Local and County Items of Interest to Courier Readers

CHERRYVILLE

Road work, mostly laying planks, is in full blast.

August Beldenstein came home sick from Bull Run lake last week and has been under the doctor's care since then.

The Indians, who are camped down at the dam, say the very light crop of hazelnuts indicate a very mild and open winter.

Tom Galtreanu, who has been at work on a government trail around Clackamas lake this summer, returned home to his claim south of town last week. Tom says the bears are plentiful up there this fall. A fine young bear which they killed up there, he says, was the finest he ever ate. It was very fat from eating huckleberries.

The school here is about to install a heating and ventilating plant introduced by Mr. Shoemaker, of Portland.

The prunes are good here and a good many will be put up and dried for winter use. The fruit is very fine.

Archie Averill, who is employed as a draughtsman at Pullman, Wash., returned home for a vacation this week.

Mr. Darley and niece from Portland, are now at their new home on the Prof. Couper ranch, north of town.

Potatoes are a light crop here, especially the early ones. The fall rains have been very beneficial to the late potatoes.

Evergreen blackberries are a good crop and there is a ready market for them at fair prices.

JENNINGS LODGE

A splendid meeting of the Parent-Teacher association was held on Friday afternoon, September 14, at the school house. Twenty-two mothers and patrons were present. Mrs. Edith Truscott, president, presided. A song by the pupils and a pleasing recitation by Leo Cook preceded the business meeting.

Mrs. Carl Smith, the chairman of the Red Cross committee, reported that over $168.00 had been raised in this district for Red Cross funds by the teams and that we had become an organized Red Cross unit which meets every Tuesday at 2 p. m. at the home of Mrs. George Ostrom to sew, to which all are invited.

Mrs. Hugh Roberts, juvenile fair chairman, reported that the evening of October 5 had been set for the local school fair, at which vegetables, fruit, canning, sewing, poultry and project work will be exhibited.

Mrs. Hart spoke of the Woman's committee of the Council of National Defense and gave details of the conservation of food league and the need of registration on Saturday, September 15.

The needs of our community were discussed, among them were better cooperation between parents and teachers and cooperation of all in team work in the community and new side walks were our greatest needs.

The year books were given out and each meeting has a splendid program arranged and much credit is due to the program committee for its efforts.

A reception for the new teacher, Miss White, and a welcoming back among us of Mrs. Altman, with the serving of wafers and tea rounded out a full and most delightful afternoon.

EAST CLACKAMAS

A. C. Kelnhofer was a Portland visitor last Friday.

Lewis, the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Dae, who has been a very sick boy, is improving slowly.

Mrs. Kneeland has traded his ranch for some town property and moved to Portland last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Bryant and two children, "Grandma" Bryant and Mrs. Bryant's sister, were visitors at the Kelnhofer ranch last Sunday.

Mrs. Powers, the nurse who has been staying with Mrs. H. H. Blake, has returned to her home at Wichita.

John Heinrich has been doing some transfer business for his neighbor lately.

Mrs. Grace Gottberg and two children of Oregon City were berrying and beheading at Cedar Springs one day last week.

The same old trio of brave fishermen motored to the tall pines near Molalla and one of them said he discovered a lake on top of a mountain. They came home with the usual number of fish—none.

Gus and Emma Haberlach were Oregon City visitors last Friday.

The P. & O. C. railroad is doing a rushing business these days with wood and hay. They loaded two cars of hay last Monday at the switch (we do not know whether it is called Big Trees or Little Italy).

Mr. and Mrs. Hoffman and two daughters, from near New Era, visited at the Kelnhofer ranch last Sunday.

"Grandma" Heinrich, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Mundehenke and two children were Portland visitors last Sunday.

DAMASCUS

School opened Monday morning with Miss Hazel Driscoll and Gladys Burr as teachers.

Mrs. Barbara Fensler has gone to Fort Stevens to visit her husband, Corporal Clark Fensler, who is in the hospital with a broken leg.

Mr. Hall and family, and Mr. and Mrs. Peter Thompson attended the Gresham fair Saturday.

Miss Ruby Burr returned from the hay fields last Wednesday.

The school children are preparing a collection to send to the county fair at Canby.

Miss Marguerite Kersting, who is stopping in Portland, was visiting the neighborhood, endeavoring to start a music club.

Tharold Sylvester has been appointed janitor of the Damascus school.

BORING

Fritz Timmerman is dead, the cause of his death being dropsy. He was an old pioneer and lived on his farm, two miles east of Boring. His wife died last March, aged 73 years. Mr. Timmerman will be buried Wednesday at Pleasant Home beside his wife and mother-in-law.

The blessed rain has stopped forest fires, and thanks to the rain cloud grass is springing up, flowers are blooming and the air is soft and balmy.

Viola Mabel Duncan, the last child of M. A. and J. W. Strucken, is in the hospital, seriously ill. Her illness is caused by appendicitis, abscesses and a large tumor. Her three children are staying with "Grandma" Strucken.

J. W. Strucken is quite ill with a gripe and pluriy. He has been bedfast five days, but is now getting better.

EAGLE CREEK

The boys who went from Eagle Creek to eastern Oregon to work during harvest, returned home the first of the week.

School commenced in district No. 50 on Monday, with J. K. Ely, of Estacada, at the helm. There were 13 pupils enrolled.

Joe Cahill was the guest of home folks Sunday.

Mrs. R. B. Gibson took luncheon with her sister, Mrs. S. J. Eddy, of Portland, on Saturday.

G. W. Baker, who has been quite ill for some time, was taken to a Portland hospital last week.

LEGISLATION WOULD BE PROTECTION OF RIGHTS

Legislation to protect the civil and property rights of soldiers, in effect a moratorium for the duration of the war in behalf of men who are serving their country on the firing line, may be placed upon the administration's program for this session of congress as a necessary element of the raising of a citizen army.

"The soldiers' and sailors' civil rights bill," to carry out this purpose already has been introduced in both houses, having been framed in the office of Judge Advocate-General Crowder, Secretary Baker, it was learned, has under consideration recommendations that the entire weight of administration influence be brought to bear to obtain early enactment of the measure.

To save soldiers and sailors from all kinds of legal injustices during their absence from home, the measure would enjoin the carrying out of certain civil court actions until after the close of the war and establish as a legal excuse for failure to carry out certain contracts the fact that a man is in the military service.

It is proposed that creditors' suits against officers or men may be held up and judgment by default denied, the framers of the bill recognizing that a man in the army or navy would have no opportunity to make his defense in person or to arrange for its proper hearing through counsel.

If such a judgment rested against a man at the time of his enlistment, the bill would prevent its execution through the sale of his property during his absence. It would set aside the statute of limitations, so that a debt owed to a soldier might not be outlawed in his absence; it would prevent the eviction of his family while he was away if they failed to pay the rent; it would protect his equity in any real estate or other purchase contract in which he might have been engaged at the time he went into the army; it would protect him against the ordinary results of defaulted payments on business mortgages and keep him from being sold out in his absence; it would insure any rights he might have to public lands, although his service at the front had prevented him from completing the legal acquisition of the property.

Another element of protection the bill would accord to the fighting man would be as to his life insurance, which could not lapse through failure to make any payment. His property also would be protected from sale for taxes, and in every other way which the legal experts of the war department have been able to devise, all civil rights and interests of the men in the military service would be safeguarded.

Will be Repaid for Their Work

Women everywhere suffer from kidney trouble—backache, rheumatic pains, swollen and tender muscles, stiff joints—and it is to help those who suffer as she did that Mrs. C. J. Ellis, 508 Av., Sioux Falls, S. D., writes: "I feel sure if any one bothered as I was will give Foley Kidney Pills a fair trial they will be repaid for their work. It seems foolish to neglect an ailment when there is such a remedy to be had." They correct bladder disturbances, too.—Jones Drug Co.

TOMMY GOES TO CHURCH; WORKERS SAVE ENGLAND

One of the most interesting discussions of the war and its effect on Europe that the Courier has read, comes direct from the front from an Oregon doctor who is with the British medical corps in England. In part the doctor's letter says:

"Sunday is a curious day in camp. It is a holiday, save for the church parade, which is a rather strange institution. There are two services—the Roman Catholic and the Protestant. You must attend one or the other unless you are a Jew. Officially there are no atheists or New Thoughtists or Christian Scientists in the army. Compulsory religion is a poor thing, and I must say the effect of compulsory church parade is to make the men curse and swear more than on week days.

One of the most interesting studies in connection with the war is its effect on the religious attitude of the men. Of course, most of the men here have not been to the front and have not been facing the supreme issue. There is no doubt in my mind that camp life makes for irreligion. The men around me are average men, and I can not believe in civil life they are so indifferent to the higher things.

"A bad thing is that the chaplains hold the rank of captain, and naturally they can never get to know the men, for one of the first principles of discipline is that officers and men are different beings and do not mix except in moments of condescension on the part of the officers. In fact, the boys here look upon the chaplain's as one of the 'cushy' jobs. 'Cushy' is a new word of the war—it means a soft, safe job.

"The war will bring many changes, and I miss my guess if the church, as at present constituted, does not receive a severe jolt. The Church of England has always appealed to me as a picturesque, venerable institution, albeit out of touch with the times and antiquated. I fear age and antiquity won't protect it in the future. People are asking why bishops are getting £5000 and £10,000 a year, and what do they do for it. The church will have to reform its ways, and if the reformation does not come from the inside, it will come from the outside.

"My mind is full of hazy, ill-defined impressions. Two stand out rather distinctly. The first is a profound admiration of the common people. How foolish of Roosevelt and his ilk to be constantly preaching that peace softens the fiber of a nation. There never was a more peaceful country than England before 1914. The small professional army was sufficient to take care of the wars of the last hundred years, so the bulk of the people had a hundred years of peace to weaken the fiber. The professional army is no more—it is dead, crippled or prisoner. But this amateur, citizen army has faced hell for over two years. I have not been in France, but since coming to England I have formed a clearer idea of what trench warfare is. What is more, the amateur of the weakened fiber is beating the devil at his own game. You may say why limit the admiration to the common people? I don't, for the officers, if they have no other qualities, know how to die. I emphasize the common people especially for the private soldier gets all the dirt. Little of the honor and the glory comes his way and his pay is practically nothing. He is suffering and enduring, but he is 'carrying on' till the job is finished. I take my hat off to him.

"Then you are going to hear from him. And that is my second impression. The war is going to lead to a complete social readjustment. The common people have found themselves. They have had their power brought home to them, and I think you have seen the last of 10-hour days and poor education and insanitary houses and unfair division of profit. Frankly, in all of this I am with the common people. Unless capital recognizes the new era and meets the men half way, it is going to be made to swallow a bitter pill. Without some scheme of profit-sharing, the future of industry is a troubled sea. We have to revise our ideas.

"For example the government had to speed up the output of munitions and men and women willingly went to work for 11 and 12 hours a day. Then some scientists had to be called in to explain the disappointing output. Absolute, exact experiments proved the same work people produced a greater output in eight hours. We have all talked about the length of hours, but this is the first time, to my knowledge, that the hour controversy has been placed on an exact, scientific basis. Further when Lever, of Sunlight soap—he has the most wonderful factories and garden in the world—announces that he is making plans to give his workmen a six-hour day, it is time to sit up and take notice. Lever goes on the profit-sharing plan and he told his employees they would make more money as share-holders on a six-hour day than on the present eight-hour basis.

"I consider the working people of England have saved liberty and freedom and decency. France and Belgium are different—anybody will fight to defend hearth and home. The average Britisher to this day has very little conception of European affairs. The sinking of the Lusitania, the murder of Edith Cavell and the invasion of Belgium cannot be much more to him than the guarantee of neutrality of Belgium or the Bagdad railway. The invasion of England and a similar devastation as in Belgium are too fantastic to be even talked about. So I maintain—put it down to his ignorance of what would ultimately have happened to England if she had not allied herself with France at the outbreak of the war—that the average Englishman is really in this war for the defense of decency and public right. In any event, he has saved the day, and no reward is too good for him. And what is most admirable about him is that, in spite of great injustice and extreme hardship, he is 'carrying on' lest the end be endangered or delayed. Whoever else has failed in this war—the failure among the higher ups in all countries have been legion—the common people have practi-

RURAL CREDIT

GET OUT OF DEBT

OUR Twenty Year RURAL CREDIT plan of loaning money to farmers encourages saving and helps the borrower to get out of debt. Twenty yearly payments, made in any month which the borrower may select and each payment just a little larger than ordinary interest, wipes out the loan and frees the farm from debt. You can make these payments at your local bank if you so desire. You can pay this loan in full at any time, or you can make partial payments at any time at a definite figure stated in advance and interest stops on the amount paid. Under our plan, however, you can forget the principal and use your surplus funds in making desired improvements which will enable you to live easier and better; or you can buy additional livestock which will increase your income and the fertility of your land at the same time or you can buy an adjoining farm owned by someone who is not so fortunate as to have one of our loans. With our form of loan you have no renewals; hence no worry, no expense and no danger of foreclosure and you will live happier and longer. We will be glad to furnish you with full details on request.

DILLMAN & HOWLAND

OREGON CITY, OREGON

MRS. COOPER CHARGES

A VIOLATION OF TRUST

Charging that A. King Wilson, mayor of Oswego, and the city councilmen, gave a contract for the improvement of a county road in that town when they had no jurisdiction in the matter, Mrs. Julia Cooper, wife of V. F. Cooper, Monday brought suit against Mr. Wilson, the councilmen and the city of Oswego. She asks the court to restrain the execution of the contract.

According to the complaint the council some time ago received an initiative petition signed by more than the required number of voters asking that certain other streets be improved before Front street was considered. In violation of the will of this petition the council neglected the other streets and passed an ordinance covering the improvement of Front street, which is a county road and for the improvement of which the county should pay, Mrs. Cooper says. She alleges that the ordinance looking to the improvement of Front street was illegally and maliciously passed to make the petition of the people inoperative.
