

SALEM TAKES HARD FOUGHT CONTEST BY SCORING 7 POINTS

In the first three minutes of play Salem high school pushed the pigskin over Oregon City's goal at Salem Friday, and then placed the ball squarely between the posts, scoring seven points. After that experience, Oregon City bucked up, and played harder and faster than at any previous game this season, holding Salem well toward the center of the field, and once forcing the ball to within 10 yards of Salem's goal, losing it on a fumble.

In the last minute of play Salem negotiated a forward pass, but the ball was first fumbled before another player carried it over the line, and the kick was not attempted, though Salem claimed six more points.

Oregon City lost Hofer, who was a tower of strength, but was not allowed to play because of infraction of the smoking rules, and he threw out the game. Beattie's hip was whiplashed, and "Mike" Davis substituted until he was injured and the lad was unconscious when the team returned to Oregon City Friday night and spent the night at the Oregon City hospital, but late Friday night was said to be in no danger and regaining his normal condition. McDonald also sustained minor injuries, but stayed in the line up.

Hendricks, of Salem, was referee. The high school has a game scheduled on Canemah field for next Friday with Hillsboro. This is a return contest, the first game at Hillsboro last week resulting in a victory for Oregon City by a 13 to 9 score.

HOME DEMONSTRATOR IS SURPRISED OVER MARRIAGE PUBLICITY

Mrs. Arlis McMillan, formerly Miss Marie Anthony, home demonstrator of Clackamas county, who "stole a march" on her friends by going to Vancouver, Wash., last Monday where she was united in marriage to Arlis McMillan, has returned to Oregon City to resume her duties with the county.

Mrs. McMillan laughingly said on Friday: "Imagine my surprise when returning here Tuesday to find the story of my marriage in the Morning Enterprise. I had intended keeping this a secret until the first of the year, when I would sever my connection with the work in Clackamas county, but I had a delicious wedding dinner served by the women of West Linn in the Winkel hall. I was to give a talk on the work pertaining to the home demonstration department, and when the women heard of my marriage decided the dinner was in my honor. Even on the wedding cake was there, and I certainly enjoyed it, although my husband was not present, and it was a wedding dinner I will long remember."

Mrs. McMillan arrived in Oregon City last February, and is a graduate of the Oregon Agricultural College, having been sent here by the institution. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Anthony, of Albany.

Mr. McMillan has returned to La Grande, where he has resumed his position with the Pacific Fruit and Vegetable Wholesale company.

DEBATE ON LEAGUE OF NATIONS PROVES TIMELY EXPOSITION

While Miss Annie S. Peck, world famous as a mountain climber and writer upon South American subjects, does not possess the oratorical powers of Dr. E. H. Pence, pastor of the Westminster Presbyterian church of Portland, she held her own with that gentleman in their debate on the League of Nations at the Commercial club Tuesday evening. The attendance was not large, though more than 100 people were there, and it was apparent that most of them had their minds well made up, for no conversions were noticeable. The good doctor pleased the pro-leaguers and Miss Peck satisfied those who insist upon reservations.

In truth the action of the senate, in defeating by a vote of 50 to 48 the Hiram Johnson amendment to Article X of the League convention, dulled the interest in the question, for it now appears that the senate will proceed to the early adoption of the peace treaty, with the League attached, making only mild reservations and leaving the text practically untouched.

Dr. Pence talked entertainingly and forcibly and dwelt on the horrors of war. He believes that the League of Nations will be the saving grace that will prevent nations from flying at each other's throats upon the slightest of pretexts. Miss Peck did not condemn the League in its entirety, but she thought it should not have been linked with the treaty, and that so long as there is no immediate danger of war, more time should have been taken in its preparation and more deliberation used. She picked the covenant to pieces, bit by bit, and criticized many of its provisions as well as the framers of it, including President Wilson, whom she supported in 1912. E. E. Brodie, of the Live Wire program committee, introduced the speakers.

KELLY SUPERVISES FISHERIES BUREAU AT HONOLULU, H. I.

H. Leighton Kelly, of this city, former master fish warden of the state of Oregon, has been writing very interesting letters to friends here of his new work in Honolulu.

The Hawaiian government recently established a bureau of fisheries there, and sent Dr. Dean, president of the college, to Hawaii to the United States to see what was being done in fish propagation, and to find an expert who would take care of the work in Honolulu.

He returned to the islands with Mr. Kelly, who for the past two years has been special agent for the United States bureau of fisheries, spending much time in California, where he met Dr. Dean.

Mr. Kelly writes that the members of the fish and game commission are exceptionally able men, and the people of the islands very enthusiastic over the new industry. The newspapers are all giving much space to the fish propagation work, announcing that shipments of striped bass and other fish from California are now being placed in streams found suitable for that purpose.

Mr. Kelly has always shown great originality and resourcefulness in his work, and as executive of the Hawaiian fish and game commission, will undoubtedly place the new bureau of fisheries on a sound and scientific basis.

Mr. Kelly's many friends in Oregon wish him great success. He has had three years' experience in Argentine Republic and previously before leaving for the Hawaiian islands had an offer to go to Brazil to do some special work for the government there.

URGES SCHOOL ATTENDANCE

Children of Oregon City who stay away from school had better take up their books. Studying is much easier than having to face Judge Anderson in the juvenile court. For he intends to see to it that boys and girls who insist on neglecting their lessons are kept in school like other folks.

Monday afternoon Roy Brooks and Ignola Hem were given a lecture as to the importance of the three R's. They will be placed under special supervision by the court to see that they are diligent in their school attendance.

From Cause to Effect

(Portland Oregonian)

Last November there was adopted by the vote of the people a law which eliminated the publication of delinquent tax lists.

Today Multnomah county faces the largest tax delinquency in its history, and this at a time when there is probably better ability to pay than ever before.

As pointed out by those who opposed the measure adopted last November, there is more than one purpose in the publication of delinquent tax lists. The spurring of the property owner who would otherwise neglect promptly to pay his quota toward the maintenance of government is one of them. He is stirred to activity by the knowledge that if he is delinquent that fact will be made widely known.

When this measure was adopted the public had but recently theretofore had before it a wholesome example of the effect of publicity on other matters of delinquency. The duty of those who were able to subscribe to Liberty loans was patent. Some sought to evade that duty. The names of a few slackers were published with the promise that more would be printed if necessary. None but the first publication was necessary. The mere prospect of publicity was enough.

Publication of delinquent tax lists costs the public nothing. It is paid for by the delinquents. But a large delinquency in taxes in the long run is costly to all of the public. This year the percentage of unpaid taxes jumps 50 per cent over the preceding year. It is not difficult to reason from cause to effect.

SEEDLINGS PRODUCE FINE PEACHES

Delicious Fruit Comes From Trees on Hodge and Howell Places

Clackamas county is making a record in producing varieties of peaches in the form of late seedlings. On the place of Mrs. M. R. Howell, of Eleventh and John Quincy Adams street is a peach tree grown from sprouts of an old tree that was of an early variety. The former tree bore fruit that ripened in August, and since the sprouts have grown into a good sized tree the peaches are ripening at this time of year, and the last of the crop were picked a few days ago. They are of delicious flavor, large and juicy, and free stones, excellent for canning purposes as well as eating. There were about five bushels on the tree this year.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Hodge, of Gladstone, is a peach tree grown from a seed planted by Mrs. Hodge nine years ago, and has been bearing for the past five years. These peaches are a yellowish color, excellent flavor and of cling stone variety. The first of these were brought to the local markets Friday and placed on sale at $1 per box, and a good demand was found for them. The tree had an unusually heavy crop this year.

7 MILL TAX FOR ROADS PROPOSED BY SPENCE

Revision of the alternate plan favored by Charles E. Spence, master of the State Grange, to raise money by a direct tax for the permanent improvement of county roads has been made, it was learned Thursday, and three propositions will be submitted to the people at a special election, providing Mr. Spence secures signatures to his petitions in time to compel submission at the same time as the bond election, which will probably be held in November. The bonding plan provides for the issuance of $1,700,000 for the hard surfacing of 145 miles of road along routes designated, the grading and base for the pavement to be done at the cost of the respective districts, 10 in number, through which the roads are to run.

It was originally planned that a 5-mill tax would be proposed, extending over a period of 10 years, commonly known as the "pay as you go" system, but as the proponents dug deeper into the scheme, they determined that the amount would not be sufficient and now propose a tax of 7 mills, which will raise in 10 years about $2,000,000, or approximately $200,000 per year.

The plan contemplates that the districts shall grade the roads, but that the base shall be a part of the pavement and shall be laid at the same time as is the pavement and paid for in the same manner. In order to make this workable, the amount of money to be expended upon each road has been increased about 12 per cent. It is also provided that the property of the whole county, including the incorporated cities and towns, shall be taxed for the proposed road improvement.

The proposed new bridge across the Willamette river, connecting Oregon City and West Linn, is cared for under the Spence plan by a separate bond issue of $150,000, and is divorced from the millage idea, altogether, while under the bonding plan $105,000 is set aside for the bridge.

It is understood that Mr. Spence will have his plans whipped definitely into shape within a few days and will place his petitions in circulation. Under the initiative, only 8 per cent of the vote for supreme judge at the last election will be required for signature.

DRY BILL IS MADE LAW OVER VETO OF WILSON

WASHINGTON, Oct. 27.—President Wilson unexpectedly vetoed the prohibition enforcement bill today and within three hours the house had repassed it over his veto by a vote of 176 to 55. The total vote was barely more than a majority of the entire membership.

Dry leaders in the senate immediately began laying plans to repass the bill there. They expect to ask unanimous consent for its consideration tomorrow, claiming enough votes to put it through. They expect to act on it by Wednesday at the latest.

The president refused to sign the bill because it included the enforcement of wartime prohibition.

The objects of wartime prohibition, the president said in his veto had been satisfied, and "sound public policy make clear the reason and necessity for its repeal."

It would not be difficult, the president held, for congress to deal separately with the two issues.

During the service several selections were rendered, each of which were favorite songs of the deceased.

Many handsome floral tributes were sent from various parts of the state. Mrs. McCracken had visited at the home of her niece, Mrs. W. E. Pratt and Miss Katie Barclay on many occasions.

Mrs. McCracken died at her apartment in the Hotel Mallory, Portland, Saturday evening, after an illness of several months.

OPEN SHOP DEFENDED WARMLY BY HEAD OF STEEL CORPORATION

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.—Judge Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation, defended the "open shop" in an address before the American Iron and Steel Institute here today. He declared that his experience had shown that "the open shop is to the best interests of all" and that he believed the verdict of the people at large will finally decide this question.

"Every proposition contended for by the labor unions has led to domination of the shop and of the men by union leaders," Gary said. "Every position taken by the other side has centered on the 'open shop.' This is the great question confronting the American people and, in fact, the world public."

"About 80 or 90 per cent or more of labor in this country is non-union. It is for them and for employers generally and the large class of men and women who are not strictly speaking employers or wage earners, to determine whether or not it is best for the community to have industry totally organized."
