. To be able to control the circles means that one has gained the power to maintain the body in graceful attitudes. Every one should skate large figures first."

Aeroplane Bombs.

One of the officers of the Mexican National Aviation corps, which is in the charge of Colonel Alberto Salinas, has invented an apparatus for the discharge of bombs from an aeroplane by which three can be set loose at once in divergent directions, thereby greatly increasing the efficacy of this method of warfare.

Don't Believe It.

"Talk about fishing," said Harvey Titus, who was just getting under way. "What would you do if you found on your hook a 750 pound horse mackerel?"

"Do?" said the listener. "I'd get up, take a drink of water and lie on my right side for awhile."—New York Telegram.

COURT CONSIDERS ROADS

Eagle Creek Taxpayers Ask That Report of Viewers be Set Aside

In the matter of the Holman road, proposed for location in the Eagle Creek country, the county court yesterday was asked by a large delegation of taxpayers in that district to set aside the report of the board of viewers and locate the road. The court has taken no definite action because of the fact that it does not believe itself constituted with authority to ignore the report.

A petition asking for the location of a county road on the east side of Gladstone Chautauqua park to take the place of the road on the west side of the park and make a link in the gradeless road to Portland, was referred to a board of viewers by the court yesterday.

A New Side Line

The American farmer and his thirty son contribute liberally to the $60,000,000 worth of North American furs marketed in England during a normal year. None know better than they that the available supply of fur-bearing animals is decreasing rapidly.

Many farmers have gone into the production of fur-bearing animals as a side line. They have found that many animals can be domesticated and that their pelts will sell at remunerative prices. Among those now being grown domestically are fox, otter, skunk, mink, raccoon, fisher and beaver.

Each kind of animal requires a specific environment, but the range is sufficiently wide to make it possible to conduct fur-farming of some kind in almost any locality. The Northern States, however, usually produce the best pelts, for which the highest prices are paid.

To a considerable extent fur-bearing animals consume products of the farm, such as refuse meat, fruit, vegetables, and table scraps, and can be given much the same diet as the farm dog or cat. Thus not infrequently domesticated fur-bearing animals grow to maturity without much actual cash outlay.

The prices paid in recent years for good, prime pelts certainly are encouraging to the industry. Prime skunk skins in New York City during the last decade have commanded on an average of $3 apiece; No. 1 Northern mink close to $7; beaver $8. For breeding purposes the live animals usually sell at a substantial premium over the value of their pelts.

Much advancement has been made by the breeders of farm live stock by organization, and it is only reasonable to expect like benefits to accrue to breeders of fur-bearing animals.

Had Trouble Four or Five Years

No one appreciates good health like those who are ill. W. J. Furry, R. F. D. 2, Salem, Mo., writes: "I have been bothered with bladder trouble four or five years. It gave me a great deal of pain. I took different medicines, but nothing did me any good until I got Foley Kidney Pills." Many persons suffer from kidney and bladder trouble when they can be relieved. Backache, dizziness, rheumatic pains, stiff or sore joints and other symptoms yield to Foley Kidney Pills.—Jones Drug Co.

O. A. C. Seniors Here

Ten young men, senior students at the Oregon Agricultural college, were in Oregon City today to attend the funeral of Captain J. T. Apperson, four many years a member of the board of regents of the college. The young men, uniformed and equipped in military style, presented a fine appearance. A luncheon was served for them at the noon hour in the Commercial club rooms by the O. A. C. alumni in Oregon City. President W. J. Kerr of the college was in the city later and attended the funeral, but he was unable to be present at the luncheon. A beautiful tribute of respect was paid to the memory of Captain Apperson by Joseph E. Hedges, a member of the board of higher curricula, who attended the luncheon.

It is War

"I have been bitterly opposed to war. I have used my influence to that end. Even when I knew the people were calling for war and a majority of congress overwhelmingly was for it, I sought out the president and begged him to remain longer, if possible, under the policy of armed neutrality as an expedient for peace. But the president had information in his hands which made it impossible."

"The country is ready and congress is ready. While the vote has not been recorded, the decision has been made. It is war."

"I cannot vote against war without doing a vain and foolish thing. It would only serve to weaken my country in the face of the enemy and the world when war is inevitable. I am ready now to take my place with those who will back up the president for the honor and protection of the nation."—Senator Hitchcock.

Notice of Final Settlement

In the Matter of the Estate of Julius Mellike, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has filed her final report as Executrix of the above estate, and the court has appointed May 14th, 1917, at the hour of 10 o'clock a. m., as a day and time for the hearing of objections to said report, and for the settlement of said estate.

Glad to Learn of It

April's changeable weather causes colds that lead to expensive doctor bills—bills that could be avoided if the cold were checked in time. C. Smith, 1421 12th St., Augusta, Ga., writes: "I got one 25c bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar and my cough and cold is about well. I was glad to learn of a great medicine like that." THE HISTORIC SCHOENBRUNN.

Austria's Royal Palace the Scene of Many Dramatic Events.

Less than three miles southwest of the Ringstrasse, which surrounds the inner city of Vienna, is the impressive pile of masonry known as Schoenbrunn, where some of the most dramatic episodes in the history of Austria have been staged and where Emperor Francis Joseph's death brought to a close a phenomenal reign of sixty-eight years. A National Geographic society bulletin gives the following description of the royal summer residence and some of the episodes which have had a regal setting there:

"With its more than 1,400 rooms Schoenbrunn is a splendid example of imperial residence modeled on the standard of the great palace at Versailles. One of the striking peculiarities of this home of Austria's royal family, however, is that instead of crowning an eminence it is built on low ground, while the magnificent park of nearly 500 acres occupies the high ground, rising gradually from the palace doors until it terminates on a hill adorned with a beautiful colonnade called the Gloriette."

"Three important events of the Napoleonic era were staged in the imperial apartments of Schoenbrunn. The first was the treaty of 1805, signed here by Napoleon and Haugwitz, the latter acting for the king of Prussia. By this document Napoleon inflicted a humiliating diplomatic defeat on the Prussian statesman, who agreed to surrender Cleves, Aulbach and Neuchatel to France in exchange for Hanover, whereas he had come to see the emperor for the express purpose of delivering an ultimatum demanding the return of Hanover. In the same year (Dec. 27) Napoleon issued the proclamation of Schoenbrunn, in which the Bourbon dynasty in Naples was declared at an end."

"Four years after Haugwitz's humiliation a second treaty of Schoenbrunn was signed, the principals this time being Napoleon and Francis I., the Austrian emperor, who less than a year later was to become the father-in-law of the 'upstart Corsican.'"

"On this occasion the emperor of the French again drove a hard bargain, but this time his antagonist had no alternative, for the Austrian army had just sustained the crushing defeat at Wagram. The vanquished nation was forced to give up Salzburg, a portion of upper Austria and extensive territory in Carinthia, Carniola, Croatia and along the Adriatic seaboard. In addition, Francis was compelled to relinquish that share of the booty which had fallen to Austria in the third dismemberment of Poland (1795)."

"One of the most pathetic scenes ever witnessed within the walls of this palace erected by Maria Theresa was the final hour in the life of the unhappy Duke de Reichstadt, son of Napoleon and the Austrian archduchess Marie Louise. 'The Eagle,' as he was called, was just twenty-one when he died of tuberculosis in a room once occupied by his illustrious father on one of the occasions when he held Schoenbrunn as his military headquarters. A perhaps too highly colored and historically warped but superbly appealing picture of this deathbed has been given to the world by the distinguished poet-playwright of France, Edmond Rostand, in his widely known drama of 'L'Aiglon.'"

"One of the novel features of Schoenbrunn is its amazing number of kitchens—139."

PATRIOTISM RUNS HIGH

Schools Have Patriotic Week Exercises. Churches Show Spirit

Patriotism runs high in Oregon City and plans for the maintenance of the fine spirit involve schools and churches. At the Eastham and Barclay schools Friday the spirit of the day was manifested in fine programs. The school rooms were decorated in the national colors and patriotic programs were rendered. "The Flag" was the subject of a stirring talk given at both schools by Superintendent F. J. Tooez. Following the programs the schools of the city closed for Easter week.

Patriotic services were held in practically all the churches of the city. On Sunday evening the Rev. E. E. Gilbert of the Methodist church, spoke on "Makers of America," at a special service for the G. A. R., the Women's Relief corps and the Girls' Honor guard, each of which attended en masse. A patriotic song service, including solos by Harold Swafford and Mrs. Carl Moore, was held under the direction of Mrs. Nieta Barlow Lawrence.

HILL APPEAL DISMISSED

Judge Campbell Signs Decrees in Divorce Court

Notice was received by Judge Campbell on Saturday that the appealed divorce suit of Eleanor K. Hill against James M. Hill had been dismissed by the supreme court. The case was tried in Judge Campbell's court on June 7, 1915, and a decree entered for Mrs. Hill. Her husband appealed on the strength of denials of Mrs. Hill's allegations. The couple was married here on March 17, 1912, and the divorce complaint was filed on January 18, 1915. It was based on charges of desertion.

Judge Campbell on Saturday granted default divorce decrees to Bertha Brown vs. William Brown and Elvora Blosser vs. Otto E. Blosser. In the latter case Mrs. Blosser gets custody of a minor child.

INJUNCTION ASKED

Friars' Club May be Closed as Result of Trouble There

A perpetual injunction against the operation of the Friars' club at Milwaukie is asked in a complaint filed Friday against Martin Denny and Larry Sullivan, proprietors of the place, by District Attorney Gilbert L. Hedges in the name of the state of Oregon. The complaint charges that liquors have been sold at the club in defiance of the law and that it is, therefore, a public nuisance. Attorneys' fees and costs of the action are asked.

During the time the suit is pending an injunction order signed Friday by Judge Campbell will prevent the sale of liquor. The judge's order is merely of a restraining nature and does not mean that the Friars' club will be closed pending the hearing.

Petition in Probate

A petition for letters of administration in the estate of Amanda Maroney, who died at her home in Sandy on March 30, was filed in the county court here Tuesday by George C. Maroney. The estate comprises real and personal property to the value of $700, and there are 12 heirs.

AUTO PAYS THE BILL

Misunderstanding Injures Purpose of Bonds. No Increased Tax

"That $6,000,000 is a large sum to take away from the taxpayers," is an assertion made a good deal in commenting upon the pending road bond issue. The assertion is based upon a prevalent misunderstanding of what the act involves.

Nothing in the act requires any increase of taxation in order to get the $6,000,000. It is the automobile which pays the money. Auto license fees have been doubled, and with a normal increase in the number of machines owned in Oregon, the fees will more than cover the interest and the sinking fund payments to retire the entire bond issue. Should there be no increase at all in the number of autos used, it would still be unnecessary to raise taxes, for the extra money needed would come from the present quarter-mile road tax. Supporters of the road bonding measure will do well to correct the misunderstanding.

M. W. A. Camp Meets

The Clackamas county camp of the Modern Woodmen of America met here yesterday to elect a delegate to the state convention to be held at La Grande on May 2. G. F. Johnson acted as chairman of the meeting and Ray Welsh as secretary. The vote resulted in the election of George C. Dallas of Damascus to represent this county at La Grande. Mr. Johnson has been a delegate each recent year, but this year asked that the duty be turned over to another lodge-man.

Suit on Promissory Note

The Northwestern Trust Co., in a complaint filed yesterday asked a judgment from L. and I. Norma Ritzer on a promissory note for $400, dated at Boring on October 24, 1910, and bearing eight per cent interest. The note is secured by a property mortgage. Any title Allen & Lewis of Portland may have to the property is asked to be quieted in the complaint.

Canby Bank Wins

A judgment in the case of the Canby State bank versus Lucy M. Goshorn, administratrix of the estate of Elmer E. Goshorn, and heirs of the estate was granted by Judge Campbell yesterday. The bank will recover $1100 with $75 attorney fees from the estate and the judgment will be considered first lien upon 40 acres of land in this county.

M. E. Conference at Sandy

The second quarterly conference of the M. E. church of the Sandy charge was held at Sandy Thursday with a large attendance. Rev. T. B. Ford, district superintendent, preached and in the afternoon the business meeting of the conference was held, when reports from Sandy, Dover, Cherryville, Kelso and Firwood were read.

A Call to the Colors

The Commercial club is asked to participate in a patriotic street demonstration and public meeting this evening. Members are to assemble at Fifth and Main for the parade, which starts at 7:30. The meeting at Busch's hall will follow the parade. The Club is to march in a body.
