The Thinking Farmer

Efficiency is nowadays a much-abused word and has come to mean anything from a card index crank to German ruthlessness. In its true sense, however, efficiency means getting the greatest results with the least cost. In large commercial establishments an efficiency expert is often employed to study the work of the institution and to so organize and arrange it that the most effective work may be done.

The farmer, however, can not do this. The work of the farm and ranch changes so rapidly and is so different on different farms that the plans of the best efficiency expert would be out of date in a few days. Every farmer must be his own efficiency man, and an efficiency expert is nothing more than a man who applies brain power to everything he attempts.

It would naturally be assumed that a man thinks about whatever he was doing, but the actual facts are that thinking is work and the most natural thing in the world is to dodge all the work possible. The average man will do a piece of work in the first way that comes handy, without thinking whether there may not be another way to do better work in less time. It is claimed that philosophers disputed for a long time the question whether a bowl of water with a fish in it weighed any more than without the fish. At length some efficiency man did the weighing and settled the question. We have heard farmers argue which was the best way to put up hay when a fraction of the time spent in talk would have put up the hay.

We know a certain man who is an efficiency farmer; in other words, a "good manager." He does his work well and he can "turn off work," as we say. He keeps very few books, but he can tell out of his head what it will cost to do practically any piece of work on the farm and to do it in any of several ways. He knows almost to the minute how long it takes to do any of the many chores and errands about the place. When he returns from a trip away from the farm he knows at a glance whether his men have done a proper day's work in his absence. If a man gets a piece of work done at 4 o'clock he knows at once what to put him at to keep him busy the remaining two hours of the day. He is not a genius, but he uses the talents given him every minute of the time and he will soon be out of debt, where many a more brilliant man would still be working for wages.

It is indeed marvelous what can be accomplished by the man who persists in thinking carefully about what he is doing.—E. L. Porter in the Oregon Farmer.

Wilson Sues for Rent

Peter Wilson Thursday brought suit in the circuit court against Mr. Alt to recover $225 said to be due as rent on 320 acres of land near Logan. Wilson claims that Alt has failed to pay the rent according to the agreement they had, whereby Alt was to pay for the use of the farm in installments.

A Valuable Health Hint

If the bowels are not working regularly, undigested food in the stomach may set up a condition of auto-intoxication and pollute the whole system with poisons in the blood stream. Foley Cathartic Tablets keep the bowels open and regular, the liver active and the stomach sweet. They cause no pain, nausea nor griping. They relieve indigestion, sick headache, biliousness, sour stomach, bad breath or other conditions caused by clogged bowels.—Jones Drug Co.
