

ORGANIZED TO GATHER

BOOKS FOR SOLDIERS

O. D. Eby, elected to the chairmanship of the Oregon City library war council, allied with the federal library council for a campaign to collect reading matter and funds for the training camp of the army and navy, has completed the appointment of his assistant chairmen and committees. Mr. Eby has announced the following list to aid in the work of gathering books and money for the libraries:

W. L. Mulvey, Mrs. H. E. Straight, Percy Caulfield, Mrs. J. E. Jack, Miss Louise Cochran, Mrs. Grant B. Dimick, Dr. W. T. Milliken, N. W. Bowland, Mrs. David Caulfield, Mrs. O. D. Eby, Mrs. N. M. Alldredge, Miss Edith Bullard. These persons will be chairmen in precincts Nos. 1 to 11, respectively, and in the order named. A special committee to solicit funds on Main street south of Twelfth street includes: George Hankins, E. G. Caulfield, W. A. Dimick, Willard P. Hawley Jr. and A. R. Jacobs. A publicity committee includes Earl C. Brownlee, W. E. Hassler and Miss Nan Cochran.

Aids for other communities are Mrs. D. M. Shanks, West Linn; Mrs. John W. Draper, Bolton; Mrs. Herbert Vornett and Miss Cis Pratt, Gladstone; Mrs. Viola Tate, Canemah, and Mrs. John Kent, Park-place.

The campaign will be more definitely outlined at a meeting to be held at the city library on this evening, when the officers elected at the first meeting will preside. They are O. D. Eby, chairman; Miss Cis B. Pratt, secretary, and Joseph E. Hedges, treasurer.

GIRLS GIVE LUNCHEONS

Honor Guard Will Meet Troop Train With Edibles and Tobacco

The Girls' Honor Guard has undertaken the collection here of lunches, tobacco and reading matter for the national guardsmen at Camp Withycombe, Clackamas station, who will pass through here on Monday en route for Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C. The girls held a meeting last night and decided to ask the women of the city to furnish individual lunches for the boys and to provide as much tobacco as possible in the forms of cigars and cigarettes. Magazines and cards will also be contributed. The girls will carry their gifts to the train as it passes through Oregon City early in the afternoon and they will be distributed by a committee under the direction of Miss Alice Holman and Mrs. S. Bowman.

Beware of Seed Grain

Swindler Will Try to Humbug the Trusting Farmer

The seed wheat swindler has taken time by the forelock. Understanding the sporadic shortage of good grain seed for sowing this winter and next spring, he improves the shining hour by putting a variety of frauds on the market, expecting to humbug the trusting farmers.

The department of agriculture is out with a sharp warning against these diligent pests. They are offering in particular a species of wheat called "Titanic" concerning which they promise all sorts of incredible wonders.

Farmers who have invested in Russian oats and that sort of thing in former years will be wary of these new impostors, but others without the teaching of sad experience to guide them may be taken in.

The government is taking steps to provide reliable seed grain for parts of the country where there is a shortage. We counsel farmers to invest in no untried seed without first writing to the department of agriculture or the Oregon Agricultural college for information. Every new and old variety that is worth anything is known to their experts.—Journal.

Divorce Granted

Judge J. U. Campbell Thursday signed a divorce decree separating Ella A. and Elmer H. Hitchman, giving the custody of the minor child to the father. The case went by default.

WHY PROFITEERS KNOCK

MR. DANIELS OF NAVY

Secretary Daniels' firm stand against "profiteering" and his refusal to pay exorbitant prices for fuel, steel and other materials and supplies for the navy has resulted in the saving of millions of dollars. Before war was actually declared the navy department got in touch with producers of steel and copper and on April 6 what is known as the "patriotic agreement" was made by which the steel makers agreed to furnish 310,000 tons of steel to the government for $58 a ton for plates and $50 a ton for bars and shapes. At that time the prevailing market price was $25 to $30 a ton higher than these figures. This meant a saving of more than $7,500,000 from market prices.

When it was seen later that the government's requirements would far exceed the amount provided for, the situation was discussed at conferences between the secretary of the navy, the secretary of war and the steel manufacturers, resulting in an agreement that government orders would be given precedence over any private contracts or orders and that the price be fixed by the government on the basis of the cost of production plus a reasonable profit.

When the coal operators tendered a price for coal for the navy which he regarded as exorbitant, Secretary Daniels early in June, ordered coal to be delivered at a tentative price of $2.35 a ton at the mines, the price finally paid to be fixed, after investigation by the federal trade commission, on the basis of cost of production plus a reasonable profit. The lowest price the operators had offered was $2.95. As the president had fixed the price at $2 and the amount needed for the navy is approximately 2,000,000 tons, this means a saving of nearly $2,000,000 from the lowest price offered by the operators and about $3,000,000 from the market price of coal at that time, about $4.50 a ton.

The same policy was pursued in regard to oil, of which the navy uses about 800,000 barrels in a three months' period. The tentative price Secretary Daniels fixed, $1.25 at Port Arthur and $1.08 at San Francisco, represented in the former case a difference of 42 cents a barrel and in the latter 21 cents from the lowest prices offered. Thus the saving in three months' requirements was about $250,000.

Great difficulty was found in securing additional ship tonnage to provide for the transportation of the oil needed. The rates demanded were very high, $15 for ocean cargo charter and $12 for "bare ship" tonnage, when the rates prior to the war were about $2.50 per ton for the former and 60 to 90 cents for "bare ship" chartering. To relieve the situation the government exercised its authority and requisitioned six tank steamships of an aggregate of 58,239 tons, allowing an advance payment of $1.75 per ton per month on "bare ship" basis. It is estimated that this will result in a saving of $590,949 a month from the prevailing prices of tonnage, or $7,133,397 a year.—Commoner.

INCREASE IN MACHINES

WILL PAY PAVING COST

The increase in the number of automobiles in the state of Oregon is far in excess of the gain expected during the year in making calculations for the payment of principal and interest on hard-surfaced paving bonds, according to E. J. Adams, member of the state highway commission. Mr. Adams recently predicted that the number of automobiles licensed this year will be 50 per cent greater than in 1916. The highway commission's estimate of expected increase made during the campaign for the bonds was 20 per cent, Mr. Adams stated.

"The other day I passed a California car on which the license number was 316,339," Mr. Adams stated. "The next car had an Oregon license number. It was 46,000. This was very gratifying as the total number of cars registered in this state last year was 33,719, and the number indicated that there has already been an increase of 95 per cent. It means that the increase for the year will be about 50 per cent."

Mr. Adams in his campaign for the good road bonds in presenting his argument that the automobile license fees would pay off the principal and interest, taking a $120,000 bond issue for illustration, said that an increase of 20 per cent in the number of cars licensed for five years and then an increase of 10 per cent for the next five years, without any increase during the remaining 15 years, would meet the obligation.

"If the increase in the number of automobiles keeps up anything like the present year, it will provide us with the means of raising $100,000,000 for roads in this state," Mr. Adams stated. "In other words, the automobiles will pay for building all the principal roads. We have 3000 miles of road, and if we spend $20,000 per mile, taking the roads as they are, good, bad and indifferent, it would cost just $60,000,000. The present rate of increase in the registration of automobiles would finance that and more, too."

"The men who own the automobiles are not kicking and they are not going to kick. If the roads are assured, they would not oppose even a higher license fee. It would save them money they must now spend for tires, broken springs, extra gas and extra oil."

"Another thing about the number on the California car. It was 316,339. The estimated population of that state in 1916 was about 3,000,000. The number on the Oregon car was 46,000. Our population last year was between 800,000 and 900,000. These figures show that California has less than four times our population and almost seven times our number of cars. That means good roads induce automobile ownership and automobile ownership builds good roads."

BROWN'S LETTERS THRILL

Pictures of the By-Ways of Our Northern Gold Bed—Alaska

The Courier for several weeks has been printing M. J. Brown's travel letters, depicting the actual conditions in Alaska, whose mysteries have never been fully revealed to those of us who know that romantic northland as a vast waste of icebergs, with an occasional oasis where the gold crops out like the wheat in our own favored land. But Mr. Brown has changed our ideas. He has gone into the dark corners, into the nooks where there is nothing but the awful expanse of that natural wonderland to greet the eye; where there is little save their own eternal hope to hold human beings to their dreams of golden treasure.

Mr. Brown has done more than any other traveler we have read to picture to us the realities of our northern possession. He has forsaken the highways and turned his footsteps to the paths and the trails of the hardy chaps who have hewn Alaska from the rough. He was forsaken the glitter of the thriving cities of that great country for the Indian village, the miner's cabin, the town that has nothing to show for its former glory but the dying embers of its hopes. He has gotten down to the people—the Cheechako and the Sourdough, and he tells us of them in man's language, every word of it readable, every word of it aiding to hold us to the next, almost spell bound. And we have come to know M. J. Brown's letters as a man's pictures of a man's land.

The muck stick rather than the cane is what Brown tells us of; the calico rag rather than the silk gown—that's the way Brown's letters impress us. We haven't missed one of them. We read them as carefully as does any one of our subscribers and there are many subscribers who enjoy the letters for the fact, among others, that Mr. Brown was formerly editor of The Courier and for many years a resident of Clackamas county. This week Mr. Brown tells some mighty interesting things about Alaska.

CALIFF IS BURIED

Young Soldier Accorded Full Military Honors by Comrades

Full military honors were accorded Monday afternoon at the funeral of Sergeant Carlton F. Califf, who was killed at Redding, Cal., last Wednesday when he fell beneath the wheels of a railroad car. Pallbearers were members of the 3d Oregon infantry and the regimental band attended the service and accompanied the body to Mountain View cemetery. Major Gilbert, regimental chaplain, conducted the services at the Presbyterian church, where scores of friends of the young man were present.

A quartet composed of Mrs. W. C. Green, Miss Naomi Armstrong, John W. Loder and Dr. F. P. Schultze, sang "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," "Rock of Ages," and "Abide With Me." At Mountain View the military honor took the form of a salute and the sounding of taps over the grave. The young man's body was buried at the side of the grave of his mother.

ANTI-DISEASE MEETING

Local People Interested in Prevention of the White Plague

Alarmed by war's destruction through tuberculosis as well as bullets, delegates from Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana, Wyoming and Utah have been called into conference at Portland, October 15 and 16. It will be the first conference of the kind ever held in the northwest.

The first consideration will be means of checking the ravages of the disease in trenches and army camps and at home. Participation of the public in an elaborate campaign as a measure of vital war service will be considered.

On Monday, October 15, there will be a series of reports and analysis on "Diagnosis of Tuberculosis in War Times." Answer will be sought to the difficult question, "What constitutes a diagnosis of tuberculosis sufficient for rejection from the army?" C. D. Latourette, Mrs. J. W. Norris and C. E. Spence of Oregon City, are directors in the Oregon Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis, under whose auspices the Portland convention is to be held.

"DAVE" GETS BIG SCORE

Opening of Elks Club Bowling Alleys Attract Herd of Experts

"Dave" Williams stepped into the limelight with the opening of the Elks club bowling alleys for the season last week. The alleys have been groomed down as in fine shape for the clique of speedy bowlers of which Williams is one. He annexed a score of 214 "right off the bat," and got his name into the first position on the bulletin board. On the other hand, such illustrious sportsmen as Judge John N. Sievers turn their attention to the ten pins and the big missiles and get credit for a score of 58 points. Williams refuses to sign up with Judge Sievers' team.

Never Bothered Since

After suffering with terrible pains in his back and round his kidneys for eight years, and after having tried several doctors and different medicines, Alvis Souers, Ado, Ind., writes: "Foley Kidney Pills were recommended to me and the first bottle removed the pain. After taking three bottles the blotting was all gone and has never bothered me since." When relief can be had so quickly why not banish backache, rheumatic pains, stiff and swollen joints caused by disordered kidneys?—Jones Drug Co.

MAN HUNT BY PORTLAND COPS PROVES A FIASCO

The chief feature of a "turmoil" man-hunt staged on the banks of Johnson creek near Milwaukie on last Thursday, was the spectacular, brass-band antics of the Portland police department, according to Clackamas county officers who participated in a chase after Frank Miller, paroled convict. Portland papers supplied beautiful music by telling of the thrilling revolver duel that accompanied Miller's capture by one of the Portland officers.

Miller was reported to be in the vicinity of Hendee station, where he robbed a house. Being wanted in Portland for a series of robberies, Portland police went in search of the man. They brought about half the uniformed force and all the spare detectives in town, together with several deputy sheriffs and an automobile load of newspapermen who make the police station their headquarters.

With such a personnel and with the brushy banks of Johnson creek as a stage for their thrilling tale, the newspaper men worked up a fine little story. They told how Miller several times escaped the vigilant detectives and how finally Detective Goltz cornered the fugitive in the brush and pressing a dangerous looking gatting gun at the brow of the convict had him come crawling backward from the bushes. But before that the daring Miller, according to the fiction in the case, had held up and outwitted a couple of the finest sleuth hounds in the Portland department and had escaped the perfect aim from a score of guns. A revolver battle between Miller and the detectives endangered the lives of "scores" of Japs engaged in their gardens nearby, and it was a "miracle" that some of the officers were not shot through their brave hearts.

Bullets flew fast and furiously for some time, say the papers of the metropolis. Not a single bullet was fired, says Constable D. E. Frost, of Clackamas county. Portland had a great delegation out to witness the exciting man-hunt and Clackamas county's sole representative was Jack Frost. That is why the Portland officers would not release the prisoner to Clackamas county when he was caught within this county, but took to themselves the glory of the most hair raising chase since Harry Tracy mandered through our verdant territory. They also copped the reward. At any rate, Miller was captured and will be returned to Salem to serve the six years remaining of a seven year sentence. He will be booked now as a parole violator.

Constable Frost charges the Portland officers with "grandstand playing," and charges that not a shot was fired in the chase. Instead of capturing Miller in the thicket and having him crawl out backward, they took him captive in the county road in plain view of everyone, Frost says. Frost accuses newspaper men and the officers of making heroes of the captors when not a heroic deed was done by the Daredevil Dicks of Portland. The only thing lacking to make the show a success was a band, says the constable, which the Portland officers thoughtlessly left behind them. The officers misrepresented the facts in order to gain glory for themselves, Frost charges.

Rev. Curtis Resigns

The Rev. Oliver L. Curtis has resigned his pastorate at the Gladstone Christian church and will undertake work elsewhere. The pulpit at Gladstone has not been filled permanently and the board is of a mind to have it supplied each Sunday by some visitor. Mr. Curtis has announced no definite plans for the future. Oregon City has no Christian church and many members of that denomination in this city are members of the Gladstone congregation.
