

Startingly Novel RECITAL

THE most remarkable musical recital ever heard in Oregon City was given at the Moose Hall Friday night. Glen Ellison, noted Scotch baritone, stood beside the New Edison (Thomas A. Edison's highest development of the phonograph) and sang with it as it RE-CREATED his voice with such fidelity that the actual voice could not be distinguished from the RE-CREATION.

Pauline Lawrence, noted pianist, who accompanied Mr. Ellison, demonstrated that Edison also has succeeded in RE-CREATING with unblemished fidelity instrumental music in all its forms.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

Most music lovers of Oregon City were present. If you were not, you may hear the only instrument that stands the supreme test for a phonograph, or talking machine, at our store any time that suits your pleasure.

Burmeister & Andresen

Oregon City Jewelers

Suspension Bridge Corner

"Somewhere in France"

with
Arthur Guy Empey
Author of "OVER THE TOP"

(Continued from Last Week)

Love Versus Wine

By
Sergeant Arthur Guy Empey
Author of "Over the Top,"
"First Call," Etc.

Mr. Empey's Experiences During His Seven Months in the First Line Trenches of the British Army in France

The English Lion was roaring, and his growls could be heard all along the western front. No doubt many a German general was stirring uneasily in his large concrete shell-proof dugout, kilos behind the German front line, as the ever-increasing thundering roar reached his ears.

We had a close-up view of his majesty, the king of beasts, and to us he was a sorry-looking specimen. Patches of hide were worn away, while in his tall were two big knots. If these knots had been labeled it would have been easy to read "Neuve Chapelle" and "Gallipoli." The memory and pain of these two disasters no doubt increased the intensity of his thunder.

The British bombardment of the German lines was on, a bombardment which lasted over eight days and nights. It was the forerunner of the Big Push, or "Battle of the Somme." Atwell and I were sitting in a dug-out of the support trench. Atwell was a great, big, lovable fellow, and was my mate. We both had been detailed to the divisional intelligence department, and were engaged upon "spy work."

Atwell, although of a naturally cheery disposition, occasionally relapsed into fits of despondency.

In the light from a stump of a candle I was making out my previous day's report to turn into brigade headquarters. Occasionally the entrance to the dugout would light up with a red flare as a shell burst in the near vicinity. Atwell was sitting on his back, with his back leaning against the wet and muddy wall of the dugout. The rays from the candle lighted up his face.

Finishing my report I got out a "rag," lighted it, and with an uneasy feeling listened to the roar of the hell outside. A long-drawn sigh caused me to look in Atwell's direction. Never in my life have I seen such a dejected and woe-begone countenance. This, in a way, angered me, because I, myself, right then, had a feeling of impending disaster, a sort of unknown dread, perhaps intermingled with a far-away longing for the fields and flowers at home. I wanted to be cheered, and Atwell's face looked like a morgue.

Forcing a smile I slapped Atwell on the knee and said:

"Come out of your trance. We've both got a good chance for Blighty with this bombardment on."

Atwell looked in my direction, and in a tone of voice which from him I had never heard before, answered:

"Yank, I've been out since '14. I've buried many a mate and I've seen many a lucky bloke on a stretcher bound for Blighty, and never gave it a thought, but right now I feel as if my stay in the trenches will be short. I've had something on my mind since September, 1914, and it's been worrying me pink. I'm going to tell you the story, and I'll give you my oath that you're the first one that's ever heard it from my lips; but I've got to have your promise that you'll not judge me too harshly. I've just got to get it out of my system."

Just then a sizzling moon could be heard overhead. It was one of our "nine-point-two" shells aimed in the direction of Berlin. We both instinctively turned our eyes toward the entrance of the dugout and waited for the burst. Nothing happened.

"Another bloomin' dud," ejaculated Atwell. "A few more hundred pounds gone to seed," and then again the gloomy look spread over his countenance. I was getting nervous and uneasy. Trying to hide my fear, I said:

"For th' love o' Mike, Atwell, crack a smile. Give us that story of yours, for you."

"We flattered our thanks and followed her into the house like a string of sheep. Yank, to me that meal was a dream. She flitted around the table, filling a glass here and there, laughing with us and making us feel at home. The war was forgotten. By this time I was madly in love with her, and she knew it, because when she leaned over my shoulder to replenish my glass with red wine, her hair would brush my cheek, and once she rested her hand on my shoulder and gave it just the slightest squeeze. I was in heaven."

"It was getting late and the wine was beginning to tell on the men. They were falling asleep in their chairs. I had a hard job waking four of them to go on guard. They got their rifles and were standing around me for instructions, when our hostess came over to me and, resting her hand on my arm, with again the slightest of squeezes and pleading eyes, interceded for them."

"Sergeant," she said, "let the poor boys sleep. They are so tired. There is no danger. The Germans are miles away. I know this to be true. Do this for me." And again that squeeze.

or else I'll go bughouse. You had better get it off or your chest, because I'm thinking that Fritz will soon be replying to our strafing, and if an eight-inch shell ever hits this dugout they'll need no wooden crosses for us, because our names will appear under the caption 'Missing.'"

With another sigh escaping from his lips, which sent a cold shiver up and down my spinal column, he lighted a rag and started in. "This is what he told me:

"It was back in September, 1914. You know I came out with the first hundred thousand, the time when all the fighting was done in the open. The Germans were smashing everything before them in their drive on Paris. Our regiment was one of the few opposed to Von Kluck. It was a case of hold them for a few hours and then retreat—always retreat. We didn't even have time to bury our dead. The grub was rotten, and we were just about fagged out, dead tired, with no prospect of a relief or rest in front of us."

"It was customary for small patrols of ten to twenty men in charge of a sergeant, to reconnoitre on our flanks. One day I was sent out in charge of one of these parties. Oh, yes, I was a sergeant then, but I lost my stripes—disobedience of orders they called it. I suppose I ought to feel lucky I wasn't shot, but I'll leave it to you whether I did right or not."

"At that time I was in for a commission, but, of course, didn't get it. If I had received it, no doubt by this time I'd be pushing up the daisies somewhere in France. In those days officers didn't last long—made fine targets for the Boches."

"This patrol I was in charge of carried rations for three days. We were to scout around just in front of the advancing enemy, but our orders were not to engage them—just get information. If the information obtained was valuable enough, I was to send it in by one of the men. There were fourteen of us, and we were mounted. I was in the Lancers then, and was considered a fair rider."

"The first day nothing happened. We just scouted around. By nightfall we were pretty tired, so when we came to a village—wasn't a village, either; just five or six houses clustered around a church—I decided to go into billets for the night."

"Riding up to the largest house, which had a four-foot stone wall running around its garden, I dismounted at the gate and knocked with the hilt of my sword. Pretty soon a light appeared at the front door—the house was on a sort of a knoll, so this door was in plain view. Then the sweetest voice I ever heard called out in trembling tones, in perfect English, too, but with just the suspicion of an accent:

"Who is there, please?"

"I answered, 'Just a few English Lancers who desire a place to rest for the night. The barn will do.' We don't want anything to eat, as we have rations with us. So, if you will accommodate us, miss, I will be much obliged." I was in love with that girl before I saw her—the voice had done the trick."

"She answered, 'Just a moment, please, until I tell father,' and then the door shut and the light disappeared. We didn't have to wait long before the door opened, and she called to me:

"Father bids you welcome, and so do I, soldiers of England."

"Then she opened the gate. There she stood on the gravel path with the lantern held shoulder high. I trembled all over—thought I saw a vision. I tell you, Yank, she was beautiful. One of the kind you would like to take in your arms, but won't for fear of crushing. No use for me to try to describe her, Yank, it's out of my line; but she captured me, heart and soul. There I stood like a great, big boob, shaking and stuttering. At last I managed to blurt out a stammering 'Thank you, miss.'"

"She showed us the way to the stables and stood in the door holding the lantern so we could see to unsaddle. I was fumbling around with the buckles, but for the life of me couldn't get that saddle off. One of the men, with a wink and a broad grin, came over and helped me. That grin got my goat, so on the way I kicked him on the shin. He let out an explosive 'dunn.' After that 'dunn' the silence was painful. The fellow felt like a fool. I was sorry for him, even though I could have killed him for his thoughtlessness. But our embarrassment was short-lived, because a silvery laugh came from behind the lantern, a laugh that was not loud, but it echoed and re-echoed among the rafters overhead. I can hear it right now, Yank."

"After the horses had been unsaddled and fed, the men looked appealingly at me. I knew what they wanted—they were dog tired, and dying to hit the hay. Just as I was about to ask permission for them to turn in, the angel butted in with:

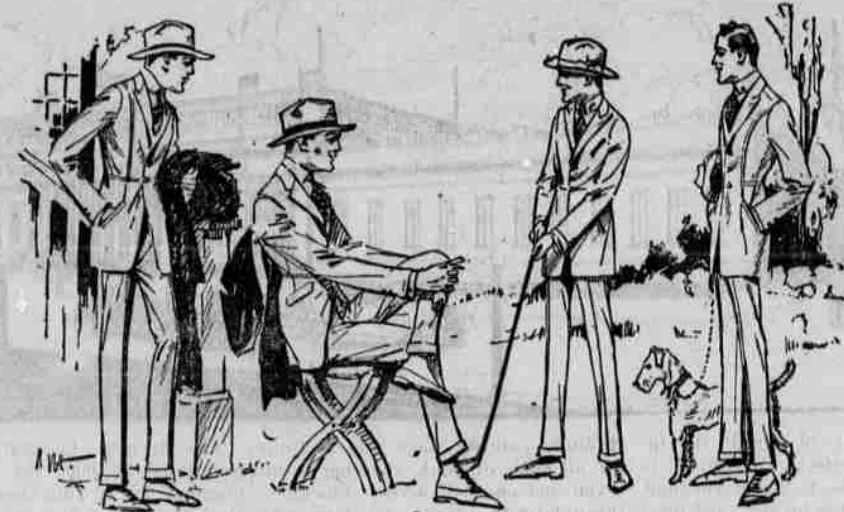

"Poor, tired soldiers, sleepy and hungry. Come right into the house. Jean has some supper and wine ready for you."

"We flattered our thanks and followed her into the house like a string of sheep. Yank, to me that meal was a dream. She flitted around the table, filling a glass here and there, laughing with us and making us feel at home. The war was forgotten. By this time I was madly in love with her, and she knew it, because when she leaned over my shoulder to replenish my glass with red wine, her hair would brush my cheek, and once she rested her hand on my shoulder and gave it just the slightest squeeze. I was in heaven."

"It was getting late and the wine was beginning to tell on the men. They were falling asleep in their chairs. I had a hard job waking four of them to go on guard. They got their rifles and were standing around me for instructions, when our hostess came over to me and, resting her hand on my arm, with again the slightest of squeezes and pleading eyes, interceded for them."

"Sergeant," she said, "let the poor boys sleep. They are so tired. There is no danger. The Germans are miles away. I know this to be true. Do this for me." And again that squeeze.

(Continued Next Week)

Boy, Have You Seen the Nifty Flannel Suits

in blue, brown and green. Nothing so nobby and stylish has been shown in years. They are all the craze this season. Built in the popular split waist models.

$25, $30, $35, $40

JOE SWARTZ

If Men Wear It—I Have It.

Corner Sixth and Main

CORRESPONDENCE

(Continued from Page 3)

Nolta is active in Red Cross work and her many friends are sorry to lose her. Mr. and Mrs. Post who are pleasantly located on the river front also will take up their residence in Portland.

Mr. and Mrs. Bul of Kalamazoo, Michigan, are domiciled in one of the Pierce cottages, overlooking the Willamette.

Mrs. Pierce and son, Teddy, are sojourning in California.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Fleming and little son have removed to Dayton, Ohio.

Miss Bessie Roberts has returned from Woodburn after a pleasant visit with Mrs. Sam Stewart.

Mr. and Mrs. Clemens have completed their fine house near Ashdale. It is modern throughout with many built-in conveniences.

CLARKES

Miss Olga Murat, from Sherwood, visited her sister, Mrs. Arthur Hornschuh, and family over Sunday.

Carl Buche and George Andersen, from Portland, were out and visited Carl's parents last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Berger came back to Clarkes again and the former is going to work for Albert Larkins in the sawmill.

Walter Lee, from Vancouver, was out in Clarkes and Colton over Sunday.

Wilfred Cogar, who enlisted in the navy, received his honorable discharge and came home to his parents in Colton last week.

David Moehnke was in Portland last Thursday.

Mrs. Fred Josi is home staying with her parents at present.

W. H. Wettlauffer lost one of his best horses the other week.

Miss Clifford visited her parents in Portland over Sunday.

A party was given at the home of T. Pack Saturday evening, February 22d, and everybody had a fine time.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marshall and children visited J. D. Marshall and family over Sunday.

UPPER HIGHLAND

Oh, the rain, the mud and the cold. The cold, the mud and the rain. With weather at zero, it's hard for a hero.

From language that's rude, to refrain. With porridge muck to the knees; With sky that's a-pouring a flood; Sure, the worst of our foes Are the pains and the woes Of the rain, the cold, and the mud.

—Robert W. Service.

Sure, and that's the way we feel about it here in Highland. What have we done to deserve all the snow, the cold, the rain and, worst of all, the mud?

The bride and groom, Mrs. and Mr. Oscar Effenberger, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Will Effenberger, returned from the honeymoon last Thursday evening. They were welcomed home by a small crowd of friends at the Leighton Wright home. We greatly regret that they are going to leave us soon for Eugene.

August Martin took a number of his friends and relatives to a party at Colton at the Fred Bauer home, Saturday evening. Those who went were, Sam, Willie, Johnnie, Tillie and Esther Martin, Blanche Rogers and Elsie Bauer.

Miss Molly McVay and Hilda Chase were out exploring the roads from Highland on Saturday afternoon. After a five-mile jaunt they concluded that it was a holiday and they returned home to rest their weary bones.

In spite of the rain there was a large crowd out at Sunday school last Sunday. There were about 20 present.

The Armenian drive is on in full force in Highland, and we expect to "Go over the top." The school children are contributing their pennies, nickles, dimes and even quarters for the children who have not the comforts which they have. The total sum collected is not known, however.

Lloyd Schram, of Beaver Creek, visited at home on Sunday afternoon.

Joe Smith was in Highland on business the forepart of this week. Frank Nicholas and Herb Straub visited at the home of the former this week-end.

A small number of the friends of Mrs. Tillie Martin gave her a pleasant surprise shower on Saturday afternoon, February 22d. Those present were: Mesdames M. Kandle, Hester Rutherford, B. Rambo, Martin, Rogers, and the Misses Blanche and Mae Rogers and Tillie Martin.

STAFFORD

With the rest of the Willamette valley, we are enjoying the timely weather.

The Ladies' Circle met last Thursday with Mrs. Lena Elleksen and spent a profitable and happy day, sewing and quilting for the hostess.

Mrs. Gebhardt is having a new garage built.

C. E. Miley has sold his fifty acres of the Hayes farm to Mrs. Rabin. We shall be sorry to have them leave, which they will do, we understand, as soon as they find a desirable place.

Henry Gage drove a car home a couple of weeks ago, but the lane to the garage is so torn up by recent rains and heavy traffic that he goes about in a carriage yet.

Mrs. F. Francis spent the day at the Gage home last Tuesday.

Mrs. Weddle visited at Mrs. Oldham's Tuesday.

A number of wood-choppers are busy cutting wood on the Iron company land, west of here, with power saws.

Will Elleksen and brother, sons of George Elleksen, of Willamette, had a runaway last Wednesday. They were driving a spirited team, with a coil fastened with two ropes to the back of the wagon. Near C. Tiedeman's place, Mr. Oldham passed with a truck and the coil promptly jumped into the wagon, which so frightened the horses that they ran away; the seat lurched forward with the driver onto the tongue behind the running horses. Some men near Reint De Nui's, at work on the road, succeeded in stopping them and, strange to say, neither the men nor the horses were hurt. The coil fell out of the wagon at the first jerk, but was not hurt, having broken the ropes.

John Gage and family motored out from their home at St. Helen's on Saturday to visit at Mr. Gage's mother's home. They returned Sunday afternoon.

The Red Cross auxiliary met as usual at their hall Friday and made boys' suits.

On Saturday evening the Loyalty League met at the school house and passed a pleasant and instructive evening. Gilbert Hedges, Sheriff Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Burke, combined with local talent, made the time pass quickly. Mr. Hedges gave us a very interesting talk, touching upon the lives of the great men whose birthdays we celebrated this month, upon our duty as citizens, the growth of this great republic, our boys "Over Here" and "Over There," and held his audience from start to finish. Mr. Burke, with his wife as accompanist, sang of the young French soldier, blinded in the war, and his impressions of the American soldier. It was very sad, but well rendered, and Mr. Burke responded to an encore by singing about the stuttering soldier and his sweetheart; how he missed her when the "m-m-moon" shone over the c-c-cow-w shed." Another speaker said that the Bolshevik and I. W. W. advocates reminded one of the deadly copperhead snake, so often referred to in the time of the Civil war, which gave no warning like a healthy rattlesnake, but crawled in the grass, striking his deadly venom at friend or foe, biting the hand that fed it. We were also proud of our local talent, who acquitted themselves nicely upon short notice.

A member from Stafford attended the installation of officers at Tualatin Grange last Saturday, which passed off without a hitch, with Fred Elligen, past master, as installing officer, and Mrs. Hutton, of Oswego Grange, as assistant.

Violet De Nui is at her father's house confined to her bed with a severe case of inflammatory rheumatism, and the little brother is in the Oregon City hospital with an affection of the ear, which may leave the little fellow deaf in that ear.

STRONG EVIDENCE

Is the Statement of This Oregon City Woman

Backache is often kidney ache; A common warning of serious kidney ills. "A Stitch in Time Saves Nine"—"Don't delay—use Doan's Kidney Pills."

Profit by the experience of Mrs. Louise Baxter, 115 Seventh St. She says: "I suffered for quite awhile from kidney weakness. I tried different medicines, but nothing helped me like Doan's Kidney Pills did. They proved their worth and I can certainly recommend them." (Statement given April 5, 1913.)

No Trouble Since

On April 17, 1915, Mrs. Baxter said: "Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cured me of kidney trouble. My back is now strong and well."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Baxter had. Foster-McLure Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. (Adv.)

On Saturday evening the Loyalty League met at the school house and passed a pleasant and instructive evening. Gilbert Hedges, Sheriff Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Burke, combined with local talent, made the time pass quickly. Mr. Hedges gave us a very interesting talk, touching upon the lives of the great men whose birthdays we celebrated this month, upon our duty as citizens, the growth of this great republic, our boys "Over Here" and "Over There," and held his audience from start to finish. Mr. Burke, with his wife as accompanist, sang of the young French soldier, blinded in the war, and his impressions of the American soldier. It was very sad, but well rendered, and Mr. Burke responded to an encore by singing about the stuttering soldier and his sweetheart; how he missed her when the "m-m-moon" shone over the c-c-cow-w shed." Another speaker said that the Bolshevik and I. W. W. advocates reminded one of the deadly copperhead snake, so often referred to in the time of the Civil war, which gave no warning like a healthy rattlesnake, but crawled in the grass, striking his deadly venom at friend or foe, biting the hand that fed it. We were also proud of our local talent, who acquitted themselves nicely upon short notice.

A member from Stafford attended the installation of officers at Tualatin Grange last Saturday, which passed off without a hitch, with Fred Elligen, past master, as installing officer, and Mrs. Hutton, of Oswego Grange, as assistant.

Violet De Nui is at her father's house confined to her bed with a severe case of inflammatory rheumatism, and the little brother is in the Oregon City hospital with an affection of the ear, which may leave the little fellow deaf in that ear.

Profit by the experience of Mrs. Louise Baxter, 115 Seventh St. She says: "I suffered for quite awhile from kidney weakness. I tried different medicines, but nothing helped me like Doan's Kidney Pills did. They proved their worth and I can certainly recommend them." (Statement given April 5, 1913.)

No Trouble Since

On April 17, 1915, Mrs. Baxter said: "Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cured me of kidney trouble. My back is now strong and well."

Price 60c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Baxter had. Foster-McLure Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. (Adv.)

On Saturday evening the Loyalty League met at the school house and passed a pleasant and instructive evening. Gilbert Hedges, Sheriff Wilson and Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Burke, combined with local talent, made the time pass quickly. Mr. Hedges gave us a very interesting talk, touching upon the lives of the great men whose birthdays we celebrated this month, upon our duty as citizens, the growth of this great republic, our boys "Over Here" and "Over There," and held his audience from start to finish. Mr. Burke, with his wife as accompanist, sang of the young French soldier, blinded in the war, and his impressions of the American soldier. It was very sad, but well rendered, and Mr. Burke responded to an encore by singing about the stuttering soldier and his sweetheart; how he missed her when the "m-m-moon" shone over the c-c-cow-w shed." Another speaker said that the Bolshevik and I. W. W. advocates reminded one of the deadly copperhead snake, so often referred to in the time of the Civil war, which gave no warning like a healthy rattlesnake, but crawled in the grass, striking his deadly venom at friend or foe, biting the hand that fed it. We were also proud of our local talent, who acquitted themselves nicely upon short notice.

A member from Stafford attended the installation of officers at Tualatin Grange last Saturday, which passed off without a hitch, with Fred Elligen, past master, as installing officer, and Mrs. Hutton, of Oswego Grange, as assistant.

Violet De Nui is at her father's house confined to her bed with a severe case of inflammatory rheumatism, and the little brother is in the Oregon City hospital with an affection of the ear, which may leave the little fellow deaf in that ear.

MOTHERS TO BE

Should Read Mrs. Monahan's Letter Published by Her Permission.

Mitchell, Ind.—"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped me so much during the time I was looking forward to the coming of my little one that I am recommending it to other expectant mothers. Before taking it, sometimes I suffered with neuralgia so badly that I thought I could not live, but after taking three bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was entirely relieved of neuralgia. I had gained in strength and was able to go around and do all my housework. My baby when seven months old weighed 19 pounds and I feel better than I have for a long time. I never had any medicine do me so much good."—Mrs. PEARL MONAHAN, Mitchell, Ind.

Good health during maternity is a most important factor to both mother and child, and many letters have been received by the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., telling of health restored during this trying period by the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Cut This Out—It Is Worth Money DON'T MISS THIS. Cut out this slip, enclose with 5c and mail it to Foley & Co., 2835 Sheffield Ave., Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You will receive in return a trial package containing Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, for coughs, cold and croup; Foley Kidney Pills for pain in sides and back; rheumatism, backache, kidney and bladder ailments; Foley Cathartic Tablets, a wholesome and thoroughly cleansing cathartic, for constipation, biliousness, headache, and sluggish bowels.—Jones Drug Co.

"For the Love o' Mike, Atwell, Crack a Smile."