ISAAC LANE KILLED
BY FALL FROM AUTOAGED CITIZEN DEAD WHEN AID
REACHES HIM. WAS MOVING TO A NEW HOME

Isaac Lane, 74 years old, was instantly killed near Oak Grove Tuesday afternoon when he fell beneath the rear wheel of an automobile truck upon which his household goods were being transported. The wheel passed over the old man's chest, although C. F. Cotrell, of Clackamas, the driver, stopped the car within six feet of the spot where Mr. Lane fell.

Mr. Lane was moving his household goods from a dock in Portland to his new home at Glen Echo and had secured Mr. Cotrell to do the work. While the truck was at the intersection of Center street and the river road at Oak Grove, Mr. Lane turned around in his seat by the side of the driver to ascertain if the load was riding properly. The driver saw him apparently lose his balance and fall to the ground, and when Mr. Cotrell had stopped the car Mr. Lane was dead.

At the inquest held by the acting coroner, Judge John N. Sievers, it was testified by Dr. Taylor, of Milwaukie, that all the ribs on the man's right side were broken and that his right leg was fractured. The doctor called attention to the fact that Mr. Lane had been troubled with his heart and said that probably caused him to fall from the slowly moving truck. Mrs. L. J. Kaloski, the only witness to the accident, testified at the coroner's inquest. The jury's return was that Mr. Lane had met death by accidentally falling from, and being run over by an automobile.

Mr. Lane was a native of Illinois and had been a resident of Oregon for 30 years, 10 years of which were spent at Clackamas, from where he moved to Camas, Wash., three months ago, where a son lives. Other relatives are three daughters: Mrs. Margaret Lane, who made her home with her father; Mrs. A. E. Richards, Portland, and Mrs. Marie Stratton, of San Francisco, and two sons, J. H. Lane, of Camas, and A. J. Lane, living near Gladstone. Funeral services will be held from the Meyers & Brady parlors this afternoon, Rev. W. T. Milliken officiating.

WILSON SAYS HEART OF CITY IS LIKE A ROSE

The heart of Oregon City is "mighty like a rose," and the men of the 3rd Oregon infantry return thanks to the city by the falls a thousand times for their delightful reception in this city, says Kent Wilson, son of Sheriff and Mrs. W. J. Wilson of this city. Kent is a sergeant in the sanitary detachment of the 3rd Oregon and a letter received here on Monday by his parents was mailed from Tucson, Arizona last Thursday night. The eternal cactus and grease wood desert of the great southwest was not entirely a welcome change from the cool woods of Oregon to the boys on the train, the letter intimates. Kent's letter says: "We have been traveling through a God-forsaken country of cactus and grease wood all day, an occasional glimpse of a lovely watering shed or the 'dobe' hut of an Indian desert dweller is all there is to break the monotony of this sun razed scenery. This may be God's country in romance, but in reality it is the hottest place this side of Hades. The boys have all shed the O. D. flannel shirts and are now wearing the famous B. V. D. variety. Drinking water is plentiful but, oh, the alkali sting to it; it leaves a muddy coating on the path to one's stomach. The only detaining stop we have made today was this morning at Yuma, Arizona, where we got out for a little morning exercise, and our first glimpse of an Apache Indian and an adobe dwelling. The only excitement on the trip so far occurred this morning when two of the porters on the train got into a fight over the finding of a fifty-cent piece. As a result of the encounter one of the colored 'gentlemen' is taking his meals with the prisoners in the guard house this evening.

"The contents of the delicious box lunches that we received at home are becoming a scarce article and it will soon be back to the army 'chow' again. The boys on the train were loud in their praise of the grand hospitality of the people of Oregon City and send their thanks a thousand fold. I am certainly proud of the loyalty of the people in the city by the falls as their showing excellently anything along the line, and I am more than proud because it is my 'own home town' and its heart is 'mighty like a rose.'"

Three Licenses Granted

Harold Wilson, a Boring farmer, and Ruth M. Lingle, a school teacher in the same community, Tuesday secured a marriage license in County Clerk Harrington's office. Licenses were also issued to William E. Wellman, of 387½ East Burnside street, Portland, and Garnet Barrell, Portland; and August Kilevicia, Bear Creek, Mont., a miner, and Eva Marco, of Oregon City.

W. P. HAWLEY, JR., ELECTED

Bean Crop of Club Said to be Heaviest in County. Talk
Good Road Program

With the proper enthusiasm and everything apparently ready for a year of intense activity, the Live Wires of the Commercial club held their first meeting in the club dining room at noon on Tuesday. Beans, roads and county fairs occupied the attention of local speakers, and committee reports consumed much time in covering the work that has been done by the Wires during the summer months.

The Live Wire bean patch, planted last spring just before the club ceased its meetings for the summer, was reported Tuesday to have produced one of the heaviest crops in a county and O. D. Eby, chairman of a special committee in charge of the club's agricultural activity, reported that the harvest was under way. School children from Mount Pleasant and Oregon City schools were engaged to harvest the crop in the absence of more aged laborers, but the experiment with youthful labor appeared to be as successful as the farming experiment itself, Mr. Eby stated. The young folk entered upon their duties with a fine spirit and accomplished the work in less time than it would have taken older workers. The crop will be threshed as soon as possible.

B. T. McBain reported for the road committee that did not stop their work during the summer. That the Wires will have to be highly active during the coming months was indicated by Mr. McBain's remarks. The state highway commission has demanded a re-routing of the Pacific Highway along the west side through Oswego before hard surface will be applied. It will be necessary to bring about a considerable expenditure to make such changes as are deemed necessary and it will be an object of the Live Wires to see that such appropriations are made and retained in the budget at the time of the annual budget meeting.

The Wires propose to continue demonstrating to Clackamas county farmers their pet ideas as to rural activities and the successful experiment with beans may be added to by the establishment of an experiment farm for the raising of angora goats. Judge Grant B. Dimick, who retired at the first meeting as main trunk of the club, broached the subject of such an experiment and it is probable that the Wires will have a committee soon to take the matter in hand. Judge Dimick pointed out that this county is exceptionally provided for the industry and stated that angora goats would produce something like $50 an acre from land that is utterly wasted at present. He agreed to furnish the goats and the land if the Wires will father such an experiment as he proposes.

The Wires passed a resolution favoring the appropriation by the county court of funds for the aid of community fairs, such as those held at Estacada and George each year, and the organization will attempt to prevail upon the court to see the advisability of such expenditures. A spirit of hearty cooperation with the people of eastern Clackamas county was expressed at the meeting. The meeting on Tuesday was addressed briefly by the Rev. George H. Bennett of Klamath Falls, Ore., and the Rev. C. H. Chandler of St. Paul's Episcopal church, of this city. In addition to the visitors Judge Dimick and O. D. Eby made talks.

The conclusion of the program was the election of officers for the present term. W. P. Hawley, Jr., was elected main trunk to relieve Judge Dimick. Other officers are: John R. Humphrys, sub-trunk; Dr. Roy A. Prudden, transmission wire; A. A. Price, guy wire. In the absence of the new main trunk, Sub-Trunk J. R. Humphrys appointed Dr. L. A. Morris as feed wire.

MADE CENTRAL OFFICE

Postmaster Cooke Will Have Charge of Distributing Supplies

Postmaster J. J. Cooke was notified this week that the Oregon City postoffice has been designated the central office of Clackamas county and it will be charged with the distribution of all supplies to the 35 other offices in this county. Postmaster Cooke will have charge of all accounts for supplies, too. Heretofore each office in the county has ordered what it needed direct from Washington. The extra work will be added to the duties of the present force in the local office.

MILLS REFUSE PLAN
PROPOSED BY LABORCLOSED SHOP SUGGESTIONS
BRING LETTERS FROM COM-PANIES DIRECTORS

The Hawley Pulp & Paper Co., and the Crown-Willamette Paper Co., refused to sign an agreement last Friday to closed shop policies, presented by the papermakers' unions. On September 17 the unions prepared and presented to the mill companies their demand for the adoption of closed shop policies. The matter was considered in the meantime by the managements of the two mills and the first result was the publication by the Hawley Pulp & Paper Co., on Friday of a letter delivered personally to each man, reviewing the consideration that had been given and saying that the board of directors had definitely decided to refuse to sign the closed shop agreement.

Saturday morning the Crown-Willamette Paper company published an identical statement.

The labor representatives met on Sunday night to consider the mill companies' actions, but their only definite action was the ratification of an action of committees, appointed to handle the matter for the unions. The unions appear to be in no particular haste in declaring themselves regarding the action of their employers, and have settled to a calm deliberation of the problem that confronts them. That there may be immediate labor trouble as a result of the refusal of employers to countenance the closed shop demands is ridiculed by labor leaders.

The entire force in both large mills would be effected by strike conditions should they be declared here. Within the past year both mill companies have made wage advances and have cut down the working day in all departments to eight hours.

BENNETT AND GINGER
MAKE HIDEOUS NOISE

Probably inspired by heavy doses of Jamaica ginger, Ben Bennett, a paper mill employ, was arrested Saturday afternoon by Chief of Police Lee French when he was in the act of loudly voicing his patriotism to a small gathering in an alley. In jail Bennett's walls kept the neighborhood aroused for several hours. He continued his speech behind the bars and finally settled down to screaming. The Jamaica ginger at first impelled Bennett to battle with his friends, but he met with little success. The man's yells could be heard for many blocks.

Some time ago Bennett won the attention of the law when he fired several shots at officers who attempted to arrest him for threatening the life of a woman friend.

On Monday Bennett was given a fine of $25 and sentenced to 30 days in jail by Recorder Loder.

WILBUR WILL BE TRIED ON ADDITIONAL CHARGE

While the supreme court withholds the mandate in the case of the state against Julius Wilbur, convicted violator of the prohibition laws, District Attorney Hedges is preparing for the trial of Wilbur on additional charges. The trial has been set for October 10. Wilbur's attorneys are considering taking an appeal from the supreme court decisions to the United States supreme court and pending such action the mandate, under which Wilbur could be placed in jail to serve the six months' sentence hanging over his head, is being withheld. Unless such an appeal is taken Wilbur will be jailed to serve his term as soon as the mandate has been received from the state supreme court.

LOAN DRIVE ON

than $16,500,000 for Bond

Oregon is expected to raise not less than $16,500,000 as its quota of the nation's second issue of Liberty loan bonds, the drive for which commenced on Monday and will continue four weeks. This allotment is $6,000,000 more than the sum collected from the people of this state last June. The amount was oversubscribed 30.78 per cent.

Every effort will be made to attain the former high record for Oregon's ability to respond patriotically to the government's call for war revenues. To do so every community in the state will be organized and every element in each community will be enlisted to put the war loan over according to the financial ability of the people.

S. S. Convention Planned

The Clackamas County Sunday School association is making final arrangements for its annual convention which will be held this year at Wilsonville on October 19 and 20. C. F. Romig, president of the association, has named a number of committees to cooperate with the officers on plans for the annual gathering and a highly interesting program is being prepared.

COUNTY TAKES SWEEPSTAKES

Third Year in Four Prize Comes to School Department. Children get $72.25

Clackamas county school children came into their own at the state fair last week when they walked away with $72.25 in prizes for the many things they exhibited. First and most important was the sweepstakes prize won by the Clackamas county school booth in charge of Superintendent Calavan and Supervisor Vedder and decorated under the direction of Mrs. J. R. Wolff, formerly of Molalla. The sweepstakes prize indicates that Clackamas county had the most attractive booth in the juvenile department and is an honor that has come to this county three years out of the past four.

Clackamas county was awarded fifth place in the counties of western Oregon for the total of their exhibit and took a special prize of $25 for having the booth in readiness for the opening of the fair before any of the other counties. In spite of the value of these county prizes and their importance, interest centers in the individual prizes awarded to the children themselves. The chief feature of the county's participation in the fair were the exhibits of club contest work carried on by the children.

In the boys' camp, which is a feature of the fair each year, and where prize winners of the previous year's club contests are entertained at state expense, Clackamas county had two representatives. The county was entitled to send two boys and two girls, but the latter did not appear. The boys were Clyde Denny of Estacada, who was rewarded for his work in pig feeding contests, and Harold Kammerer of Dryland school, who won the corn growing contest.

The Clackamas county prize winners in the juvenile department were: Poultry Raising: division 3—Celena Tremayne, Carus school, 2nd prize, $5.

Pig Feeding: division 3—Gilbert Shearer, Estacada, 5th prize, $2. Baking—Katherine Schmitz, Clairmont school, 3rd prize, $4; Helen Gaffney, Clairmont school, 5th prize, $2.

Sewing: division 1—Gladys Caldwell, Jennings Lodge school, 5th prize, $2. Agricultural club: course K—Rudolph Mullenhoff, Damascus school, 2nd prize, $5.

OPEN JUVENILE CONTEST: Class B—9 to 14 years; Class A—14 to 19 years.

Field corn: class A—Harold Hein, Canby, route 2, 4th prize, 75 cents; Oscar Piper, Aurora, 5th prize, 50 cents.

Hubbard squash: class A—Weldon Kammerer, Aurora, route 4, 1st prize, $1.50; Rudy Harms, Aurora, route 1, 3rd prize, $1.00.

Pie pumpkins, class A—Rudy Harms, Aurora, route 1, 2nd prize, $1.25.

Pie pumpkins, class B—Otto Jaeger, Sherwood, route 2, 1st prize, $1.50; Harold Kammerer, Aurora, route 4, 2nd prize, $1.25.

Stock pumpkins, class A—Melvin Reuck, Aurora, route 4, 5th prize, 50 cents.

Potatoes, class A—Harold Hein, Canby, route 2, 2nd prize, $1.25; Albert Troze, Boring, route 3, 3rd prize, $1.00; Henry Courand, Canby, route 1, 4th prize, 75 cents.

Potatoes, class B—Arden Hein, Aurora, route 1, 3rd prize, $1.00. Onions, class B—Forest Batty, Canby, 3rd prize, $1.00.

Bird house, class A—Clarence Olds, Oregon City, 1st prize, $1.50; Raymond Holmes, Oregon City, 2nd prize, $1.25.

Bird house, class B—Eugene Vedder, Gladstone, 2nd prize, $1.25.

Mrs. Fuller Questioned

An order issued out of Judge Campbell's court yesterday calls upon Mrs. Cassie Evans Fuller to show whether she wants a complaint recently filed here to be considered as an action for replevin or a case of forcible entry and detainer. Mrs. Fuller, who as Mrs. Cassie Evans was well known as the proprietor of the Cottage hotel at Canby, recently filed suit against T. J. and Florence Vaughn to force them to release to her the hotel property and its furnishings.

Andersons Are Sued

Frank S. Johnson Co., of Portland, Tuesday brought suit against Fred H. and Elmer Anderson for the recovery of 7000 pounds of hops held by the Andersons, or $2800 in money as their value. The company claims the Andersons are holding the hops illegally. The Anderson farm is near Eagle Creek.

PRATT INJURES WIFE
WITH VICIOUS BLOWPARADISE CORNERS QUARREL
MAY PROVE FATAL TO WO-MAN. STORIES CONFLICT

What may prove to be a fatal blow was struck yesterday afternoon by Cadiz Pratt of Paradise Corners, when he felled his wife with a heavy iron bar following a quarrel the couple had been carrying on during most of the day. The heavy bar cut the woman's skull, making a crack three inches long, and causing a loss of blood from the effects of which she has not yet recovered. This morning the woman was resting at the Oregon City hospital as easily as could be expected.

The attack occurred about four o'clock yesterday and when the sheriff's office was notified an hour later, Deputies D. E. Frost and A. E. Joyner rushed to Paradise Corners. They found the woman lying unconscious on the floor and the assailant waiting for the arrival of officers. He offered no resistance and was brought to the county jail to await the outcome of his trial. Drs. Mount were summoned and later an ambulance brought Mrs. Pratt to the hospital here.

Pratt said last night that he had wielded the heavy bar in self defense, charging that his wife was rushing at him with an open razor. This statement is denied by their two daughters, aged 17 and 20, who were witnesses of the crime. They say that their father had no provocation for his act, but was enraged from the quarrel.

The Pratt family has had more or less trouble during the past two years and upon one occasion Mrs. Pratt filed a divorce action in the courts here. It was dismissed. Pratt is about 50 years old and his wife 10 years his junior. They have lived at Paradise Corners for a number of years and own a small farm there.

F. J. TOOZE WINS $1.00
IN SUIT FOR SLANDER

The Toozie-Carlidge $20,000 damage case was settled on Tuesday evening when a circuit court jury awarded F. J. Toozie a judgment of $1 for alleged slanderous statements contained in bulletin No. 1, of which Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Carlidge admitted authorship. Mrs. Carlidge was former head of the English department at the Oregon City high school and the bulletin in question was an outgrowth of friction she had with the school superintendent. Mrs. Carlidge resigned from the high school staff more than a year ago.

The feature of the much-discussed trial was the attempts of counsel for the defense to show that the reputation of Mr. Toozie was not what it should be. Judge Littlefield of Portland presided at the case in place of Judge J. U. Campbell. He instructed the jury Tuesday evening after two days of trial to find a verdict for Mr. Toozie and to settle the amount of damages for themselves. The contents of the bulletin could not be excused on the ground that they were merely critical, said the judge. Mrs. Carlidge testified that her only purpose in causing the bulletin to be published was a desire to bring about an investigation of affairs in the school superintendent's office.

ERICKSON SENTENCED AND PAROLED AT ONCE

Arraigned before Circuit Judge J. U. Campbell yesterday, August Erickson, proprietor of the Clackamas tavern east of Gladstone, pleaded guilty to charges of assault with a dangerous weapon preferred by his former wife. The charge and plea resulted in a six month sentence for Erickson. Judge Campbell, however, paroled the man during good behavior and ordered him to report personally to the circuit court once each month. Erickson was cautioned to leave liquor alone, and to that was attributed all the trouble he has been in within a few months.

Erickson is now serving a six month sentence for violation of the prohibition laws. His conviction on this charge grew out of a raid made upon his tavern last spring when officers were called by Mrs. Erickson who feared injury at the hands of her husband. Sheriff Wilson found a valuable store of whiskies at the tavern. Mrs. Erickson recently secured a divorce from her husband as a result of his treatment of her as well prior to the raid upon his place.

Sues on Wood Contract

Martin Heerdt Thursday brought action in the circuit court against V. Dopplet, of Astoria, to get damages in the sum of nearly $2500 for the latter's failure to live up to the terms of a contract to deliver wood. Heerdt was to receive a carload of cordwood from Dopplet each day until a total of 1600 cords of three grades of wood had been delivered. Some of the wood was delivered and Heerdt advanced money to Dopplet to complete the contract, but the latter has failed to do so, the complaint says.

TANANNA A WILD
YUKON JUNCTIONRIVER VILLAGE WHERE THEY DO NOT PAINT SUNSETS

NOR SERVE GOD

A DRINKING, FIGHTING MOB

Town Is Mile Long and Eighteen Inches Wide and as Tough as It Is Long

(M. J. Brown)

I was up and dressed when my call came for Rampart. I had not slept. The room was stifling hot, so I opened the door wide, pulled the sheets over my head, leaving a place for breath, and told the mosquitoes to go to it. And they did. Wherever the sheet touched my body they would stake a claim and sink a shaft, and they had a way of sneaking under the sheet and jumping a claim. The Yukon mosquito is wise to the game. He knows his season is short and he takes a bunch of long chances.

One lady passenger was up. She was from Los Angeles. Her father was a steamboat captain on the lower river and she was on a visit to him. She had made the trip before and she knew where Rex Beach's cabin was. So we climbed to the high bank and started out to "see Rampart."

It didn't take long. The town was the typical river bunch of log houses and stores, one street facing the river. There were no traffic restrictions or sidewalk congestions, and we made speed. In the midnight twilight we soon found the author's cabin, just like all the other log houses with the exception of the distinguishing mark of a pair of moose horns over the door.

And it was here, the lady told me, that Rex Beach wrote "The Barrier." I don't know how he could have done it. Of all the lonesome places on the Yukon Rampart was "Exhibit 1." I brushed away the mosquitoes, looked into the window of the cabin and mentally told Rex he had nothing to fear from me. The herd instinct grabbed me—we bolted for the boat. I had seen the celebrated cabin and was thoroughly satisfied. It seemed to me an inspiration framed a cold hand for Rex Beach when it dealt him Rampart.

Days later, at St. Michael, I was speaking of seeing Beach's cabin, when a man laughed. I asked where was the funny place. He said Beach's cabin burned a long time ago, and now the people took turns in putting a pair of moose horns on the different cabins in town and slipping over the counterfeits. "The last trip I made the author's cabin was at the extreme east end of the town. Now they tell me it is the 'west end' turn for this season."

Then I concluded Alaska was about as full of deceit as the outside.

At two o'clock in the morning the steamer pulled into Tananana (pronounce the last syllable "naugh.") I couldn't sleep so I took my grip and went ashore. This fort town is at the junction of the Yukon and Tananana rivers, where they told us we would have to wait "about five days" for a steamer down, as our boat went on to Fairbanks.

As some writer has written, the town was about a mile long and eighteen inches wide, with Fort Gibbon at one end, an Indian village at the other and a bunch of "red light" cabins in the rear. I was told that Tananana was a "tough town."

I walked up the one street in the semi-darkness until I saw a hotel sign, "The Tower House—Rooms," and I went in. It was a saloon and hotel combined—but mostly saloon. The proprietor awoke, shoved out a book for me to register and showed me to a little dump of a room on the second floor. It was just large enough for a bed, and I was agreeably surprised to find it clean. It was gold and rainy so I went down stairs and sat by the big stove.

On the boat I had formed a warm friendship with a young fellow named Wilson from Dawson, on his way to Nome. He was a machinist by trade and a prospector by profession. He told me if I wanted to find a "character" to stop at the Tower house and get on the good side of "Austrian Joe," the owner. But I had forgotten about this and it was only by chance that I put up at his place.

In a little while a big drunken stevedore came in. He had on board an ugly jag. He looked over the big empty bar room, then came over to me and said, "Let's have a little drink." I refused; he insisted. I told him he had enough and I did not want any.

"You're a liar," he told me, "and you can take it any way you want to." With that whiskey-crazed man there was only one way to take it. I didn't care to open any week's enforced stay in this river town with a bar-room fight with a plug-ugly, so I told him I would take it any way he

ERNEST MASS NAMED
DEPUTY BY MARSHALPROMINENT CANDIDATE SE-LECTED BY ALEXANDER AS ONE OF ASSISTANTS

George F. Alexander, the new United States marshal for Oregon, put into practice the old adage that "a new broom sweeps clean" when he took office at Portland Wednesday. His first official act was to lop off the heads of five of the old deputies who had served under United States Marshal Montag and supersede them with five men of his own selection, one of whom was Ernest T. Mass, of Oregon City, twice sheriff of Clackamas county.

The men to be made deputies were on hand waiting for the change. They were sworn in at once. Mr. Alexander retained two of the deputies under Marshal Montag, Frank R. Cauthorn and Frank T. Berry, both of Portland.

The five new deputies are: John D. Mann, of Portland, former deputy county clerk; Robert D. Carter, of Baker, ex-county judge of Baker county and ex-mayor of Baker; Sam F. Pace, of Enterprise, ex-county assessor of Walla Walla county and deputy sheriff there for six years; Frank B. Tichenor, of Port Orford, joint representative from Coos and Curry counties in the legislature and Mr. Alexander's leading rival for the office of United States marshal, and Ernest T. Mass, who was a leading candidate for the office of marshal.

The five deputies let out by Mr. Alexander were George E. Jackson, W. F. Harrmann, David B. Fuller, Marshall Malone and Elmer Lundburg.

"Mr. Alexander in making his appointments," said a formal statement for the press prepared by Mr. Alexander, "has taken into consideration the fact that the United States Marshal's office covers the entire state, and has selected two deputies from the first congressional district, two from the second congressional district and three from the third congressional district."

"Mr. Alexander retired from the practice of law on October 1 and severed all his professional relations before taking his oath of office. The policy of the office will continue to be one of loyalty, efficiency and the utmost courtesy to the public generally."

BROKE HER TEETH AND CUT HER HAND BY BLOW

Because he knocked her down with a chair and struck her in the mouth with his fist, breaking some of her teeth, according to the complaint, Mrs. Rosa Mantha seeks a divorce from Julius Mantha, to whom she was married in Portland, November 4, 1901. After five weeks of wedded joy, Mrs. Mantha alleges, her husband started a course of cruel treatment which was featured by the acts mentioned. When he struck her in the mouth with his fist, according to her complaint, he not only broke some of her teeth, but so cut his hand that he was unable to work for a week. While the couple resided in Washington county Mantha is said to have been sentenced to a year in jail for wife beating. They have six children, ranging in age from 4 to 15 years. Mrs. Mantha wants title to their property in lieu of alimony.

Anna F. Eby Thursday brought suit for divorce from Fred F. Eby, to whom she was married at Lewiston, Mont., on June 17, 1911. He deserted her at Pocatello, Idaho, on May 13, 1913, according to her allegation.

WRITES TO TEACHERS

J. E. Calavan Emphasizes Importance of Agriculture and Patriotism

With a plea to teachers in Clackamas county schools to devote much attention during the present school year to an emphasis of the importance of agriculture and its study, J. E. Calavan, county school superintendent, has addressed his annual letter to the teachers in all schools of the county. The superintendent agrees to supply any school with a course of agricultural study in case such subjects are not being taught there. Mr. Calavan's letter in part says: "Teach patriotism. Your pupils should salute the flag daily. See that the flag and flag pole are kept in order at all times. Patriotic songs should be a special feature at every school this year. Demand that every pupil be absolutely loyal to our government. If you cannot do this you have no business to be in the school room as a teacher.

"Every teacher in Clackamas county will be expected to take up industrial club work this year. Any boy or girl who can fruit, bakes bread, raises potatoes and corn, makes a dress, takes care of a vegetable garden or feeds a pig, is doing his or her bit for our country in its hour of need. It's up to you."

Wants to Raise Rates

An application has been filed with the public service commission at Salem by the Mutual Co-operative Telephone association of Canby, asking for permission to increase its rates.
