

THE PRESIDENT'S FLAG DAY ADDRESS

President Wilson delivered the following address at the Flag Day exercises in Washington June 14.

My Fellow Citizens: We meet to celebrate Flag Day because this flag which we honor and under which we serve is the emblem of our unity, our power, our thought and purpose as a Nation. It has no other character than that which we give it from generation to generation. The choices are ours. It floats in majestic silence above the hosts that execute those choices, whether in peace or in war. And yet, though silent, it speaks to us—speaks to us of the past, of the men and women who went before us and of the records they wrote upon it. We celebrate the day of its birth; and from its birth until now it has witnessed a great history, has floated on high the symbol of great events, of a great plan of life worked out by a great people. We are about to carry it into battle, to lift it where it will draw the fire of our enemies. We are about to bid thousands, hundreds of thousands, it may be millions, of our men, the young, the strong, the capable men of the Nation, to go forth and die beneath it on fields of blood far away—for what? For some unaccustomed thing? For something for which it has never sought the fire before? American armies were never before sent across the seas. Why are they sent now? For some new purpose, for which this great flag has never been carried before, or for some old, familiar, heroic purpose for which it has seen men, its own men, die on every battle field upon which Americans have borne arms since the Revolution?

These are questions which must be answered. We are Americans. We in our turn serve America, and can serve her with no private purpose. We must use her flag as she has always used it. We are accountable at the bar of history and must plead in utter frankness what purpose it is we seek to serve.

It is plain enough how we were forced into the war. The extraordinary insults and aggressions of the Imperial German Government left us no self-respecting choice but to take up arms in defense of our rights as a free people and of our honor as a sovereign government. The military masters of Germany denied us the right to be neutral. They filled our unsuspecting communities with vicious spies and conspirators and sought to corrupt the opinion of our people in their own behalf. When they found that they could not do that, their agents diligently spread sedition amongst us and sought to draw our own citizens from their allegiance—and some of those agents were men connected with the official embassy of the German government itself here in our own capital. They sought by violence to destroy our industries and arrest our commerce. They tried to incite Mexico to take up arms against us and to draw Japan into a hostile alliance with her—and that, not by indirection, but by direct suggestion from the foreign office in Berlin. They impudently denied us the use of the high seas and repeatedly executed their threat that they would send to their death any of our people who ventured to approach the coasts of Europe. And many of our own people were corrupted. Men began to look upon their own neighbors with suspicion and to wonder in their hot resentment and surprise whether there was any community in which hostile intrigue did not lurk. What great nation in such circumstances would not have taken up arms? Much as we had desired peace, it was denied us, and not of our own choice. This flag under which we serve would have been dishonored had we withheld our hand.

But that is only part of the story. We know now as clearly as we knew before we were ourselves engaged that we are not the enemies of the German people and that they are not our enemies. They did not originate or desire this hideous war or wish that we should be drawn into it; and we are vaguely conscious that we are fighting their cause, as they will some day see it, as well as our own. They are themselves in the grip of the same sinister power that has now at last stretched its talons out and drawn blood from us. The whole world is at war because the whole world is sick of that power and is trying out the great battle which shall determine whether it is to be brought under its mastery or fling itself free.

The war was begun by the military masters of Germany, who proved to be also the masters of Austria-Hungary. These men have never regarded nations as peoples, men, women and children of like blood and frame as themselves, for whom governments existed and in whom governments had their life. They have regarded them merely as serviceable organizations which they could by force or intrigue bend or corrupt to their own purpose. They have regarded the smaller states, in particular, and the peoples who could be overwhelmed by force, as their natural tools and instruments of domination. Their purpose has long been avowed.

The statesmen of other nations, to whom that purpose was incredible, paid little attention; regarded what German professors expounded in their classrooms and German writers set forth to the world as the goal of German policy as rather the dream of minds detached from practical affairs, as preposterous private conceptions of German destiny, than as actual plans of responsible rulers; but the rulers of Germany themselves knew all the while what concrete plans, what well-advanced intrigues lay back of what the professors and the writers were saying, and were glad to go forward unmolested, filling the thrones of Balkan states with German princes, putting German officers at the service of Turkey to drill her armies and make interest with her government, developing plans of sedition and rebellion in India and Egypt, setting their fires in Persia. The demands made by Austria upon Serbia were a mere single step in a plan which compassed Europe and Asia, from Berlin to Bagdad. They hoped those demands might not arouse Europe, but they meant to press them whether they did or not, for they thought themselves ready for the final issue of arms.

Their plan was to throw a broad belt of German military power and political control across the very center of Europe and beyond the Mediterranean into the heart of Asia; and Austria-Hungary was to be as much their tool and pawn as Serbia or Bulgaria or Turkey or the ponderous states of the East. Austria-Hungary, indeed, was to become part of the central German empire, absorbed and dominated by the same forces and influences that had originally cemented the German states themselves. The dream had its heart at Berlin. It could have had a heart nowhere else. It rejected the idea of solidarity of race entirely. The choice of peoples played no part in it at all. It contemplated binding together racial and political units which could be kept together only by force—Czechs, Magyars, Croats, Serbs, Roumanians, Turks, Armenians—the proud states of Bohemia and Hungary, the stout little commonwealths of the Balkans, the indomitable Turks, the subtle peoples of the East. These peoples did not wish to be united. They ardently desired to direct their own affairs, would be satisfied only by undisputed independence. They could be kept quiet only by the presence or the constant threat of armed men. They would live under a common power only by sheer compulsion and await the day of revolution. But the German military statesmen had reckoned with all that and were ready to deal with it in their own way.

And they have actually carried the greater part of that amazing plan into execution! Look how things stand. Austria is at their mercy. It has acted, not upon the choice of its own people, but at Berlin's dictation ever since the war began. Its people now desire peace, but can not have it until leave is granted from Berlin. The so-called Central Powers are in fact but a single power. Serbia is at its mercy, should its hands be but for a moment freed. Bulgaria has consented to its will, and Roumania is overrun. The Turkish armies, which Germans trained, are serving Germany, certainly not themselves, and the guns of German warships lying in the harbor at Constantinople remind Turkish statesmen every day that they have no choice but to take their orders from Berlin. From Hamburg to the Persian Gulf the net is spread.

It is not easy to understand the eagerness for peace that has been manifested from Berlin ever since the snare was set and sprung? Peace peace, peace has been the talk of her foreign office for now a year and more; not peace upon her own initiative, but upon the initiative of the nations over which she now deems herself to hold the advantage. A little of the talk has been public, but most of it has been private. Through all sorts of channels it has come to me, and in all sorts of guises, but never with the terms disclosed which the German government would be willing to accept. That government has other valuable pawns in its hands besides those I have mentioned. It still holds a valuable part of France, though with slowly relaxing grasp, and practically the whole of Belgium. Its armies press close upon Russia and overrun Poland at their will. It can not go farther; it dare not go back. It wishes to close its bargain before it is too late and it has little left to offer for the pound of flesh it will demand.

The military masters under whom Germany is bleeding see very clearly to what point fate has brought them. If they fall back an inch, their power both abroad and at home will fall to pieces like a house of cards. It is their power at home they are thinking about now more than their power abroad. It is that power which is trembling under their very feet; and deep fear has entered their hearts. They have but one chance to perpetuate their military power or even their controlling political influence. If they can secure peace now, with the immense advantages still in their hands which they have up to this point apparently gained, they will have justified themselves before the German people; they will have gained by force what they promised to gain by it—an immense expansion of German power, an immense enlargement of German industrial and commercial opportunities. Their prestige will be secure, and with their prestige their political power. If they fail, their people will thrust them aside; a government accountable to the people themselves will be set up in Germany as it has been in England, in the United States, in France, and in all the great countries of the modern time except Germany. If they succeed they are safe, and Germany and the world are undone; if they fail, Germany is saved and the world will be at peace. If they succeed, America will fall within the menace. We and all the rest of the world must remain armed, as they will remain, and must make ready for the next step in their aggression; if they fail, the world may unite for peace, and Germany may be of the union.

Do you not now understand the new intrigue, the intrigue for peace, and why the masters of Germany do not hesitate to use any agency that promises to effect their purpose, the deceit of the nations? Their present particular aim is to deceive all those who throughout the world stand for the rights of peoples and the self-government of nations; for they see what immense strength the forces of justice and liberalism are gathering out of this war. They are employing liberals in their enterprise. They are using men, in Germany and without, as their spokesmen whom they have hitherto despised and oppressed, using them for their own destruction—socialists, the leaders of labor, the thinkers they have hitherto sought to silence. Let them once succeed and these men, now their tools, will be ground to powder beneath the weight of the great military empire they will have set up; the revolutionists in Russia will be cut off from all succor or cooperation in western Europe and a counter revolution fostered and supported; Germany herself will lose her chance of freedom; and all Europe will arm for the next, the final struggle.

The sinister intrigue is being no less actively conducted in this country than in Russia and in every country in Europe to which the agents and dupes of the Imperial German government can get access. That government has many spokesmen here, in places high and low. They have learned discretion. They keep within the law. It is opinion they utter now, not sedition. They proclaim the liberal purposes of their masters! declare this a foreign war which can touch America with no danger to either her lands or her institutions; set England at the center of the stage and talk of her ambition to assert economic dominion throughout the world; appeal to our ancient tradition of isolation in the politics of the nations; and seek to undermine the government with false professions of loyalty to its principles.

But they will make no headway. The false betray themselves always in every accent. It is only friends and partisans of the German government whom we have already identified who utter these thinly disguised disloyalties. The facts are patent to all the world, and nowhere are they more plainly seen than in the United States, where we are accustomed to deal with facts and not with sophistries; and the great fact that stands out above all the rest is that this is a people's war, a war for freedom and justice and self-government amongst all the nations of the world, a war to make the world safe for the peoples who live upon it and have made it their own, the German people included; and that with us rests the choice to break through all these hypocrisies and patent cheats and masks of brute force and help set the world free, or else stand aside and let it be dominated a long age through by sheer weight of arms and the arbitrary choices of self-constituted masters, by the nation which can maintain the biggest armies and the most irresistible armaments—a power to which the world has afforded no parallel and in the face of which political freedom must wither and perish.

For us there is but one choice. We have made it. We are to the man or group of men that seeks to stand in our way in this day of high resolution, when every principle we hold dearest is to be vindicated and made secure for the salvation of the nations. We are ready to plead at the bar of history, and our flag shall wear a new luster. Once more we shall make good with our lives and fortunes the great faith to which we were born, and a new glory shall shine in the face of our people.

Gives Book to Schools

A gift of 24 volumes of Ridpath Universal Literature, six volumes of Macaulay's History of England, five volumes of Encyclopedia, and several books of fiction and history was made to the Milwaukee school library by P. King and family, of that town.

Sunday School Patriotic Exercises

Beaver Creek Union Sunday school held patriotic exercises at 10:30 Sunday morning, July 1st. Rev. Hays, of Portland, delivered the sermon, and a special program marked the ceremonies.

The Courier and the Daily Journal $4.75.

Celebration at Outlook

There was a Fourth of July celebration at the Outlook Swedish colony. A good program was rendered. Rev. John Ovall had charge. A large crowd attended.

Try It!

A medicine which has given satisfaction to its users for over 40 years, as Cardui has, must be a good medicine. If you suffer from female troubles, and need a reliable, strengthening tonic, of real medicinal value, as proven by the experience of thousands of women users,

TAKE

Card-u-i

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. C. S. Budd of Covina, Calif., in writing of her experience with Cardui, says: "I took a bottle at 13 years old, and it cured my headaches. I have taken it since marriage, and received much help from it. Cardui is the best medicine I ever took... It was the only medicine... that helped my back..." Try Cardui.

All Druggists

EB 13

CHICKEN CHATTER.
+ Provide plenty of roomy, clean, +
+ well littered nests. Dirty nests +
+ cause dirty eggs, and dirty eggs +
+ spoil quickly. +
+ There should be a nest for +
+ every five hens. +
+ Gather the eggs twice a day +
+ during warm weather. +
+ Late hatched chicks, contrary +
+ to the general rule, are going to +
+ pay this year. But they must +
+ be well cared for. +
+ June hatched chicks should be +
+ given the range of fields not +
+ used by the older chicks and +
+ hens. +
+ It is a well known fact that +
+ fertile eggs do not keep as well +
+ as infertile ones. After the +
+ breeding season is over eliminate +
+ the rooster. +

WEED OUT THE DRONES.

Proper Handling of Poultry Would Largely Increase Food Supply. (Prepared by United States department of agriculture.)

Since poultry reach maturity quickly and since the quality and productiveness of breeding stock, therefore, may be improved by selection in a relatively short period, the raising of poultry furnishes one of the best opportunities for increasing the meat food supply of the country in an emergency like that now existing. This, coupled with the advantages to be gained by the exercise of greater care in poultry raising, was the thought in the minds of the federal and state agricultural specialists who met recently in St. Louis, when they stated that the poultry products of the United States could be doubled in a year. This means that if everybody in a position to help did his part $900,000,000 worth of food would be added to the country's supply this year. This includes both meat for the table and eggs. Very few farmers practice a systematic plan of disposing of their fowls after they have ceased to be productive, although it is well known that fowls of the heavier breeds, such as the Plymouth Rocks, cease to produce a profitable number of eggs at the end of their second laying year and that this holds true of the lighter breeds, such as the Leghorns, at the end of their third laying year. Consequently if efforts were made to dispose of all females when their best laying days were over a large quantity of poultry meat would be placed on the market. All poorly developed chickens should likewise be culled out and used at meat. This way of disposing of unprofitable fowls would allow the farmer to feed his grain to younger and more productive fowls.

Black Minorcas lay as many eggs as any other of the Mediterranean breeds when bred along proper lines. The weight of Minorca eggs averages thirty-two to thirty-six ounces per dozen. As table birds they are good, the flesh being tender and the flavor excellent. The bird pictured is a Rose Comb Black Minorca hen.

Caponizing the cockerels that are not intended for breeding purposes will not only increase their size, but will place a more desirable poultry meat on the market. Another practice that should be adopted more widely is that of fattening all chickens that are to be marketed before they leave the farm. This can be done easily by confining the birds for a week or ten days and feeding them a good fattening ration. They will come to market then in better condition, and the farmer will receive a profit for their added weight.

Charcoal For Poultry.

Charcoal is not a food and may not be a panacea for all poultry ills, but it is a valuable aid to digestion and a corrective of digestive troubles, says a correspondent of the Farm and Fireside. It is good for poultry of any age. It may be mixed with the mash, wet or dry, or fed in hoppers so that the birds may help themselves. It is especially valuable in fattening or forcing feeding. Experiments with fattening fowls and turkeys have shown that those having charcoal made much greater gains than those not receiving it. Finely granulated is the most convenient and desirable form for feeding it. Although supply houses usually charge a pretty good price for it in small quantities, it is comparatively inexpensive when bought by the bag or barrel. Bones or corn is sometimes charred for poultry, but this is inexpedient except on a small scale.

Get Rid of Poor Hens.

Keep the flocks culled. Do not let a few or a few dozen or a few hundred hens live and sponge off the industrious and well paying flock.

Helps Asthma and Hay Fever

Now comes the season when hay fever and asthma cause thousands to suffer. "I have been troubled for years with asthma," writes E. C. Schaefer, Creston, O., "and find Foley's Honey and Tar the only thing that gives me relief. It loosens the phlegm so I can throw it off and sleep. Had to sit nights in my chair, not being able to lie down, before using Foley's Honey and Tar." A standard family remedy for coughs, colds, croup.—Jones Drug Co.

CHAUTAUQUA

25 Reasons

Why You Will Attend

LO ZITO'S ROYAL VENETIAN BAND

Last year the sensation of Newport Beach, R. I.

JAMES GODDARD

Baritone of the Metropolitan Opera Company—the world's greatest baritone.

ONGAWA JAPANESE TROUPE

Native Japanese Artists in delightful cherry-blossom fantasy, "Along the Road to Tokyo."

DR. WHITFIELD RAY

Official explorer Bolivian government—graphic stories of travel and adventure.

CHAUNCEY HAWKINS

Wonderful pictures of animal life of the North Woods, shown by America's foremost game photographer.

GOVERNOR GEORGE A. CARLSON

The fighting executive of Colorado—with his fighting clothes on when he lands in Gladstone Park.

ELIAS DAY

The foremost impersonator and highest salaried Chautauquan in the country.

GRAUS ALPINE YODLERS

Famous troupe of Swiss mountain musicians.

JAMES WHITCOMB BROUGHER

The Billy Sunday of the West. Hear him Sunday, July 15.

THE MILITARY GIRLS ORCHESTRA

In a class by themselves. Voted first place among Chautauqua fans of the East last year.

W. L. MELLINGER

An authority on Mexico. A red hot lecture by a man who knows.

MONTAVILLE FLOWERS

Star of the Chautauqua firmament, on "Guarding the Golden Gate."

BOSTON LIGHT OPERA COMPANY

Unique for the Chautauqua platform. Presenting "Chimes of Normandie."

MUSICAL ARTS QUARTETTE

Songsters of genuine merit.

MRS. CHAS. H. CASTNER

President Oregon Federation of Women's Clubs.

HARTRIDGE WHIPP

Director Chautauqua chorus.

DEAVES' AUSTRALIAN MANNIKINS

For the Kiddies—young and old.

SMITH SPRING HOLMES CO.

Five artists who win Chautauqua folks everywhere.

WOOD BRIGGS

Inimitable Southerner, "Playing the Game."

FILLION TRIO

Offering a refined high-class program that appeals to all.

DR. FRANK BOHN

War correspondent New York Times—Direct from Europe's battlefields.

DAILY BASEBALL GAMES

Enjoy the Chautauqua pennant race.

MISS BERYL M'GILLVAY

Who directs the Junior Chautauqua. A 13-day treat for the youngsters.

MISS OPAL WHITELEY

Nature Study classes each day of assembly.

CAMP LIFE IDEAL

In the prettiest spot in Oregon. Drop a card to Secretary Thos. A. Burke, Box 191 or phone Pac. 89, for complete information and program.

July 10-22 Gladstone Park

Season Tickets $2.50, or $2.00 in Books of Ten