

BOLD BURGLARS MAKE ESCAPE IN BROAD DAYLIGHT

PORTLAND, Oct. 22.—Entering the jewelry store of M. L. Smith in the Hellig theater building at 9:15 o'clock this morning, three armed auto bandits bound and gagged Smith and robbed the store of about $2000 in liberty bonds, diamonds and money.

Smith refused to comply with the order to throw up his hands, whereupon two of the robbers seized him, carried him to the back room and tied his hands, inserting a bundle of rags in his mouth.

Pedestrians were passing within a few feet of the door during the robbery.

As the trio left the store Smith grabbed a revolver and fired six shots without effect. He worked himself free while the bandits were busy.

Police officers were on the trail of the robbers within five minutes. The robbers made their escape in a model 6-40 Hudson, according to by-standers.

PEACE CONFERENCE TO BEGIN ITS WORK IMMEDIATELY

PARIS, Oct. 18.—The supreme council today adopted a resolution that delegates of the great powers may sit on the various commissions created under the German peace treaty and may vote on questions before these commissions, whether or not their governments have ratified the treaty.

If the United States senate does not object, it is said to be probable that American delegates will take the places assigned to the United States on such commissions.

Germany is anxious to have the commissions begin their work fully organized, it is declared, and is particularly desirous of American representation on them.

Allied nations have agreed to make their nominations of ambassadors to Berlin dependent upon the manner in which the clauses of the treaty of peace are carried out by Germany, according to the Echo de Paris, which quotes a "prominent diplomat" as its source of information.

Consuls will be named soon for German cities, the newspaper says, and these officials will look after interests of their nations until ambassadors are chosen.

REPUBLICANS MAY BALK

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Republican leaders declared emphatically today that the senate would not consent to participation by American representatives in the league of nations or other international commissions until the peace treaty had been ratified by the senate and specific laws enacted later by congress authorizing such representatives and providing for their expenses.

"Her father struck me very forcibly."

"As a man of thought?"

"No; as a man of action. He kicked me out."

Delayed Vindications.

"Truth crushed to earth will rise again," said the hopeful person.

"Yes," replied the cynic; "but it's liable to have to go with a crutch for some time after."

Metallic Natures.

"Bilgins has an iron will, but he is behind the times."

"Yes," replied Miss Cayenne. "That's the trouble with an iron will. It's liable to get rusty."

THERE'S A REASON.

Hubby: I never realized you were so tall before.

Wife: I'm supposed to be—am I not your better half?

Amusing His Friends.

"I'm glad I'm bald," the fat man said. "Although perhaps you doubt it. I find my friends enjoy my head. They love to joke about it."

The Story of a Turret Captain

Promotion in the Navy comes quickly to those who qualify for higher ratings. In March 1899 A. P. Nielson enlisted in the Navy as an Apprentice Seaman, 3rd class. In April 1907 he was rated Chief Turret Captain. His pay today is $165.76 per month.

A man's life—among men!

Reel them off—"Rio," Gibraltar, Ceylon, Yokohama—all the great ports of the world—are they only places on the map to you—or are they ports where you've gone sailing in from the high seas with every eye along the shore turned admiringly on your big ship—your ship! Every ocean has a United States ship sailing for some port worth seeing.

If you've any call in you for a full life—join, and color all your years ahead with memories of things worth seeing—with knowledge worth having—with an inexhaustible fund of sea tales and adventures picked up ashore and afloat that will make you a welcome man in any company.

Work?—sure, and a man's work it is, among men.

Play?—well, rather, with a bunch of men who know how to play. These comrades of yours carry in their ears the sounds of great world cities, of booming guns, of swashing seas—sounds you will share with them and that will never die away.

And when you come home, you'll face life ashore with level eyes—for Uncle Sam trains in self-reliance as well as self-respect. The Navy builds straight men—no mollycoddlers.

MARIETTA

By MILDRED WHITE.

Caro Dalton fretted, because the kind of French poodle she especially desired was not to be found. Caro's whims were so many and varied that it was fortunate—or unfortunate, as the case may be—that her inherited wealth was not taxed in their fulfillment.

She had tired of the luxurious new car, the sailboat and the city apartment; her much-tried guardian was at his wits' end to please. Yet not to please Caro was to be himself miserable. For David Blair, junior law partner and trusted friend of the girl's departed father, had loved Caro with a deep, unselfish love, from the triumphant epoch of her first long dress and "done-up" hair.

She, unconscious perhaps of this love, had led her devoted slave a merry dance from the time of his instituted guardianship. David was given little anxiety concerning the various admirers who flocked in her train. Caro herself dismissed each promptly in turn. Now, it seemed her overwhelming desire was for some pet upon which to lavish her affection.

"A dog," Caro told her guardian, "is a faithful creature, responding unquestionably to one's moods."

"But why," David asked patiently, "must it necessarily be a white dog, and very small?"

"White, because I shall have to keep it bathed and cared for," Caro answered; "small, so that I may hold it in my lap."

The guardian sighed. Caro's explanations were as unsatisfying as the smile which accompanied them was charming.

"Better wish for a dog of that description," he suggested. "For you to wish is to have—is it not, Caroline?" There was a saddened note in the guardian's voice.

"Not always," Caro replied; she looked at him quickly with inscrutable eyes.

But as she drove her car that afternoon beyond her accustomed way, a small dog of exactly the kind she desired, came dashing out across a barren field to bark furiously at her intrusion.

Caro stopped the car, but the little animal continued to bark, until at length it paused breathlessly, to listen to her caressing voice.

"Come," coaxed the girl; "you dear little thing—!" And as she sprang down into the road the dog's feathery tail wagged fervently in greeting.

Before her astonished gaze he arose presently, waving his two fore-paws in the air, and executing a solemn dance around her.

"You funny thing," she exclaimed. "You little trick dog!" Before she could forbid the little white creature had leaped into the car, grinning at her in dog fashion from the front seat.

"He's mine," Caro told herself defiantly; "I wished for him." But the guardian failed to rejoice with her, when he learned the discovery.

Though the dog devoted himself jealously to Caro, David Blair insisted upon placing an advertisement in the "Found" column of that evening's paper, and following closely upon its appearance came a pitiful reply.

"The little found dog is my 'Fidget,'" came scrawled in a childish fashion. "He is all I have to love. He acts with me in the circus. Please bring him back to Marietta."

And though there was no further direction or address, David and his rebellious ward drove that evening with Fidget between them to the faraway grounds, where the traveling circus pitched its great tent.

The little dog of the loved Marietta was at once recognized by welcoming watchers.

"She didn't sleep last night," a palated clown said. "Fidget is all the folks Marietta's got now, you see. Her mother didn't live long after her death was killed in his famous jump last year. The circus had sort of 'adopted' Marietta since. Every one likes to see the kid dance with her dog, tho' it ain't much of an act after all. Marietta," called the clown, "come here, honey." And Marietta came.

A vision of flying golden curls and short ruffled skirts, she flew toward her pet, and had him in her arms. Then tear-filled, the child's blue eyes sought Caro's.

"I'm sorry," she said, "that you can't have Fidget, but I love him. And I haven't got anything else to love." The Dalton heiress nodded understandingly; her guardian noted in distress that her eyes were also filled with tears.

Suddenly, impulsively, the girl's arms closed tight about the childish form.

"Dear," said Caro, "do you suppose that you could possibly learn to love me? Would you like to come and live in a big, stone house with a garden; would you like to be—my little sister?"

"Caro!" David Blair expostulated, "think seriously what you are offering."

"I do think," the girl answered quietly. The old twinkle came back to her eyes. "Marietta will be more satisfying than Fidget," she said.

And as he stood looking down upon the two, David Blair's face softened into a great tenderness.

"I am afraid, Caro, that I have never known the real you," he said. And the girl's eyes again turned to his, reflected their radiant light.

LIVING COST GOES HIGH AT PORTLAND BUT DECLINES EAST

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—While Detroit was the only city to show a 5 per cent decrease in average family expenditure for 22 staple food articles in September, according to figures compiled by the bureau of labor statistics, seven showed 4 per cent decreases and eight decreases of 3 per cent.

Those in the 4 per cent group included Denver, Dallas, Indianapolis, Peoria. In the three per cent group were Butte, Chicago, Cincinnati, Kansas City, Manchester and Springfield. The 2 per cent group included Boston, Buffalo, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Omaha, Pittsburg, St. Louis, St. Paul and Washington.

In Portland, Or., and San Francisco there was an increase of 2 per cent; in Los Angeles an increase of 1 per cent and in Seattle and Salt Lake an increase of less than five-tenths of 1 per cent.

SAMUEL GOMPERS EARNESTLY ASSERTS LABOR'S LOYALTY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 17.—Without reaching a decision on recognition of the right of workers to bargain collectively—an issue which has been the subject of two days' debate—the national industrial conference tonight closed the second week of its deliberations. Adjournment was taken until Monday, when there is every indication that the conference will make a new start. A definite programme for procedure to that end being in process of formulation.

Declaring that "whether you like it or not, the masses of labor of the United States have at last found their ability to articulate through organization," Mr. Gompers in the most eloquent address yet heard on the floor of the conference, told the delegates that the laboring people are producing the wealth of the world and that, without minimizing the great contributions made by men of thought and direction to that production, the time had come when in America labor was determined to gain a fair share of the rewards.

Shaking his finger toward the employers' group, in which Mr. Loeve sat, Mr. Gompers bitterly assailed the railroad man for his assertion that the laborers of the United States planned to overthrow the government. Gompers shook with emotion and his voice quavered as he violently defended the loyalty and patriotism of organized labor.

SAFETY FIRST

Says the bulletin of the Halifax (N. S.) Automobile association:

Drive as if every other driver were a born idiot.

Drive as if all children and most pedestrians were bent on suicide beneath your wheels.

Drive as if every hill had a chasm at the bottom.

Drive as if every curve were a highwayman, a Bengal tiger and a stone wall.

Examine your car before you start, not after you stop—and you won't have accidents.

FOR REBUILDING WORN TIRES

Simple Shoe May Be Used in Manner Shown in Illustration—Practically Self-Vulcanizing.

Getting the most out of a tire is quite consistent with the economy program. One offering in this line is a simple shoe which may be used to build up a worn shoe in the manner shown. The new shoe has an inner coating of uncured rubber which becomes tacky when gasoline is poured on it. The tire may be used 20 minutes after it has been repaired. In warm weather the new shoe, by virtue of its uncured rubber, is practically self-vulcanizing.

Keep your tires out of oil puddles in the garage.

The pin connecting the piston and connecting rod is called the wrist pin.

Any steering gear is difficult to lubricate and requires more lubrication than is generally appreciated.

Remember to inspect the steering gear once a week. More harm can be done by failure of the steering gear than by any other accident.

Be careful that the spare tire on the rear of the car does not hide part of the number plate and that the plate is properly lighted at night.

THE MAY BASKET

By GENEVA A. ELDREDGE.

Scent of apple blossoms filled Cynthia Smith's living room, a clumsy bee tumbled up and down the outside of the screen door, and now and then a swallow darted across the sunshine, his blue wings glistening. Away down the street sounded the rat-tat of a drum, and Cynthia heard the patter of children's feet running toward the town square.

The screen door squeaked on its spring and a round-faced, brown-eyed little boy squeezed in, his eyes filled with surprise when he saw her sitting there so still, her work in her hands, and he stammered a little as he said: "Wh-wh, Aunt Cynthia, ain't you going to meet the train and see the p-parade?"

Soft and quick came her answer: "No, dear, not today."

"But Aunt Cynthia, they ain't goin' to be no more p-parade days, an' I got on my white suit, an' mother thought maybe you'd like to have a little boy what was all spic and span to go wiv you."

And his little face grew wistful and troubled. He had never seen an Aunt Cynthia like this before, so straight and strange.

He meant to know before he left just why she was staying home the day everyone else in town was going down to welcome the boys from France. So he crept up close and whispered: "Is it 'cause Joe ain't comin' home?" Tears sprang to her eyes as she gathered the little spic and span boy close.

"Yes, Teddie boy, that's just why auntie ain't going. She can't bear it."

Now that Teddie was sure he felt that he ought to say something to help make auntie happier, so he said as he stroked her face with his fat little hand: "Never mind, auntie; I've got a secret and maybe tonight 'bout dark you'll know it. Maybe right 'fore supper, maybe right after, anyway, don't you come out doors right that time, will you?"

And auntie promised to stay in the house. Then hearing his mother calling he scampered away leaving Aunt Cynthia alone with her thoughts. Slowly she closed her eyes and in imagination saw the town square filled with people, the train pulling in filled with returning soldiers, the happy greetings, and far and faint she heard the band and the cheering.

The hot tears trickled slowly down her face as she whispered, "And mine reported missing; my boy, who was the pride of my heart!" And then Teddie's happy little face seemed to shine out, and she remembered what a comfort he had been all the weary months, "And now he is coming to hang me a May basket, bless his dear little heart, and I must cheer up for his sake. I think I will plan a little surprise myself."

So she went into her dining room and set the pretty table, bringing in great bunches of apple blossoms to decorate it with until the room looked like fairyland in the pink and white dress. She frosted little round cakes and made an iced drink for the crystal glasses, and almost before she knew it, twilight came drifting down. The drums had ceased their rat-tat and happy voices called to one another in the street. "It's almost time for Teddie and his secret," she thought as she patted her hair into place. Then she heard steps tiptoeing up the board walk and a child's quick panting breath, and she smiled the old-time glad smile that she used to greet the boy with who was missing tonight when he came to hang May baskets at the very same door.

When two fat fists pounded hard on the screen door she waited only long enough for a small boy to hide before she opened the door, to find a dainty little basket, all fringed and festooned and fairly bursting with candy kisses, setting on the step.

"Why, how surprised I am," she said. "Who could have left this beautiful little basket here? Surely it's a mistake; some little boy must have thought Susie Grimes lived here."

Just then a small boy in white wriggled out from behind the snowball bush and called breathlessly, "No, no, Aunt Cynthia, 'tain't no 'stake, it's my secret and some more of it is 'hind the catain' tree. You come see." But just then a khaki-clad figure sprang out with wide-open arms, and then Teddie's secret was out.

"Oh, Joe," cried Aunt Cynthia as she wept in his arms, "how you must have felt not to find me at the train to meet you."

"That's all right, mother; I don't blame you under the circumstances."

"When Ted told me his secret I thought I'd wait and surprise you."

"Some May basket all around, hey? Say, Ted, it looks like frosted cakes and lemonade in the dining room; let's hurry for mess."

And as mother and son wiped the tears of gladness from their eyes, a little voice shrilled out: "You won't never cry no more on p-parade day, will you, Aunt Cynthia?" (Copyright, 1919, McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

CALVERTS ARE HOME FROM HUNTING TRIP IN SOUTHERN OREGON

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Calvert, who have been enjoying a six weeks' hunting trip in Southern Oregon spending most of the time in the mountains in the Roseburg country, have returned to Oregon City, having had excellent luck and getting the "limit" of deer.

They were joined in Southern Oregon by C. A. Prock, who has had much experience in hunting in the mountainous sections of Southern Oregon. After reaching the Prock home and starting out on their hunting trip from that point they pitched camp at three different places. They made 23 miles from Roseburg by automobile, six miles by wagon and ten miles by pack horses. While on this trip Mrs. Calvert, besides getting her limit of deer, also shot a 12-pound coon and a large number of silver gray squirrels.

Becoming enthusiastic over this year's hunting trip, Mrs. Calvert is determined to hunt for big game next fall and while in Portland a few days ago she purchased two handsome young dogs. They are thorough bred English blood hounds, one of which has been given the name of Queen, while the other one is King. These dogs have an excellent pedigree. The city of Portland has purchased several of the same breed for the police department to be used in trailing fugitives, and the late Governor Lister, owner of the father and mother of the animals, imported these from England at a price of $500 each.

Queen and King have been sent to Southern Oregon, and are now at the Prock home, where they are to go into training for big game in the future.
