ANENT GAME LAWS

The game laws of Oregon, like many other things in our great democracy that have no constitutional countenance, are not in keeping with the letter nor spirit of the constitution of the United States nor the state of Oregon. Yet we have the alarming spectacle of a state legislature figuring at each session ways and means for the further violation of the constitutional rights of our citizens.

As the favored stamping ground of sportsmen of Oregon and, in fact, of the entire world, for we have salmon fishermen from every corner of the globe, Clackamas county should declare itself against bonds of imposition at the hands of the legislature and through the state fish and game commission.

Article VIII of the constitution of the United States and section 16, article I, Oregon state constitution provide explicitly against excessive fines for the violation of law. How does that hitch up with the famous Oregon law that Clackamas county justice is ordered to enforce in the matter of fishing on the Willamette? Violate the sanctity of the dead line 200 feet below the falls of the Willamette in this same pretty city of ours and it is absolutely demanded by the law of Oregon that justice collect a minimum fine of $50. The Courier wants to see the color of the Willamette river salmon that is worth $50 to any man, or to the county, the state, the nation, the fish industry or the rules of decency.

Of course, The Courier does not countenance law violation. The man who knows that he is breaking the game laws, should be fined sufficiently to make him mighty watchful in future. But for the sportsman from afar as well as for our own citizens we enter a brief against the game laws of Oregon in so far as they absolutely demand that excessive fines be imposed for the innocent violation of the law. The individual law breaker in Oregon is small potatoes as compared with the state legislature, which violates the laws of God, humanity and the United States at every session.

This week an innocent party, properly licensed and in all other things a respectable, law-abiding gentleman, set his aim upon the lovely head of a Chinese pheasant which had been so careless as to alight in a game refuge. The hunter had no idea that he was firing into a refuge, for there was no warning—simply the concealed form of an eagle-eyed warden waiting to nab the hunter court—fine him from $10 to $100. Beautiful as they may be, there isn't a China pheasant this side of kingdom come that is worth even $10 to a sportsman nor to the cause of game preservation. The fault with the game laws is that they do not know discretion. The innocent law violator should have a chance; the deliberate law breaker should be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the statutes.

The solution for the problem is in the abolishment of the fish and game commission. Do away with the state commission; form county fish and game units, directed by the county court, establish county hatcheries and hire county wardens. The result will be heavily stocked, fishing streams and a hunting paradise governed with justice for the people of Clackamas county and Oregon. The saving would be immense and sportsmen would get a square deal.

THE COUNTY AGENT

Clackamas county, through its county court, has gone to considerable effort to provide the farmers with a thoroughly advised scientist, whose main energies will be devoted to an attempt to cooperate with the farmer in solving the manifold problems that are presented in the course of a season. With scientific knowledge to back up his practical education in the real work of tilling the soil, a county agent is invaluable if the farmers make the use of him.

that they should. If they make of him a consulting expert in the same manner that we make use of a doctor for our physical ailments, there is little doubt that the county agent can help in his way as much as the doctor can.

There is still that type of farmer who not only thinks but is convinced that "my way is the only way." With such the best agent in the world would be unable to work harmoniously and for the best interests of both. It stands to reason that such an attitude won't pay returns on the investment that the county is making on an agricultural expert.

The Courier would suggest, with all respect to the skill and enterprise of the farming people of Clackamas county, that they take the new county agent to their bosoms, harbor him and lend him every aid that is possible toward the accomplishment of the work he is to do.

We believe that the return on the investment that the taxpayers make will be more than justified if the agent is given the assistance of a cooperative body of farmers. His plans for a seed-selling and buying agency, among others, will work to the great good of growers if they take advantage of this opportunity. A material increase in crops is assured if there is a head to the informal organization of farmers that can, in a measure, have the reins in his own hands and direct the work.

The bearded notion that one farmer knows more about the soil and the crops that are peculiar to this county and state than do the men of such an institution as the Oregon Agricultural college, who have given the best years of their lives to a scientific study of scientific agriculture, is ridiculous in the eyes of those farmers who have advanced far enough to know that their occupation is a science as fully as is medicine or engineering.

SLICE OF BREAD A DAY

Each of us is saying: "My saving a slice of bread a day won't do the Allies much good;" and we aren't saving. But on small things great events depend. It was for want of a nail that the shoe was lost; for want of the shoe, the horse was lost; and for want of the horse, the rider was lost. Those slices of bread in the soldiers' knapsacks might win the war—Spectator.

Encouraged by the finest crop of beans in Clackamas county the Live Wires started out the season on Tuesday with every switch open for a fine year on the highway of achievement.

You know these chaps who are crabbings about the scale of wages continually. Many of them are justified, but how many men would rather take what they earn than what their employers pay them?

Judge Grant B. Dimick's proposal to open a Live Wire demonstration farm to show doubting farmers how they can produce bank accounts with goats on waste land should meet with the instant approval of every land owner in the county.

One idea we have of "food fit for a king" is a plate of two China pheasants at $50 a plate. Sounds like about $15 a bird to us. Then there's the salmon caught beyond the dead line at $50 each. Royal Chinook, as it were!

'Tis said that dairymen have found music is fine for cows. It helps increase their milk supply. The Courier suggests that such tunes as "The Old Onken Bucket," or "Down by the Old Mill Stream," would help more than drier tunes.

American workmen must do nothing to encourage or aid the Prussian cause, says an authority. Oregon City workmen will deliberate a long time just for that reason.

before they attempt to tie up local industry with strikes.

If President Wilson should prevail and an exemption be granted to all married men there would be a bunch of sad women in the land. Such women had hoped the army might take the old man and they would be relieved from supporting him for awhile.

Clackamas county school children win $72.25 in prizes at the state fair; the Clackamas county school booth won the sweepstakes prize and a $25 prize for having its display in place first. Makes fairly good reading matter, doesn't it?

It appears to our old friend Bill Spilvits that these urgent reformers—the fellows who don't want filthy cigarettes in the Yankee trenches of Europe—never smoked a cigarette and don't know personally what effect their smoke may have. Hear-say evidence like that won't go in any court.

Obituaries

Albert Goetz

Albert Goetz, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Max Goetz, died suddenly at the family home here on Saturday. Heart failure is given as the cause of the death. The little fellow was resting easy two hours before his death, and his good health seemed apparent. When breathing became difficult the nurse summoned medical aid, and before the doctor arrived the lad was dead. The body was buried Sunday afternoon in the Canemah cemetery.

J. C. Smith

J. C. Smith, well known in this county, died at his home at Firwood on Wednesday evening. The family formerly lived in Sellwood, and Mr. Smith was for a number of years a familiar figure in the Olds, Wortman & King department store. He had just passed his 65th birthday and had been broken in health for some years. He was a sterling character and he was the soul of honor, true friend, husband and father. He is survived by one son, Reginald, with the Canadian army in France, and who was wounded at Vimy Ridge. A daughter, Edith, is with the Red Cross nursing corps; another daughter is in Seattle and one son at home.

A BUSINESS CHAT

A man who has a store in Oregon City—he is not a businessman by any means—came into THE COURIER office the other day and tried to tell us that advertising does not pay. Businessmen do not talk that way, they know better. Ask the consistent, steady advertiser who puts his wares before the people in attractive, well-written advertisements why he continues to advertise. Don't think for a moment he would keep it up if it did not pay him.

When a man wants summer underwear why does he ask for B. V. D.'s? If he wants to take home a breakfast food why doesn't he ask for breakfast food instead of Cream of Wheat or Kellogg's? When the housewife wants a bar of soap why doesn't she call her grocer and say: "Please send me a bar of soap?" That is just as easy as to say, "send me a bar of Ivory," but you bet your sweet life she asks for the advertised kind. How do you know that Heinz makes good pickles? How do you know that Gillett stands for safety razor? Answer such questions for yourself before you tell any sensible person that advertising does not pay.

BEAUTIFUL WINDOWS ARE FALL OPENING FEATURE

Some of the most skillfully decorated windows that Oregon City has ever seen were features of the first annual fall opening and fashion show Thursday night, and formed one of the attractions to draw thousands of people to Main street.

The first prize in the window display contest was awarded to Frank Busch, whose display of period furniture was set in a tapestried background with autumnal tints for color. Bannan & Co. took second prize, and the third was awarded to the Huntley Drug Co., while Hogg Bros., Burmeister & Andersen and the Jones Drug Co. received honorable mention for their displays. Several of the merchants had living models to display the fall styles and many had orchestras and other music for the occasion. Sales were not made during the evening, but stores and clerks were used only to make the public welcome for an inspection of new goods.

Not the least of the fall exhibition was the banquet Thursday evening, in which local business men and judges from Portland took part. The banquet was the occasion of a discussion of business conditions. The lunch was served in the Commercial club rooms. A. Price acted as toastmaster and many business men made brief talks.

POULTRY PICKINGS.

The helpful hen is doing her duty these days toward the low cost of living by shelling out a goodly supply of eggs.

The orchard is not the only place to spray. The henhouse can stand a drenching once or twice a month.

Don't expect your birds to be wire walkers or professional balancers. Give them a comfortable roost. They appreciate comfort in roosting as in other things.

Plumage is not only obtained by fattening the birds the last few weeks, but is also due to regular and careful feeding all along the line.

Poultrymen who exhibit their stock brighten up the combs and wattles with a mixture of two parts alcohol to one part glycerin.

CHANGE POULTRY FEED.

Suggestions For Substitutes to Lessen Cost of the Ration.

Present difficulties experienced by abnormally high prices for poultry feed should be met by changing the ration instead of reducing it; also, according to the poultry authorities at the New York State College of Agriculture, a change in rations may mean the releasing of more wheat foods for man's use.

The college makes the following suggestions as a partial guide toward cheaper rations: Cornmeal and clover in equal parts may be used as a partial substitute for bran. The leaves and chaff from clover hay may be fed dry in a box or steamed overnight and fed in a trough in the morning. Care should be taken not to feed too many large stalks.

Gluten feed is palatable and may replace part of the white wheat middlings, and barley may be used to replace wheat in the grain ration. It often happens that shrunken wheat may be purchased at a less price than fully matured wheat. If of good quality it is fully as desirable for poultry feeding as the matured wheat.

If green bone can be obtained from butchers' shops at a price to warrant its use it may be fed as part of the animal food. From one-half to three-quarters of an ounce a day for each hen or one and one-half ounces every other day fed in troughs may replace in part the beef scrap in the ration.

CHICKENS IN SUMMER.

Green Feed, Shade and an Abundance of Fresh Water Important.

One of the main essentials in the care of summer chicks is to keep them working and comfortable. To insure this they must have quarters that are large enough for the flock, overcrowding will cause slow development and instead of a fine flock of chickens one will have many undersized specimens that will take a long time in reaching maturity and become a loss to the poultry raiser. Four square feet should be given to the flock at maturity, and if this is reduced very much the producing power of the flock is not as high as when given the larger floor space.

Green food in some form is important. On the farms this is not so hard to obtain, but with the city dweller or poultry raiser with limited ground space it must be purchased. Healthy chickens can be grown without it, but better and at a cheaper cost, all things considered, when cabbage, lettuce, lawn cuttings or some green food is fed.

Water should always be supplied, and the warmer the day the more often the drinking vessels should be refilled. To many this does not seem to be of great importance, but the experienced poultry keeper knows the value of fresh, cool water to the flock during the summer months and attends to this simple essential that so many less experienced in noting the results neglect and think so little of.

Shade in some form should be supplied in the yard or runway to protect them from the direct rays of the sun. Natural shade is best, but where this cannot be had muslin tacked to a frame and placed on the top of stakes driven in the ground will answer the purpose. If no protection from the sun is given the growing flock they will seek the shade in the poultry quarters, which, no matter how well constructed, are not as a rule during the heat of the day.

The poultry keeper by looking after these small things will find that the chicks will grow well during the summer and mature into broilers, roasters and layers at the time they should.

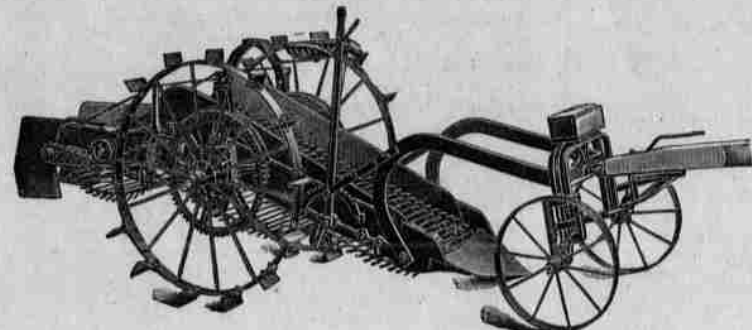

Leghorns Should Lay Early. Leghorn pullets should start to lay at five and one-half months if they have been properly hatched and grown. Hens continue to lay for several years, but most of them are seldom profitable for this special purpose beyond their second laying season.

A WORD FOR MOTHERS

It is a grave mistake for mothers to neglect their aches and pains and suffer in silence—this only leads to chronic sickness and often shortens life.

DISTRICT 10 CUT OFF COUNTY ROAD SYSTEM

County road district No. 10 was abolished Friday by order of the county court and its territory was divided between districts Nos. 9 and 49. No. 10 is in the Garfield district. In several other cases the court made minor changes in district boundaries. Abolishing district No. 10 leaves the county with 56 districts exclusive of the 10 that will be added under the terms of the new road law by the addition of incorporated cities.

The court has not determined what plan it will pursue when the law doing away with the office of road supervisor becomes effective on January 1, but has given some consideration to the proposal to group the various county districts and put all the work under a corps of 20 deputies. The court may also consider the appointment of a deputy for each district. The court will have no desire, Judge Anderson says, to change the law governing the levy of special district taxes for road work, and money so secured will be expended now as before in just the way the district sees fit.

SCHOOL REPORT CARDS

Report cards and envelope carriers approved for Clackamas county schools by Superintendent J. E. Calavan, are for sale at The Courier office. The envelopes are made of strong manila paper with a metal clasp and the cards are printed on attractive, heavy Bristol board paper and are undoubtedly the most serviceable cards to be had. The card, which folds into a four-page booklet, contains not only the space for grading results in daily and monthly work and examinations, but rules and regulations for children. School teachers and district clerks desiring such cards will do well to order them at once before the supply on hand is exhausted.

SHAVE COST UP

Barbers Grant Demands of Journeymen and Raise Price

The price of shaving has gone up in Oregon City as a result of demands made upon master barbers by their employees for a raise to $18 a week in wages. The journeymen also demanded shorter hours, but have compromised upon a salary increase. Shaves hereafter will be 20 cents, haircuts 35 cents, and a similar increase has been made for massages, shampoos and tonic applications.

A Medicine for Women

For Forty Years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has Relieved the Sufferings of Women.

It hardly seems possible that there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, proving beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other medicine in the world.

Mrs. Kieso Cured After Seven Month's Illness.

Aurora, Ill.—"For seven long months I suffered from a female trouble, with severe pains in my back and sides until I became so weak I could hardly walk from chair to chair, and got so nervous I would jump at the slightest noise. I was entirely unfit to do my house work, I was giving up hope of ever being well, when my sister asked me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took six bottles and today I am a healthy woman able to do my own housework. I wish every suffering woman would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and find out for herself how good it is."—MRS. KARL A. KIESO, 596 North Ave., Aurora, Ill.

Could Hardly Get Off Her Bed. Cincinnati, Ohio.—"I want you to know the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was in such bad health from female troubles that I could hardly get off my bed. I had been doctoring for a long time and my mother said, 'I want you to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.' So I did, and it has certainly made me a well woman. I am able to do my house work and am so happy as I never expected to go around the way I do again, and I want others to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—MRS. JOSIE CORNER, 1608 Harrison Ave., Fairmount, Cincinnati, Ohio.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.
