BROTHER OF MRS. F. ALLEN IS STRICKEN

Mrs. Frank Allen was called to her home, Idaho, Wednesday, by the sudden death of her only brother, Royal Hayner, aged 33 years.

The lad was attending school, and during the recess he, with a number of other students were engaged in play and were boxing hats off. One of the boys struck at young Hayner's hat, and accidentally struck the temple of the boy, but little was thought of the case until the boy complained to the teacher of having a headache. He returned to the Hayner home, and was soon stricken, when a blood vessel of the head broke, causing death six hours later.

Royal Hayner was a general favorite among the students of the school, and was the only son of Mr. and Mrs. Hayner. He is survived by his parents and three sisters, Mrs. Frank Allen and Mrs. Ada LaBaw, of Canby, Mrs. Pardy Rich, of Wasco, Oregon.

After returning to Canby they were given an old time charivari by a number of their friends, two groups having been formed, one of which comprised some of the employees of the Carlton & Rosenkrans' store, who were given a royal reception upon their appearance at the Miller home Monday evening. Cowbells, horns and everything that could make a noise was used by the merry-makers.

COE HAS BOUNTIFUL APPLE CROP

Canby Farmer on Small Tract Will Harvest 2000 Boxes

That Clackamas county has a bountiful crop of apples, the largest known in the history, can be proven by visiting the apple orchard of R. S. Coe, of Canby, where harvesting is now in progress.

Mr. Coe for many years was a bookkeeper for the Colorado Coal & Ice Company, and later was in charge of 1000 men on the outside. His health failed and he was compelled to seek the out of door life. He finally decided to come to Oregon, and settled at Canby on a little farm about 26 years ago. The land he purchased needed clearing, for there were stumps and all kinds of underbrush to be removed. The soil appeared to be fertile, and Mr. Coe set to work immediately to make necessary improvements to the land to plant fruit trees. Determined to try his luck as an orchardist, he selected the best of varieties of apples among these being the King, Spitzenburg, Jonathan, Ben Davis, Northern Spy, Baldwin, Ortley, Mann, Maiden Blush, Red Streak Pippin, known by many orchardists as the "Seek No Further" and there still remains the old fashioned Rambo. The Yellow Bell flower is also among the varieties in abundance this year on the Coe farm.

It is a sight worth seeing to visit this little farm, where apples of all sizes, flavor and color are being picked and packed away into sheds, barns and in fact all the buildings on the farm are being filled. Many have come to the farm from Portland as well as other sections to purchase apples. Mr. Coe believes he will have at least 2000 boxes of apples this year when all are harvested. There is one tree alone of Baldwin variety, which is laden with fruit and the estimate of the crop from this tree will be over 30 boxes.

Besides the apples ripening on the place, Mr. and Mrs. Coe are still enjoying strawberries and raspberries from their garden.

Although the farm of Mr. and Mrs.

having two acres of corn, most of Coe contains but 10 acres, most of which is planted to fruit trees, they have set aside a spot for gardening.

which has been harvested early in the season.

Mr. Coe has been offered a neat little sum for his farm, but says it isn't for sale, and as his farm is located near the Zion cemetery, jokingly says he is to remain on the farm the remainder of his life, as the distance to the cemetery will not be long. Although this farmer is 70 years of age he is one of the most active in Clackamas county.

It is largely through the efforts of R. S. Coe that the Clackamas county fair grounds were established at Canby. Since the fair grounds have been established there he has aided to a large extent in promoting the fair and donating towards it each year with products from his farm and orchard. He was one of the exhibitors at this year's fair, his apples attracting much attention.

Millionaires and Wage Earners

In the United States in round numbers there are 100,000 millionaires and 30,000,000 wage earners.

The government placed a limit of $1000 on the purchase of war savings stamps by any individual each year. Presuming that each millionaire purchased the limit the amount available to the government from this source would be $100,000,000. If each wage earner invested $1 per week in stamps, the amount realized from the workers would be $1,560,000,000, or more than fifteen times as much as the amount contributed by the millionaires.

The concentration of the wealth of the men of millions makes them a powerful factor in this and other countries. The diversion of the potential wealth of the wage earners, even of their savings, for constructiveness through their own channels would be better than the worshipping of false Gods, or of listening to the voice of the agitator who preys upon the wage earners and makes an easy living thereby.

PNEUMATIC TIRE FOUND TO GIVE MOST SATISFACTORY SERVICE ON MOTOR TRUCK

From Every Standpoint Pneumatic-Tired Truck is Superior.

"Contrary to the general supposition, it is more dangerous to be in advance of, than behind, the procession in the matter of introducing improvements in a motor car," said F. H. Akers, sales manager of an eastern motor car concern.

"I am reminded of this by the fact that just at this time all manufacturers are either equipping motor trucks with pneumatic tires or making it optional with the buyer."

"After the most exhaustive comparative tests with several trucks of the same model, some equipped with pneumatics and others with solid tires, our engineers found that from every standpoint the pneumatic-tired truck was infinitely superior."

"First—it was more efficient for the reason that it would travel at nearly twice the speed and thereby make twice as many trips in a given time."

Upkeep Cost Less.

"Second—The upkeep cost was almost unbelievably less, due to the fact that not only did we obtain more mileage on a set of pneumatics than on solids, but that the air cushion effects a wonderful saving on the chassis."

"Not only that, but after 2000 or 3000 miles the resiliency in the rubber has been exhausted or, as the motorists say, the rubber 'tires' (not a pun, but meaning fatigue) and acquires more the consistency of wood than of gutta percha."

"Also our engineers found that the fuel consumption was less for the well-known reason that any pneumatic-tired vehicle requires less power.

"Another factor that was much in favor of the pneumatics was the absence of injury to loads of fragile materials. Perishable goods suffer less in a pneumatic-tired truck than they do in a solid-tired vehicle, even though the latter go at half the speed."

"Lighting was another problem. 'First we had kerosene lamps and then came the carbide tank.'

"With some reason there was objection to this on the ground that it was dangerous."

"A lot of people had to be convinced that if the car got into a smashup the gas tank would not explode."

"It sounds ridiculous at this late date, but it is a fact, that although every motorist wanted to get away from the drudgery and the danger of cranking his car there was a tremendous opposition to every form of self-starter."

"We expected and were prepared for a battle when we decided that the right thing for a light, high-speed truck was pneumatic tires, but we have always believed it was our duty to give the buyer the best our experience dictated and so we went through with it."

"Everyone now admits the pneumatic-tired truck is inevitable, because it is the solution of most of the trucking problems, so we feel well repaid for our missionary work."

Luminous Paint.

Luminous or phosphorescent paint for clock dials and other surfaces: Heat strontium thiosulphate for 15 minutes over a good Bunsen gas lamp, and then for five minutes over a blast lamp. Or, heat equal parts of strontium carbonate and lac sulphuric gently for five minutes, then strongly for 25 minutes over a Bunsen lamp; then, finally, over a blast lamp five minutes. Or, precipitate strong aqueous solution of strontium chloride by means of sulphuric acid; dry the precipitate, and heat it to redness for some time in a current of hydrogen; then over a Bunsen lamp for ten minutes, and for 20 minutes over a blast lamp. Mix any of these with pure melted paraffin for use as a paint, and expose for a time to sunlight. The two former yield a greenish phosphorescence in the dark, the latter a bluish light.

The State.

That which is substantial and true in man's will is what we call morality and law; and this is what is divine in the external objects of history. Antigone in Sophocles says: "The divine commands are not of yesterday or today; no, they live without end, and no one knows whence and when they came." Moral laws are not accident, but are reason itself. When these moral laws or ethical principles, which compose the true substance of humanity, have authority in the actions and sentiments of men, when they are really carried out and maintained, then we have the state.—W. F. Hegel.
