ANOTHER OREGON CITY BOY MAKING GOOD IN OHIO LAW COMPANY

His many friends will be pleased to know that Trafton M. Dye has become a junior partner in the firm of Wilkin, Cross & Daoust, one of the leading law firms of the city of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Dye is a son of C. H. Dye and Eva Emery Dye of Oregon City, was educated in the public schools here, spent four years at Pacific University, three years at Oberlin College, Ohio, and three years at Columbia University, New York, winning honors in all three institutions. At Columbia he was elected one of the editors of the Law Review.

After traveling extensively in Europe over much ground of the recent war, he settled in Portland and was for a time with Estes Snodgrass in the Corbett building, but two years ago decided to join some of his college friends in Cleveland where from the first he has been entrusted with important legal and financial responsibilities.

Mr. Dye married Miss Mary Ward, social secretary of the Portland Y. W. C. A. and has two children, both born in Portland.

SCOOP YOUNG HOME AFTER LONG SERVICE WITH ARMY IN FRANCE

Walter Young, who has been in the service and overseas for about a year, returned to Oregon City Tuesday morning, after many interesting experiences. He left here with Company K, 16th Infantry, First Division, and for some time was in Germany and France, but says there is no place like old Oregon for him. Walter had endeavored to arrive here in time to enter some of his prize birds at the Oregon State fair, and arrived almost too late, but is contemplating to enter these at the Clackamas county fair, having always carried off the blue ribbons on those he has shown. The many friends of "Scoop" are giving him a most cordial welcome in this city. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Young, of this city.

"Are you sure this airplane service of yours is safe?" inquired the timid passenger.
"Is it safe?" echoed the manager.
"Why, we sell commutation tickets!"—Life.

A Voice From Sioux City, Iowa, says

PE-RU-NA Worth Its Weight In Gold

You cannot mistake the words of Mr. W. W. Northrup, of 908 Fourth Street, Sioux City, Iowa. He is enthusiastic about his present health and the merits of PE-RU-NA and wants everyone to know it. Here is a recent letter from him:—

"PE-RU-NA is worth its weight in gold and then some. I used to think it only a woman's remedy but have changed my mind. I had a cough, especially in the morning. After using half a bottle of PE-RU-NA was much better. I would cough up chunks of phlegm and mucus, my eyes itched and bothered me. Judging from the symptoms given in your almanac it was catarrh. My stomach is in much better condition since using your medicine."

"Use this testimonial, if you wish. Don't hesitate to advertise the merits of PE-RU-NA."
(Signed) W. W. NORTHROP.

There are thousands just like Mr. Northrup, skeptical at first but convinced by a trial of PE-RU-NA. DON'T BE AN UNBELIEVER. If your trouble is of a catarrhal nature, try PE-RU-NA, then tell your friends. It is fine after an attack of grip or Spanish flu.

How State Constabulary Has Been Dealing With Unruly Steel Strikers in Pittsburgh

Every preparation possible was made in Pittsburgh to handle any development during the steel strike. This photograph shows a member of the state constabulary who rode his horse upon the sidewalk when he saw signs of trouble.

FROM A CLEAR SKY

By AGNES C. BROGAN.

Rosalie walked beside the tangled hedges of roses in her garden and looked wistfully up and down the road.

"Reckon," she said, "we may as well give up looking for some one to come or something to happen. Susan, we've been looking a good many years."

The black cat who was the lone little woman's only companion, answered by a sympathetic purr.

"Seems," Rosalie went on, "that we ought to get over expecting. If anything new or pleasant had been coming our way, it would have come when the old house was fresh, when father tended the rose vines and kept them neat, when carriages drove past our door with happy folks coming to town for holiday, or stopping in to visit."

Rosalie sank down upon a grassy mound and drew the cat into her lap, silent with her memories.

"Carriages come no more down our quiet lane," she told the cat, "it's autos now, great whirling autos flying along the great white road."

Rosalie rose to her feet smiling whimsically upward, "anything that will come our way these days, puss, must drop from out a clear sky."

And the woman stood gazing absently upward, a whirling sound coming not from the main road, rent the air. Then she saw it—the wonder thing with the outspread wings of a monster bird sweeping the sky. And before Rosalie could catch her astonished breath, the wonder thing circled, dropped, and still circling, came crashing toward her own neglected garden.

Like a throbbing monster it lay in the wide space beyond the rose hedge; and Rosalie, trembling, rushed to a man who frantically beckoned from its side. He was a young man and dead white.

"You'd better get someone," he gasped, "to help carry me inside. Nothing but a broken bone, I guess—awful far, but made landing—in time." Then the man of the airplane fainted.

When she returned with the assurance that help would soon come, the young man turned upon the cushions she propped about him.

"It's probably nothing to worry about," he said slowly, "but you never can tell. Might be internal injury. So I wondered—if you'd be kind enough—to write a sort of—message to a girl. You could mail it to her from me in case—" he smiled faintly. "Well, in either case," he said.

So Rosalie brought her best note-paper, and seated herself close to the great broken bird, which had soared toward the sky.

"Yes," she prompted.

"Begin it," the man said steadily. "Dearest," that includes everything."

"Dearest," Rosalie wrote, and waited. "Today only, do I dare to tell you that which has long been in my heart. I love you. Always, I think I have loved you—" She still waited as he lay with closed eyes apparently thinking.

Rosalie was thinking also. She had wished for something to happen. Something miraculous had happened, the "something" had darted into her solitude from out a clear sky. Romance itself, was close to her, and she, as usual, but an onlooker. She thought of this dearest "girl" far away, wondering if she had listened wearily for a step that never came back. But the "Dearest girl" did not live, she was sure, in an old house set far back from the road, where briars and cares grew thick, to screen and choke young life. The dearest girl's lover had not gone away years before. He was a young lover still. Neither had heartless parents sent him abroad to finish a medical education, killing romance—country romance they had called it, with one blow. And after twenty-five years the memory of that broken romance still had power to bring a mist to Rosalie's blue eyes.

He had married—her own lover of long ago—a gay creature abroad, who had not lived long enough to return with her husband to his home. And when he had returned, taking up in later years his father's practice of medicine, Rosalie kept resolutely and proudly out of his way.

As an auto rounded the curve, she jumped apprehensively to her feet and hurried into the house. It was the same step she remembered, which now crossed the porch, as the doctor carried ried the aviator upon his own broad back. The same confident laugh which echoed back from her sitting room.

Presently the doctor sought her out. "We shall need you," he said, but his eyes were upon her, as he talked with his patient.

And later when Rosalie and her lover of long ago stood together beside the airplane in the garden, the doctor bent to pick up a piece of paper.

"Dearest," he read, "today only, do I dare to tell you that which has long been in my heart. I love you. Always, I think, I have loved you."

He turned, as he was leaving, to put the paper into Rosalie's hand.

"I will come again this evening," he said.

And as she would have continued the young lover's letter, she saw beneath her own handwriting a hastily added line:

"This is my message to you, Rosalie, the message I, myself, would have written."

And when the moon shone through the old house windows at evening, she found herself again listening for a step.

The KITCHEN CABINET

A good deal of the trouble of this world arises from the fact that some folks like to have gardens, while others prefer to keep hens—Nixon Waterman.

THREE MEALS A DAY.

To plan meals three times a day for a family, trying to serve the food that is pleasing, keeping one's bills within the limit and providing a variety, and having the day's food well balanced, is the task of 20,000,000 cooks in this land of ours;

a task which takes real training and practice to be successful.

Cream Peach Cake.—Bake a layer cake and for the filling add a cupful of very ripe peaches put through a ricer to sweetened whipped cream that is flavored with almond.

Coffee Junket.—For a dessert which is wholesome and easy to prepare as well as dainty to serve, junket stands at the head. Take one junket tablet, crush and dissolve in a tablespoonful of water, then add to a quart of lukewarm milk. Reserve half a cupful of the milk and pour boiling hot over two tablespoonfuls of coffee, let stand until well infused, then strain and cool before adding to the milk. If the milk is heated too hot the junket will not thicken the milk. Serve with whipped cream on the top of the glass.

Lamb Cutlets.—Cook eight lamb chops on one side until well browned; turn and on the cooked side place a teaspoonful of seasoned cooked macaroni. Cover with buttered crumbs and let cook in the oven about eight minutes. Creamed peas served in a thick white sauce may be used instead of the macaroni, which will make a most tasty dish.

Ice Cream in Case.—Bake an angel cake in a round deep tin and when cold, cut out the center leaving a thick shell to hold vanilla ice cream and serve at once.

Cherry Ice Cream.—This is both good to look at and better to eat. Use a cupful of rich cherry juice and a pint of cream with a few drops of almond extract. Sweeten to taste and freeze as usual. Serve in sherbet cups and garnish with a cherry or a spoonful of minced cherries with some of the syrup.

A whipped cream filling with a half cupful of chopped preserved pineapple, makes a fine filling for a cake to serve at once.

Nearer Problem.

"I say, are you thinking of getting in your winter coat?"

"No; more concerned about not getting a freeze out on my summer ice."

Had to Divorce Him to Get It.

"I understand she married him for his money."

"Did she get it?"

"Finally, in the form of alimony."

Two Live Men

Occasionally some one becomes enthused with local patriotism for love of his community and takes it upon himself to do a real service, spending his time and sometimes his money to accomplish his purpose. People of this character are not particularly numerous, but we have them in Clackamas county in the person of William B. Cook and David Long, who, for several months, have scouted around the county for exhibits to take to the state fair at Salem, with a firm determination to show a display that would be a credit to the county. How well they succeeded is evidenced by the fact that Clackamas took first premium this week in the Willamette Valley district. Mr. Cook, as deputy assessor, is entitled to a vacation and instead of resting at a resort or doing something for his own benefit, has gone to Salem and taken care of the big exhibit that has attracted favorable comment from thousands of people.

The state fair is a great show this year. The exhibits of all classes are exceptional, the races are fine, and the crowds record-breaking. It is unfortunate that the management has permitted a lot of fake concessions on the grounds, and that gambling devices are permitted to run wide in an institution belonging to the state that says gambling is a felony.

ALLIED VESSELS TO START BLOCKADE OF GERMANS IN BALTIC

PARIS, Sept. 30.—The blockade of Germany, which was threatened by the allies in case the German troops of General Von der Gotha were not removed from the Baltic region, will begin today, according to the Intrant-sigeant. No food ships, it declares, will be permitted to start for Germany until further orders are issued.

Vessels now on the way to German ports, however, will be permitted to proceed.

BASEL, Switzerland, Sept. 30.—The efforts of General Von der Gotha to make his troops evacuate the Baltic having failed, says a Berlin dispatch received here today, "the German government has decided to recall him definitely."

HONOLULU, T. H., Sept. 30.—The volcano on Mount Mauna Loa on Hilo island burst into a new eruption late last night.

A wide stream of lava began pouring down the Kona side, destroying many homes.

The residents of the Kona side are reported fleeing to the sea, which is 30 miles distant.

The mountain, which is 13,000 feet high, first became active three days ago, when smoke and gases came from the crater. During the last two days the eruption had been subsiding, until late tonight, when the lava began pouring down the Kona side.

During an eruption in May, 1916, a cloud of steam and smoke was sent 20,000 feet into the air when Mauna Loa burst into eruption.

Mauna Loa's crater is 12,000 feet in diameter at its rim.

PORTLAND REPORTS FIRST CASE OF FLU; MRS. TOOZE VICTIM

PORTLAND, Oct. 1.—Mrs. S. A. Tooze of Salem was taken ill at the Multnomah hotel Monday with a disease which Dr. J. O. C. Willey diagnosed as a genuine case of Spanish influenza, the first bona fide report of recurrence of the disease since the epidemic of last winter. City Health Officer George Parrish ordered her quarantined at the Good Samaritan hospital, where she was taken before the final diagnosis was made. She had been living at the hotel for a time. Her sons, Walter and Lamar Tooze, live at Dallas. Her third son, Leslie, was killed in France.

Mrs. Tooze's case is mild. Parrish reported. Her temperature reached 103½ Monday but had dropped to 99 today.

Chronic.

"Is your husband still worrying about his automobile?"

"Constantly," replied Mrs. Chuggins. "I never knew a man to suffer so with silver complaint."

Had to.

"Why is that stupid attendant on the table always going up and down from the kitchen?"

"It must be because he is a dumb waiter."

Reversing it.

"Queer, wasn't it, those jousts of calvary?"

"What was queer?"

"Why, every knight made a day of it."
