Elixir of Youth

Hits Macksburg

MACKSBURG, Oct. 23.—With the haze of Indian Summer hanging low over the land, with the temperature of real summer at mid-day, though, both at morning and evening, we have crisp, frosty air—a tonic like the fabled elixir of youth—with the grass and the trees in all the verdure of spring-time, the autumnal days are passing swiftly on and gladly would we lengthen out this season of golden fruition, when the fruits of the springtime planting and of the summer's tending are being garnered in and the glad Thanksgiving is drawing near. Thanksgiving with the joyful tidings of peace still ringing in our ears instead of the faint whisperings of that blessing which were being waited toward us a year ago.

Hope gladdened was the Thanksgiving of 1918, with the thoughts that we could discern the beginning of the end of the great world-war and that the soldier boys might come home. Now their homecoming is a reality. They are with us once again and stronger, straighter, manlier, than before. Military training has taught them to bear an upright form while danger and hardship have developed in them a degree of bravery and patience which will go far to carry them over the rough places of which the world is so full.

While we regret that half of the autumnal golden days are past, we will not allow it to be a vain regret, but will follow the example of that constant, tuneful little friend, the meadow-lark, who seems to save his sweetest song for the darkest days. Home can be made as bright and cheerful in the cloudy days of winter as in the verdant spring, the sunny summer or the golden autumn by each one doing his or her little all to diffuse the light of affections radiant glow.

The Red Cross work has ceased. Not so the desire to help those less fortunate than ourselves, awakened in the heart of every working member of that organization. All are ready to respond to the call for help when it may come.

The Mothers' club is to meet in the present week at the home of Mrs. Frotonne.

Profiteers and Profiteering

While the country is undergoing the convulsions necessary in reconstruction there in an element more an noying than the Hun, in the individual be he workman or capitalist who views the problems confronting the nations solely from his own angle, and with special reference to the gains he will reap while the solution is being made.

In the mad rush to get while getting is good the rights of those outside the circle of profiteers and high priced labor is being ignored to such an extent, that their temper is well nigh exhausted. There is pressing work demanding the attention of a quarrelsome congress, who will find plenty of real work to demand their attention, and remove some of the causes of the present unrest.
