MILWAUKIE CITIZEN PROPOSES NEW ROUTE FOR MT. HOOD LOOP

MILWAUKIE, Oct. 21.—F. M. Brownell of Milwaukie wants the state highway commission to select a new route for the Mount Hood loop. The commission is expected to make a decision as to the link between Sandy and Portland at the next meeting and Mr. Brownell has prepared a blueprint to show the route he favors is the most scenic and has the easiest grade of any heretofore mentioned between those points.

The route indicated by Mr. Brownell starts from Milwaukie and follows the Alder Creek road to Clackamas, 700 feet of this road not yet being opened. From Clackamas to Damascus the road is paved practically the entire distance, with the exception of a short stretch at Rock Creek bridge, where there is an 8 per cent grade, this point being north of Baker's bridge. From Damascus Mr. Brownell's location runs due east to a short distance, from Sandy, from Damascus to the vicinity of Boring and eastward the road is now macadamized.

The advantage which Mr. Brownell holds out is that by using the bluffs into the city too quickly, whereas over his route travel will be in the country all the time until Milwaukie is reached. Mr. Brownell claims special scenic features for his location, as he says Mount Hood is in view practically the entire distance.

MILWAUKIE FIRM DEFENDANT IN SUIT BROUGHT SATURDAY

The Koster Products Co. has filed an action in the circuit court to recover $2785.55 from Gibbs & Son, Milwaukie. The suit is for the balance claimed to be due for the purchase of a motor truck and wood from the California Barrel Co. and assigned to the plaintiff.

Reception Given For Captain Gay

MILWAUKIE, Oct. 23.—Several members of the Oregon field artillery auxiliary and several of the boys of batteries A and B, attended the reception given by the auxiliary to Captain and Mrs. Gay at the East Side Business Men's club. Pocatello Judge Takes Own Life

PORTLAND, Oct. 22.—Judge J. J. Guheen, a former circuit judge of Pocatello and a prominent figure for many years in Idaho politics, shot himself Tuesday morning at 8:45 while taking his morning walk on Lovejoy street between Nineteenth and Twentieth streets.

Judge Guheen was a patient of Dr. Wiley Jones at the Portland Medical Hospital, 619 Lovejoy street, and was suffering from a nervous breakdown which occurred a year ago.

Despondency resulting from the hopeless nature of his illness is attributed as the cause of his act. He was 58 years old.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 21.—A warning against the legalization of the closed shop as a step in the direction of socializing industry and even the government was uttered yesterday in an interview by Senator Sherman, of Illinois.

"The labor conference now in session has brought to an issue sharply divergent views," said the senator. "The open or the closed shop will never repeal the laws of thrift. It is an inalienable right for the individual to endure. He cannot be eliminated in any social plan. The freedom of his voluntary action must be preserved. The right to organize with his fellows in a labor union is as sacred as the right to remain out of a union but not more so. One right presupposes the other."

"If an employer prefers an open shop every law of the state or government must protect him in that right. If another chooses the closed shop he is to be equally protected. This principle is not subject to arbitration. If it be made a matter of government action or of arbitration an intolerant minority will intimidate congress and the executive until the closed shop will be the law of government as well as private life."

"It is to be regretted that the tendency of all closed shops is to restrict production instead of providing an incentive for the unskilled to reach a higher level of production, the skillful is dragged from his level down to the lower where diminished production results. Labor at last in the circle of prices saws off the limb on which it is sitting."

"Production cannot be increased by shortening hours to fewer than the laws of health and reasonable rest and recreation require. It is the evidence of those who know by first hand observation that reducing the hours of work to less than eight has reduced production and given no corresponding benefit either to the individual concerned or the public."

"We cannot hope to restore normal conditions with abnormal demands from those who are able to produce but not to found or manage any given enterprise."
