"INFLUENCE" FAILS

Drafted Soldiers Need Not Hope for Favors from Washington

It is only a waste of postage, letter paper and time for a man whose claim for exemption from the draft on industrial grounds has been denied by his district exemption board, or for any of his relatives or friends, to write to his senator, or his congressman, or the provost marshal general, or the president of the United States, trying to have the ruling of the board reversed.

Strange as it may seem, a great many such letters have been written. They have poured in by the hundreds to officials at Washington. Some of them have come from Oregon.

These letters will do no good whatsoever. They will not even be considered, but will be returned to the sender. If a man having real grounds for appeal wishes to prejudice his case beforehand, the surest way for him to do it is to write to his senator, or representative, or to some official in Washington to use his "influence" toward fixing up the exemption.

There is just one procedure whereby an appeal may be taken to the president from the ruling of a district board. That is through the district board itself, in the manner prescribed by official regulations.

LIVESTOCK INDUSTRY BOOMS IN CLACKAMAS

The campaign the last several years in behalf of livestock as an industry is, according to R. A. Blanchard, agriculturist of the Livestock bank of North Portland, bearing fruit now, and he says the outstanding feature of the east Clackamas county fair last week at Estacada was the increased interest shown in the livestock department.

"The remarkable thing," he added, "was that the entire exhibit in the swine division contained entries from members of the Estacada Boy's Pig club."

"The east Clackamas fair for several years has portrayed the excellence of the country's wealth, but little attention has been given to livestock. Today the section around Estacada is fast becoming an important little hog-producing section. Through the efforts of F. A. Ewing, of the Portland Railway, Light & Power company, the first pig club was organized. There are 12 active members between the ages of 10 and 18 years regularly enrolled and following the instructions of the Oregon Agricultural college."

"The exhibit was educational. The hogs varied in weight from 185 to 195 pounds for a 9-month-old animal, the boys making a profit above all cost from $2 to $15, according to skill and diligence in feeding and care."

"Clackamas county is on the rise in livestock production. Estacada made her first carlot shipments to market two years ago. Fourteen head of registered sows have been imported."

"The Estacada State bank is behind the movement, offering finances wherever advisable. This progress is a good indication of what a community with its bank and men like Ewing can do."

CLASSES WILL START

Dr. Milliken Gives Courses Under U. of O. Extension Service

Dr. W. T. Milliken is preparing to open his classes in several subjects in which young people are interested and will start his private school early next month. Dr. Milliken offers his classes free of cost to ambitious young folk, including certain subjects under the direction of the University of Oregon extension department. He expects to have an enrollment larger than that of last year when there were approximately 30 pupils. Courses in geology, Spanish and psychology, for which university credit toward a degree will be allowed, are those to be offered under the extension service.

Each year Dr. Milliken arranges courses of study for the young people of the Baptist church and others who care to spend their spare hours over books, and his payment for the large amount of work involved is the pleasure of seeing the young people make progress. The only fees involved are those set by the university in courses given under the direction of that institution.

FIKSE WANTS DECREE

Former School Superintendent Says Wife Hampered Work

Charging his wife with cruelty and jealousy, Jay V. Fikse Friday filed suit in the circuit court for divorce from Lavina Fikse, whom he married at Vancouver, Wash., on January 31, 1900. Fikse was formerly county superintendent of Clarke county, Washington, and says that his wife hampered his success by her lack of interest in his work. Too much religion on her side of the family is intimated by charges that Mrs. Fikse told her husband he was a sinner and that he wasn't bound for heaven. He offers to pay $20 a month toward the support of a 15-year-old daughter, Alta Fikse.

M'CALLUM GOES EAST

Pastor of Congregational Church to Accept College Post

The Rev. J. W. MacCallum, pastor of the Congregational church in this city for the past year, will resign his pastorate and accept the secretaryship of the Fisk University, Nashville, Tenn., a post offered him while he was away on his vacation. His resignation will be effective on October 1, and he will leave at once for the South, going by way of Cleveland, Ohio, to attend the conference of Congregational ministers. Mr. MacCallum came to the local church from Portland about a year ago and has done a great deal to build the church up here. He entered wholeheartedly into civic undertakings and is a member of the commercial club and of the Live Wires of that organization.

GOVERNOR OBJECTS TO GEN. WHITE'S PLAN

Orders from the war department at Washington and requests from Governor Withycombe at Salem have collided and, as a result, Adjutant General George A. White, of Oregon, doesn't know whether he is to remain in charge of the office or proceed to the front with the rank of major.

According to the war department General White's services are needed at once at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C., to aid in preparing the expeditionary forces for the battlefields of Europe. According to Governor Withycombe, the services of General White are so essential to further military work in this state that the Oregon executive has decided to ask the war department to postpone the general's departure for Camp Greene.

Orders were issued at Washington Saturday placing General White with the 41st infantry division for service in France. General White was directed to report to Camp Greene as major, adjutant general, assistant divisional adjutant. The assignment was made upon the general's own request that he be attached to troops during the period of the war. General White had completed all arrangements to leave Portland within the next few days.

Monday, however, dispatches from Salem went to the effect that Governor Withycombe had announced his intention of asking the war department to alter its orders so that General White may remain for several months longer in Oregon.

"Adjutant General White is familiar with the draft work, and also with other military work that is under way in this state, and we need his services here for at least a few months longer," said Governor Withycombe. "I will ask the war department to relieve him from reporting at Camp Greene until the important work of his office in Portland has been completed."

MILLER BACK TO PEN

Prisoner Turned Over to Sheriff Wilson. Goes to Salem

Frank Miller, the paroled burglar who was captured by Detective John Goltz of Portland last Thursday, after a sensational pistol duel, was returned to Clackamas county Monday night by Sheriff Wilson and Deputy Sheriff Jack Frost. Miller has been held in the Portland jail while showing Detectives Hellyer and Tackaberry where he hid the articles he stole from several houses. Nearly the entire amount of his plunder has been recovered, and will be returned to the owners. Miller is under parole from the Oregon penitentiary, and will be returned to round out his seven-year sentence, of which he has served only one year.

Baltimore Divorced

Circuit Judge Campbell Saturday issued a divorce decree to Phillip Baltimore from Mary Baltimore.

OLDER BUT STRONGER

To be healthy at seventy, prepare at forty, is sound advice, because in the strength of middle life we too often forget that neglected colds, or careless treatment of slight aches and pains, simply undermine strength and bring chronic weakness for later years.

To be stronger when older, keep your blood pure and rich and active with the strength-building and blood-nourishing properties of Scott's Emulsion which is a food, a tonic and a medicine to keep your blood rich, alleviate rheumatism and avoid sickness. No alcohol in Scott's. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J.
