THE BEE BUZZES

And now we come to that delightful autumnal social pastime of discussing the political situation. Oregon, thus far, is mainly interested in the lone candidate for gubernatorial honors. Yet we find time in the quiet hours of the evening to wonder who is to be secretary of state next term and how he expects to achieve the place.

Political races always draw plenty of talent for the first place. Just now R. N. Stanfield, plowman of the sheep fields east of the mountains, is debating with friends and family whether he wants to relieve Senator McNary at Washington or Governor Withycombe at Salem. Stanfield will be a republican candidate, and will probably want the governor's robes and crown in the final analysis. Stanfield is certain to divide interest in the republican primary with Gus Moser, James Withycombe, Ben Olcott and Thomas Kay, state treasurer.

The democratic slate is not so burdened with the weight of aspirants. Mr. Starkweather undoubtedly leads the field in interest at this early day, but the old bee continues to buzz. The Courier certifies to the reliability of a rumor—that is, we vouch that it is a rumor, and present it to readers as a brand new bit of political information—that Sam White, chairman of the Democratic State Central committee, will cast his headgear into the primary ring in opposition to Mr. Starkweather. White had contemplated relieving Senator McNary of his honors, but has decided to seek the main seat in state government.

Then we are sure to have with us this year that horde of little fish in the big pond. Both parties will be asked to vote upon a good sized list of worthy gentlemen who would be governors or senators. Judge Bennett of The Dalles does not come in this class. He will be one of the big fellows in the race for the nomination.

Just who Senator McNary will have to overcome or be defeated by is not a question to be lightly discussed. Republicans are prone to let McNary show what he has in the way of statesmanship, but the democrats may have a second Chamberlain in reserve. Verily, the situation demands another Chamberlain.

Whatever the ultimate line-up may be it seems certain that we will have to consider Harvey Starkweather and Sam White as democratic candidates for governor, as well as Judge Bennett. And it appears equally certain that Ben Olcott, James Withycombe, R. N. Stanfield, Gus Moser and, perhaps, State Treasurer Kay, will divide attention for the republican nomination. In the offing we have Stanfield wondering whether he wants to run against McNary for the senatorial seat and a small group of democratic dark horses in the same quandary.

CONFLICTING FARM IDEAS

Four Oregon women, all sisters and all having their homes in the western part of the state, have just purchased five sections of wheat land in Gilliam county adjacent to five sections which they previously owned. Of their latest purchase 1600 acres is in summer fallow while the other 1600 acres furnished the big crop this season.

There are a lot of social problems—educational, religious, community, as well as economic problems generally centering about these purchases of big tracts of agricultural lands by non-resident owners.

By no means are the arguments all on one side.

With regard to grain farming, economic efficiency demands high class farm management and high class farm management demands a sweep of territory. On the other hand social efficiency demands the grouping of many families within a convenient radius of community gatherings and cooperation in the farming business.

The problem of today is to find a working agreement, an effective compromise between these two conflicting ideas.

If we reject the business idea in farming there will be no money to foster social development. If we reject the social idea of farming there will be no home folks to make it worth while to farm.—Oregon Farmer.

SACRIFICED

The Journal says: Road building is in its nature a very prosaic pursuit but occasionally it trenches on the sentimental. Old associations and memories are sacrificed on the altar of commercial utility.

A case in point is the destruction of five magnificent walnut trees on the Ganong place above Canemah, which stood on the right of way on the new Pacific highway grade through Clackamas county. These trees, which towered in the air to a height of fifty or more feet, had grown from seed planted by a pioneer family in 1847.

The seed had been brought to Oregon from the east by way of Panama. During the years these trees grew on the river bank, symbolizing the transition of Oregon from a pioneer community to a great commonwealth, their leaf stripped limbs resisting the winds and cold rain of winter and their green foliage protecting from the heat of the summer sun. In their cool shade travelers were refreshed and children of more than one generation played. In them were enshrined many buried human hopes and sorrows, sacred memories of those who lingered in their shadows.

Like the Indian tribes which once dwelt on the shores of the Willamette they had to give way to the dawning of a stronger and more utilitarian day.

Though cut down, their usefulness is not ended. They may be fashioned into articles of household furniture delighting the eye and providing comfort for generations of men to come.

TWILIGHT

Potato digging features this week's industry in Twilight. Miss Rose Spiger accompanied the Greens, of Oregon City, on a motor trip over the Columbia highway Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Bullard and daughter, Florence, of Oak Grove, and Mr. and Mrs. Moynach and Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Harvey were hospitably entertained with cards and refreshments on last Saturday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Kelland.

G. I. Bromley, of Atchison, Kans., was a Totem Pole ranch visitor Friday last.

Mr. and Mrs. David Peck have had as their guests the past week, the latter's father, mother and sister from eastern Oregon.

The appliance of "Road Hog" to the usurper of all public thoroughfare rights is an unjust slam at the pig, the latter invariably surrendering one-half the roadway when meeting a traveler.

George Von Jensen, during his enforced idleness by reason of the paper mill strike at which institution he is an employee, is improving his ranch with a new barn.

Nearly everyone in this vicinity contributed their mite last week toward the soldier boys' Christmas.

Frank Weisenbeck and daughter, Dorothy, visited last week with his sister in the Palouse country. He had not seen the sister for 27 years. We are a firm believer in a man's right to sell his labor to the highest bidder, but dictation on the part of labor as to whom an employer shall employ, is unfair and borders on impudence.

Mrs. Spencer Nash has been quite ill the past week.

Thus far but little wheat has been sown in this neighborhood.

The utilization of potato ground for that cereal and the lateness of the former, is largely responsible for the seeming delay in planting of this crop.

We are becoming quite a suburban district. Some 40 homes border the south end road within two miles of Oregon City, and a large per cent of their owners are employed in Oregon City.

A national food conservation meeting at the Community hall last Monday night was liberally attended by our people.

Mrs. Curtis Dodds is now visiting friends in Minnesota and later will spend a few days with Chicago kin, proceeding thence to her old home in Chicago, where, on Thanksgiving day, she will witness the marriage of a sister.

Our weather is still ideal and everyone in this neighborhood is either busily engaged in the potato harvest or with fall grain seeding.

Obituaries

Edgar L. Davidson

Edgar L. Davidson, postmaster at Oswego, died at his home in that place Monday night after an illness of some duration, and the body was brought to Myers & Brady's undertaking establishment here awaiting completion of funeral arrangements. Mr. Davidson was 47 years of age and is survived by his widow and a son. He was one of the best known residents of the Oswego district where he had resided a great many years, having been a druggist previous to his appointment as postmaster.

William Phillips

One of the county's oldest pioneers and a man widely known and much respected was William Phillips, of Clackamas, who died at his home there on Saturday evening. Mr. Phillips was born in 1827 and in 1846 crossed the plains to Oregon. He settled with his parents in this county and with the exception of a few years spent elsewhere, had been in this county all his life. In 1848 Mr. Phillips married Charity Mills, member of a prominent early day family. Nine children were born and five of them survive the aged father who died last week. For a brief time Mr. Phillips and his family lived at Shoalwater Bay, and they spent a year in California. This was in 1860 and 1862. The children who survive are William A., North Yakima; Alvis W., Oregon City; John, North Yakima; Mrs. Emma Jones, Clackamas and Mrs. Hattie Robinson, Clackamas. Funeral services were conducted under the direction of the Clackamas Spiritual society on Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock and interment was in Portland.

YOUTHS WARRANTED

Clackamas County Boys Honored at National Army Camp

County Clerk Harrington has been advised from Camp Lewis, American Lake, that a number of Clackamas county young men who are in the national army have become non-commissioned officers as a reward for their work with the troops. Garland Hollowell, who was in charge of the first 40 per cent quota to leave here, has been warranted a sergeant. Others who are sergeants are Arnold Schneider, J. Thomas Hindle, R. S. Green, Ferdinand A. Scott and Philip L. Hammond. Charles Moulton, formerly a local attorney, has been detailed as clerk to one of the companies at the camp. A number of the young men mentioned were week-end guests this week at their homes here.

COW MAKES RECORD

From the vicinity of Scotts Mills comes a story indicating that the days of miraculous events are yet in evidence. Harve C. Hartman, a local farmer, has a cow which gave birth to a Jersey heifer calf on September 22 last. On October 23, just one month and one day later, the animal gave birth to a Hereford bull calf. Both are living and in a beautiful condition. Mr. Hartman is as proud of the cow as the animal is over the belated twin.

HAWLEY COMING

Live Wire Meeting Postponed Until Tonight to Hear Guest

The regular Live Wire meeting at the Commercial club billed for noon Tuesday has been postponed until Thursday evening at 6 o'clock, when Congressman W. C. Hawley is to be a guest of honor. In addition to an address Mr. Hawley will probably have many interesting things to tell about the appropriation the wires hoped for to build a new postoffice building and other congressional matters in which this city and county are especially interested. The dinner will be served promptly at 6 o'clock, according to plans.

Reed-Denning Nuptials

A marriage license was issued here Friday to Roscoe C. Denning and Rachel Mae Reed, both of Estacada. Mr. Denning is connected with the Denning cannery at Estacada. Miss Reed is a graduate of the University of Washington and is a daughter of J. W. Reed, prominent Estacada citizen.

HOW SHE WAS CURED

By ETHEL HOLMES

Mrs. McGinnis was not expected to live through the day. For a year she had been an inmate of St. Luke's hospital, gradually growing worse till at last she had been given up by the house physician, and now he pronounced the end very near. The difficulty in her case had been to diagnose it. It was not in the liver nor the heart nor the kidneys, the three organs to which physicians refer the bulk of their cases. It might be that the stomach was affecting the nerves or the nerves the stomach. At any rate, there was no nourishment derived from food, and the patient suffered from nervous debility.

"Has she any relatives?" asked the physician.

"She's married and has children."

"Well, notify the husband."

Now, it so happened that Pat McGinnis, having to work hard all day, with no one to take care of four young children during his absence, had called in a comely young woman for housekeeper and nurse. It was not long before Miss Mulcahy, who occupied the position, had drawn a promise from Pat that after his wife's death he would marry her.

On the day Pat was summoned to the bedside of his dying wife he had taken a half holiday to go shopping with Miss Mulcahy, who, it having been reported to her that Mrs. McGinnis could not last long, was quietly picking up a trousseau. He took his conditional fiancée with him to the hospital to wait in the reception room while he bid his wife a last farewell, after which they were to continue their shopping. Mrs. McGinnis was lying in a ward on the ground floor, from which she had a fine view of the approach to the hospital. She saw her husband coming in with Miss Mulcahy, and it was a revelation to her. A man, whose intentions in such matters are sluggish, would likely have died before the revelation had broken in on his stupid brain. Not so Mrs. McGinnis. The story of her husband's relations with Miss Mulcahy was not only as plain to her the moment she saw them coming in together as it has been recorded here, but a great deal plainer. Indeed, her mind shot out little radiations of intelligence, giving her minute pictures which have been necessarily omitted in this bold statement of facts. When Pat entered the ward and was conducted to the bedside of his wife his face wore a very solemn aspect, nor was it assumed. Mrs. McGinnis was the mother of his children and had been a good wife to him till disease deprived him and them of her attention. Indeed, he felt so deeply that it was not easy to open a conversation. She spared him the trouble. There was a flash in her eyes and a drawing down at the corners of her mouth not at all becoming to one about to enter paradise. Instead of lying on her back she raised herself and supported herself by an elbow.

"Pat," she said, "y'er a good man. Y' niver lied to me. Now tell me who's been tendin' the childer?"

"I got Mary Mulcahy to do it."

"And who's goin' to do it when I'm gone?"

"I suppose she'll stay on."

"What y' been doin' with her this afternoon?"

Pat started.

"Don't lie to me, Pat. Y' niver did it, and y' niver did it unless some woman persuaded y'. What y' been doin'?"

"Mary was doin' some shoppin'."

"And what's Mary's shoppin' to you?"

Pat stood stolidly silent. His eyes rolled everywhere; his tongue moved not.

"D'y' think the banns 'll be published next Sunday?" asked his wife.

Still Pat was silent. His thoughts were tumultuous.

"And the weddin' the day after the last banns?"

Pat signified his distress by changing the leg that supported the principal part of his weight.

"Have y' said anything about this at confession?"

"Niver a word. But how did y' know 't all?"

"Pat, you go right out and send that woman away, and don't y' let her go back to my place. Tell her O'll be there the night meself."

"Howly saints!" exclaimed Pat, crossing himself.

"Send her away, I say."

Pat went out and told Miss Mulcahy that his wife had gained a supernatural knowledge of her intention, warning her not to go to his house, since his wife had threatened to be there in ghostly form. Miss Mulcahy made a hasty departure, and Pat called his rebellious legs to take him back to his legitimate partner.

"Has she gone?" asked Mrs. McGinnis.

"Yes."

"Now go get a buck."

"For the love o' heaven, Bridget, what y' goin' to do?"

"Goin' home to the childer. D'y'e suppose O'll go to die an' I've 'em to the mercy o' that hussy, who can't wait till O'll be dead before preparin' to take me place?"

Within an hour the patient was driving up to her own domicile, into which she walked, and she has long ago completely recovered her health. The case is noted in the medical books as an especially illustrating influence of the mind over the body.

NEW RULES FOR RURAL AND VILLAGE SCHOOLS

By the introduction of three new features in the rules for standardization of rural and village schools, prepared by J. A. Churchill, state superintendent of public instruction, the requirements for standardization in Oregon are raised. No changes had been made since 1914. The first new feature improves the lighting of the school room. It provides that the total window space must be equal to not less than one-fifth of the area of the floor and that the light must be admitted entirely from the left side of the students as they sit at their desks; or from the left and rear of the school room.

That each standard school must have at least 100 good books in the library, exclusive of duplicates, is the second new feature. The books must be chosen from a list compiled by the state librarian, especially for the use of elementary schools.

The third requirement is unique in that it applies to the school directors, requiring one director to visit the school while in session at least one hour each month.

"As a direct result of the plan of standardizing country schools, there has developed a greater respect for the flag law," says Mr. Churchill. "Also in hundreds of school houses the heating, lighting and ventilation have been improved, the grounds and outbuildings looked after and pure drinking water provided. With the help of the county superintendents, the neglected country school is fast being transformed into a clean, healthful, pleasant place in which to work."

ASK AID OF DENTISTS

Would Also Have Additional Certified Men Ready for Camp

The local exemption board has received from Adjutant General J. M. Williams a request to enlist the voluntary and patriotic aid of dentists in the city in preparing local towels for service in the national army. Under the law the adjutant general says, only one dentist per thousand men is permitted in the army and that is not sufficient to care for the dental needs of the new army before it is ordered to foreign service. Sheriff Wilson and County Clerk Harrington are prepared to take the names of any Clackamas county dentists who are willing to lend this service to the government.

The local board has also been advised that a number of the local men, already sent to American Lake have been ordered back to their homes because of physical and other unfitness, and has been asked to prepare a list of all certified men who could be used to again fill the county's quota. A list of cases before the board and undecided is also requested.

Boys Get Towels

Hazella Women Aid Local Honor Guard and Red Cross

A shortage on dish towels was reported in Oregon City last Thursday from Camp Withycombe, where Oregon soldiers were preparing to entrain for an eastern training camp. Within a few hours local members of the Red Cross and the Honor Guard had 200 towels and considerable soap to turn over to W. B. Cook, deputy county assessor, who delivered the articles at the camp. Hazella women, who are spending their idle hours making towels for soldiers, added 50 to the collection which was taken to Camp Withycombe. A number of Oregon City boys are in the companies which have gone east.

"Who Will Win This Battle?"

Your kidneys are the filters of the body. If they become inactive and fail to eliminate the waste matter, they are apt to throw the whole mechanism of the body out of order, thus toxic poisons can accumulate in the system and be as deadly as snake venom.

Besides causing the minor ailments of rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago and backache, neglect of the kidneys is apt to develop into more serious diseases, such as diabetes or stone in the bladder. Rid the body of toxic poisons—clean the bladder and kidneys and cure the twinges of rheumatism with An-u-ric and you win the battle of life.

Anurie was first discovered by Dr. Pierce, and has benefited thousands of sufferers as well as appeared and eliminated the ravages of the more serious kidney diseases. Now procurable at any good drug store, or send direct to Dr. W. M. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y., 10 cents for trial package.

Mrs. B. G. COKER says: "When I commenced the treatment of Anurie I was in bad shape. My back ached all the time and oh! how my back would ache at night until I would have to get up. I could never sleep all night. But since I have taken the Anurie Tablets my backache is all gone and I can lie down and sleep good and sound all night. Oh! how much better I do feel—no one knows but myself. My advice to all sufferers of kidney troubles is to give Anurie a trial and they will find relief from their troubles."
