CALL FOR MORE MEN FOR NATIONAL ARMY

SECOND 40 PER CENT OF QUOTA
ORDERED TO REPORT.
21 MEN GO TO CAMP

Another 40 per cent. of Clackamas county's quota of soldiers for the new national army was called this week to report to Sheriff Wilson at Oregon City on October 3. The call, coming from federal authorities through County Clerk Iva Harrington and Sheriff Wilson, will take 21 more men from the county to the national army cantonment at American Lake, Wash. Entraining orders will be forwarded to the county by Adjutant General George A. White as soon as they are prepared.

With this 40 per cent. of the total quota, 85 per cent. of the total from this county has been called, leaving only a few more men to respond to the country's summons for the first draft. The second quota of drafted men, however, will not be examined before the last 15 per cent of the first draft list has been called into service.

Those to whom County Clerk Harrington is issuing orders to appear on October 3 are: Maynard Cole, Milwaukee, R. D. 2; Ferdinand A. Scott, Oregon City; Charles Wilson, Elmer, Bull Run; Rafael Tuniz, Canby; Anton L. Olson, Mount Angel; Otto Hogg, Oregon City; Ralph Mandeville Canby; Abraham Amelle, Milwaukie; Roy Funk, Boring; Edward Pamperin, Sherwood; Louis Fredrick Kieling, Aurora; Edward Hoffman, Sandy; Jake Albert Mitts, Canby; Frank Linhart, Sandy; William Dale, Estacada; Ernest J. Bauer, Sherwood, R. D. 2; Frank Thurman Hunter, Clackamas, R. D. 1; Conrad Cockerline, Estacada; William Welch, Gresham; Albert W. Frederick, Oregon City; Carl Baxter Mumpower, Oregon City, R. D. 2.

Alternates called to provide substitutes in case some one of those called among the 21 is excused are: Harry Crawford Reid, Estacada; Ennis Sherman Townsend, Bull Run; Walter Sidney Smith, Mulino; Ray Leigh Francisco, Oregon City; Ardius Stefani, Molalla.

Adjutant General White, in a message delivered here Tuesday, cautioned the officials that only white men are to be included in the quota. Clackamas county has only one colored person on its entire draft list.

ZIP! THIEF TAKES A WHEEL OFF MILLER CAR

Death at sunrise to the villain who swiped one of the front wheels, tire, spokes and all, from Fred Miller's new automobile. Fred spends the daylight hours as chief deputy in County Clerk Harrington's office and here of late has been devoting the few twilight hours before and after dinner building a new garage on his property at Gladstone. All in honor of the new car.

When Mr. Miller awakened at four o'clock Wednesday morning and heard the noise of a balky motor in the street he thought little of it and went back to his dreams of long tours and pretty roads—with never a puncture to mar their delight. Along about six o'clock Fred, anxious to take another look at his brand new automobile, changed his tune when he found one front wheel had been stolen. The thief jacked the car up and handled Miller's tools in a very careful manner, putting everything back just as it should be after he had secured the wheel he wanted. Mr. Miller ordered a new wheel Wednesday afternoon.

OLD SOLDIER INJURED BY ACCIDENTAL SHOT

The accidental firing of an old revolver in the hands of Miss Maude Moore, of this city, Monday painfully injured Dan Williams, a Civil war veteran and member of Meade post G. A. R. Mr. Williams took the old gun into the Miller & Parker garage to have it repaired. He held it out and attempted to pull the trigger, not knowing the weapon was loaded, thereby endangering Miss Moore, with whom he was talking. Unable to pull the trigger he handed the gun to the young woman saying that it was not loaded. Miss Moore pulled at the trigger and the force of the pull drew the gun in the direction of the old soldier just as it was discharged. The 32-caliber bullet penetrated the man's shoulder and lodged in the muscle. Dr. C. H. Meisner extracted the ball and declared that the injury was not serious.

HONOR SOLDIER

In honor of John Thomas Hindle of Redland, who left Oregon City Friday for the national army cantonment at American Lake, 100 residents of his home community turned out Wednesday night to a social held at the Bethel church. The young man who will soon don the garb of Uncle Sam's great army was the honored guest. Mr. Armstrong acted as chairman of the affair and delicious refreshments were an addition to the fine program that was presented.

GOOD ROAD COST MORE THAN 1916

JUDGE H. S. ANDERSON FIGURES THAT PAVED HIGHWAYS IN 1917 COST $26,680.80

NEARLY 7 1-2 MILES SURFACED

County Has Paid Out $56,495 For Hard Surfaced Roads Since
It Bought a Plant

That a total expenditure of $26,680.80 was made for hard surface pavement in Clackamas county in the present year, is shown by a comprehensive summary and detailed report on the county's road work in 1917, just completed by Judge H. S. Anderson. According to the report and summary three and one half miles of surface were laid during the year, equalling 32,421 square yards, at a cost, for surfacing, of $8480 a mile. The average cost for each of the 32,421 square yards is placed at 91 cents in Judge Anderson's figures. Including the grading which was necessary to put much of the road in shape for the surface, the total cost for the average mile is brought up to $9750.

Of the amount expended on paving Judge Anderson places $11,885.18 as the cost of labor; $15,401 as the cost of materials; incidentals and upkeep, $2,107.11 and the allowance for interest and depreciation is $486.57. The cost of all grading done during the year on roads designated for hard surface was $4445.36.

The county's hard surface program for the year was carried out in four units and Judge Anderson's report covers each unit separately. Unit No. 1 is counted as that part of the East 82nd street road from the point where paving stopped in 1916 to the Multnomah county line. The length of this unit is 3679 feet or 7-1/10 of a mile. It contains 6541 square yards of hard surface and the total cost was $6422.48, or an average cost of 98 cents a yard for the paving laid by the county's own crews and with county-owned machinery. The cost of the labor on Unit No. 1 was $2545.77; material $3353.43 and incidentals and upkeep, $523.28. Grading the unit cost $978.59 for labor and $137.51 for materials. The average length of haul of material from the mixer to the scene of the paving operation on this unit was two miles, and for the hauling three trucks were used. Including the cost of grading on this unit the total cost was $7538.58, or an average of $1.05 per square yard.

Unit No. 2 was on the East 82nd street road from the S. P. crossing to near McKicks' corner. It was 2542 feet in length and contains 4259 square yards of hard surface. The pavement is 10 feet wide for 330 feet on Pope hill and throughout the rest of its distance is 16 feet wide. For grading and surfacing, including all costs, the unit cost a total of $4249.02, or an average of 97 cents a square yard. The pavement alone averaged in cost 82 cents a square yard, or a total of $3523.64, including $1261.05 for labor, $1911.87 for material and $340.72 for incidentals and upkeep. Grading cost $578.51 for labor and $156.77 for material. On the paving the average haul was three and one-quarter miles from the mixer and five trucks were used.

Unit No. 3, the most expensive paving laid by the county this year, is on East 82nd street from near E. Dedman's home to Clackamas station, and represents a total cost, grading and paving, of $10,943.00, or an average of $1.21 a square yard. The unit is 5068 feet long and contains 9010 square yards of hard surface. The pavement cost $3474.46, including $3904.93 for labor; $4348.73 for material and $720.80 for incidentals and upkeep. The length of haul from the mixer, five miles, helped boost the cost on this unit to an average of $1.05 for the paving alone. Five trucks were used to make the necessary hauls. Grading on unit No. 3 cost $1469.14, including $1367.38 for labor and $101.76 for material.

The cost of unit No. 4, extending along the river road south from Island station, a distance of 7094 feet, was $11,394.96 for everything. The average cost per yard was 90.3 cents a yard. The pavement on the unit cost $10,270.22, $3973.43 for labor; $5287.91 for material and $1008.88 for incidentals and upkeep, making the average cost per yard for the 12,611 yards of hard surface in the unit, $1.15 cents. Grading cost $922.72 for labor and $202.02 for material, a total of $1124.74. The paving materials were hauled a distance of more than five miles by five trucks.

The figures of Judge Anderson's annual report and summary for 1917 are in contrast to the figures for 1916. In the previous year 3.97 miles of pavement were laid in the county at an average cost of 73.3 cents a square yard, or a total cost of $26,515.02, as compared with an average of 91 cents and a total of $29,680.80 for the present year, when 3 1/2 miles were laid.

GRAIN PRODUCERS TO HAVE BETTER PRICES

CONFERENCE WHICH SPENCE
ATTENDS AT WASHINGTON
HIGHLY SUCCESSFUL

The representatives of the Pacific northwestern grain producers and handlers, of which C. E. Spence of this city was one, in conference with the food administration, Saturday arrived at a settlement in regard to handling the northwestern wheat crop. With the assistance of the shipping board, the food administration has been given assurance of overseas transportation for Pacific northwest grain and it, therefore, is able to make a base price at north Pacific export points on an overseas basis, instead of the previous footing of a price based on rail transport to Chicago.

The base price unanimously agreed upon by the northwestern representatives is $2.05 for No. 1 Northern, or equivalent at Portland, Seattle and Tacoma for bulk wheat, with usual premium for sacked wheat. In order to adjust difficulties of the new federal grading act, the food administration will, until further notice, purchase everything below No. 3 grade on sample.

By this action of the food administration, the value of this year's wheat crop in the Pacific northwest is increased about $2,250,000.

It is believed the new price will satisfy the farmers of the northwest, although they had hoped for a higher rate. The increase amounts to 5 cents a bushel net to the growers. By the first arrangement, wheat was to sell here solely on the Chicago basis of 2.20, which, allowing for the freight of 30 cents from the northwest to Chicago, meant $1.90 to the farmers in the inland Empire. The 10-cent average weight rate from the interior to Portland and Puget Sound points, brought the price of the tidewater markets to $2. Now, there is a $2.05 market at Portland, Seattle and Tacoma, which is equivalent to $1.95 at producing points. This applies only on wheat that comes this way, as the same wheat, if shipped eastward would be worth only $1.90, for it would still there on the Chicago basis and would have to pay the 30-cent freight. Naturally the farmers of the inland Empire will market their wheat here and thus get the added 5 cents.

Grain men were somewhat concerned at first as to what the coast terminal markets would do with the 11,000,000 bushels surplus of the northwestern crop, but it appears from Mr. Hoover's telegram that the ocean tonnage will be provided by the shipping board, and that a water freight rate will be made low enough to offset the high rail freight tariff to which the grain otherwise would be subjected. It is also likely that all this export wheat will be milled before it is shipped abroad, thus saving much steamer space.

No notice has been given yet that the grain corporation will buy wheat in the northwest, as it is doing in the eastern states, but this action will probably be announced Thursday.

The matter of flour and millfeed prices is likely to be cleared up very soon, now that the wheat price is definitely fixed. While consumers in this territory will not get these commodities quite as cheap as they expected, still a material reduction from the present prices must be made before flour and feed are on a parity with wheat.

MOOSE DEDICATION IS IN COMMITTEES' HANDS

Committees to have charge of the program for the dedication of the new Moose lodge here have been appointed and are busy with the details of the big event to take place October 2. INSTRUCTOR NAMED

Walter Kimmell, U. of O., Will Have Manual Training Work

The Oregon City school board has announced the election of Walter W. Kimmell, graduate of the state university, to the position of manual training instructor in the local high school. Mr. Kimmell comes to Oregon City with splendid recommendations. He took 15 months of manual training work at the Oregon Agricultural college after leaving the university of Oregon.

CITY LOSES ITS CLAIM TO WATER

DECISION OF SUPREME COURT GIVES FULL TITLE TO
P. R. L. & P. ON APPEAL

MAY APPEAL TO U. S. COURT

Triangular Strip on Main St. Given to Railroad Company After Long Fight

Oregon City appears to have lost her last hope of ownership of water front property within the city limits, as a result of the decision of the state supreme court on Tuesday reversing Judge Campbell and giving title to the P. R. L. & P. Co., on a triangular strip of land at the south end of Main street.

After several years of litigation, during which Mayor E. C. Hackett and ex-Senator Christian Schuebel were leaders on behalf of the city, the city is practically barred from using any of the water of the Willamette falls for water power purposes, since all the remaining water front is privately owned. The strip to which the P. R. L. & P. Co., has at last won title carried with it all water rights in that section of the basin on which it abuts.

The strip involved is at the south end of Main street where the pavement ends at the Hawley mills and the road makes an angle and the car track turns toward Canemah over the board walk. A triangle of property is left where the Canemah road branches off Main street. The supreme court, in reversing Judge Campbell, who declared the city's title to the property, seems to have taken the stand that there was no need for a street at the particular spot and that the city, therefore, could have no other just and proper use for the land. Inasmuch as the surrounding property is taken up with factory and mill buildings the supreme court holds the city could not use the property.

Mayor Hackett, who foresees the day when the city will have to consider municipal ownership of one public utility or another, has fought since the day he was first elected a councilman to retain title to the land in question. Some three years ago the P. R. L. & P. Co., filed an action in the circuit court against the city to quiet title to the strip of land. The city then began, through its attorney, Mr. Schuebel, a fight to hold the strip. The success of the fight was assured when Judge Campbell handed down his decision favorable to the city, but the supreme court Tuesday put a crimp into that success.

Mr. Schuebel, no longer city attorney, but still engaged to carry on this particular case, said Tuesday evening that the case should be appealed to the United States Supreme Court on its merits and such an action may be contemplated by the council when it takes the decision under official consideration. Mr. Schuebel will go to Portland within a day or so to examine the United States law upon such questions with the idea of ascertaining if some constitutional question is not involved to make the success of federal appeal more sure.

Mayor Hackett said today that the decision is an effective bar to the city's hope of owning its own water power, since the P. R. L. & P. Co., practically controls the falls. "The supreme court went too far, it appears to me," Mayor Hackett said, "when it tried to deal with the case in such a way as to decide whether the city had any use for this property. It was not a question of its use to the city that the court was asked to determine, but a question of the validity of the city's title to the land. A private owner would not be held up to prove that he had use for the land to which he claimed title; neither should the city. What use we may have for it could not be within the knowledge of the supreme court. If an appeal of the case to the United States supreme court will not cost the taxpayers too much money I am decidedly in favor of taking such a step."

TAXES ARE DUE

Deputy Sheriff I. D. Taylor, in charge of tax collections, has sounded a warning to taxpayers that October 5 is the last day for the payment of taxes on the last half of the 1916 assessment without interest and penalty. Mr. Taylor says that, although payment is being made at about a normal rate, there are many who do not realize that the last day for payment is so near and that they will be penalized and charged interest there-after.

CITY TURNS OUT EN MASSE FOR FAREWELL

THIRD OREGON GOES TO NORTH CAROLINA; GIRLS GIVE
MANY LUNCH BOXES

Oregon City turned out en masse Monday for a final farewell to the boys of the 3rd Oregon and other units stationed at Clackamas, who passed through the city on their way to Camp Greene, Charlotte, North Carolina. And not the least of the farewells were the two express truck loads of edibles and delicacies for the boys, prepared by members of the Girls' Honor Guard and the Red Cross women. A great many tempting lunches were prepared and distributed at the trains. The soldiers came through here in two sections, shortly after six in the evening. But the girls were there upon both occasions to spread their good cheer and to pass out the boxes of lunch, fruit and delicacies.

Morgan's store donated a box of apples and a full bunch of bananas and the Larsen store supplied a box of peaches and a watermelon. Other merchants also donated from their stocks to make the feed prepared by the girls of the city complete. Some women prepared as many as 12 individual lunch boxes.

The farewells at the trains, which carried many Clackamas county boys to their southern camp, and perhaps to an early voyage to Europe, was tearful and sentimental. Mothers, wives, sisters and sweethearts, not to mention fathers and brothers, gathered in a great patriotic throng and the goodbyes of many of them were spoken between sobs.

Among the officers in the 3d Oregon from Oregon City are: Captain W. R. Logus, regimental adjutant; Captain Lowell A. Blanchard, commander of company G, and Lieutenant Eldon Blanchard. Kent Wilson, son of Sheriff and Mrs. W. J. Wilson, is a sergeant in the hospital corps, and Kenneth Moody is with the mounted scouts of the headquarters.

In practically every unit Oregon City is represented and in Company G, the city and county have a large number of young men.

COST OF GOOD ROADS

Amounts appropriated annually by the Clackamas county to pay for road work in the past 10 years, total $1,474,100, and do not include much special and district tax levy money that has gone into the building of good roads. Neither does the figure represent any of the money spent upon roads in incorporated cities within the county, nor state aid money that may have been received during the 10-year period. The appropriations show for 1917 an increase of more than 400 per cent. more than the appropriation of 1908, and over 600 per cent. more than that of 1909. The increase, however, has been steady throughout the period. The annual appropriations making up the total that has been spent to make good roads for Clackamas county farmers are as follows:

1917	$260,000
1916	242,000
1915	200,000
1914	208,000
1913	170,000
1912	173,000
1911	65,400
1910	51,500
1909	42,000
1908	56,000

TEEVIN MUST FOREGO AN APPEAL AND GO TO ARMY

Joseph Francis Teevin, of Damascus left here Wednesday for Camp Lewis, at American Lake, Wash., to take up the duties of a soldier in the national army without the right of appealing to the board for exemption and without even undergoing medical examination. Teevin was ordered to report before the local board on August 9, but had left the county without advising the authorities of his destination. Tuesday the young man appeared before the board and, under the rules of the draft, was ordered to report immediately at American Lake. Teevin, it appears, had been working on an eastern Oregon ranch and had not received a notice. His attorney in Portland heard of the matter and advised the young man to get back here promptly. Teevin has a divorce suit pending and is the father of three children. It is said that Mrs. Teevin contemplates filing a cross complaint in the divorce case and that action will be held up for some time, but Teevin's plea to be allowed to await its outcome was not availing.

Three Divorces Granted

Divorce decrees were signed Wednesday by Judge Campbell separating Bertha and Arch Davidson, who is to pay $10 a month toward the support of two minor boys; Edith and Andy Kohler and William C. and Zophia C. Schramm.

LIFE IS REAL ON THE YUKON RIVER

HELL'S PASS, SCARRY RAPID

Pictures of Alaska's By-Ways Where

(M. J. Brown)

The man who makes the Yukon river trip from Dawson to St. Michael will never regret it, but he will never make it but once—unless he is obliged to.

After Dawson is left the schedule is one long trip of uncertainty and discomforts—and they grow worse as the lower river is reached. "Tourists be damned," I heard the first mate say to another officer, "get the freight."

But the discomforts, anxieties and uncertainties come later on. For the first thousand miles the trip was most interesting, and with the weather warm and bright, it was with keen enjoyment that we sat day after day on the deck, and watched the many places of interest along the crooked stream.

At Seattle a lady came on board. She lived at Forty Mile, and had lived there for over twenty years. She went outside, over the trail, in the winter for a surgical operation and was returning.

If there was ever a booster for the North Land, it was she. She loved it, she yearned for it, she could hardly wait to get home, and she told me if I would only stop off at Forty Mile and wait for the next steamer down she and her husband would show me some of the real joys of remembering the north. She said her husband would meet her at Dawson with a launch and she urged me to join them. But a thirty mile launch trip did not appeal to me, so I decided to stick to the boat and perhaps drop off after I had seen the town.

The next day I asked the purser if I could lay over at Forty Mile for the next boat if the town looked good to me and I concluded to stop. "Nothing doing," he replied. "Your ticket will allow you to lay over but the Canadian government won't. You are on an American bottom and you can't get off in Canadian territory." And then he remarked he reckoned I wouldn't care to stop after I had seen the town.

In the morning we reached Forty Mile and the boat remained long enough to unload a little freight and load on the countless show cases and fixtures of a once big company store that had died for want of business. A dozen log cabins, a dilapidated big road house, a wireless station, a little store and a couple of red-coated Northwest Mounted Police. That was Forty Mile—the wonderful North Land the lady had told me about for days. This was the home she was homesick and heartsick to get back to.

The wireless man told me there were only two white women within a radius of 50 miles square; that the most of the miners had left the country and the town would soon be deserted. "Even the road house has left its license lapse, and the town is sure gone now," he moaned.

Forty Mile has had an up and down existence. There is gold there, but not rich ground, no big strikes, and time and again just when the camp on Forty Mile river, back from the town, had settled down to a slow but steady producing proposition, then would come news of a big strike somewhere down the river and the miners would stampede for it like a flock of sheep—grabbing anything that would float and rushing to the new diggings.

I learned that the husband of the lady was foreman of a dredge outfit that an English company had long ago been operating on the Forty Mile river, but that one dredge was abandoned and the other would soon be, as the river had been worked out. And as we sat on the bank watching the deck hands load the store fixtures, the radio man rushed down, very much excited, and handed us a bulletin. The passengers on deck called to us to know what it was, so I mounted the store steps, summoned up my oratory and said:

Amsterdam dispatch says Kaiser has abdicated in favor of Prince Joachim. Great stress in imperial circles.

This was wonderful news in a newspaperless country, and it was the only news we heard from the outside for a thousand miles further down the river. So while we fought mosquitoes we discussed it, argued it, doubted it, dissected it and made it last. The entire length of the Yukon has Indian villages scattered along, and between them are scattered cabins where one or two Indian families live alone. And for hundreds of miles along the river runs the trail.

TIMBER BARONS SAY TAXATION TOO HIGH

FILE ANNUAL SERIES OF COM-PLAINTS AGAINST ASSES-
MENT ON $1,500,000

Complaints that the tax assessments on Clackamas county timber lands valued at nearly $1,500,000, are too high, were filed in Judge J. U. Campbell's court here Friday by C. L. Starr, representing the heaviest timber holders in the county. From the county's valuation, roughly estimated at $1,211,500, the complainants ask a reduction in value to $507,600, approximately.

Similar complaints are filed by Mr. Starr each year, and from the one filed in 1915 on behalf of the Weyerhaeuser timber interests has grown the noted case that was settled in the state supreme court on Wednesday when these people were denied a rehearing in the case. The case was tried here early in 1916, and the county was ordered to reduce its assessments to a certain extent. Taken to the supreme court, it was held that the company should pay on its full valuation as assessed by the county. Appealed by the company for a rehearing, the motion was denied on Wednesday.

In the complaints filed Friday the Weyerhaeuser interests figure most prominently. They ask a reduction in assessed valuation from approximately $650,000 to $250,000. Other reductions asked to make the total of nearly $1,500,000 are: George S. Lacey estate, from $79,700 to $51,800; E. S. Collins, $18,500 to $12,900; George Baldwin, $15,000 to $8000; W. R. Burt, $72,500 to $36,200; E. S. Collins and T. D. Collins estate, $376,500 to $211,800.

SOLDIERS HONORED AT FAREWELL RECEPTION

From the opening song, "Star Spangled Banner," sung by Mrs. Carl Moore, of Gladstone, until the same singer closed the meeting by singing, "Lullaby in Khaki, I'm Waiting for You," the farewell reception to the 21 young men who left Oregon City for the national army cantonment at American Lake, was a success. The reception was held Thursday night in the beautifully decorated Commercial club parlors and called out many citizens. A. E. Clark, of Portland, spoke in a highly patriotic vein of the work of young men in the wars of the present and past and paid a fine tribute to them. O. B. Eby president of the Commercial club, made a patriotic address. Garland Hollowell, one of the young men who left Friday morning, assisted Mrs. Moore with the musical program. He sang, "Lo, 'Tis the Day," and later he and Mrs. Moore sang a duet. Miss Sadie Evelyn Ford was the accompanist.

Friday morning at 9 o'clock, two hours late, 21 young men from this county boarded the train for American Lake and about them crowded scores of loving friends and relatives. The tributes at the train took a different form and there was a great display of gifts for the boys. Sheriff Wilson managed the entraining without a hitch, although he was considerably worried when one young man was late at the depot. The 21 men originally called were dispatched and the alternates will return to their homes to await the departure of the next quota. Garland Hollowell, of Gladstone, and John Thomas Hindle, of Redland, were in charge of the men who left Friday morning.

To further inconvenience the local quota, the train with which the men were to make connections at Portland did not wait for the delayed train from here and in consequence the soldiers stayed in Portland from 10 o'clock Friday morning until two in the afternoon. They arrived at American Lake soon after six o'clock Friday evening.

NEW BORN BABE CAST INTO THE WILLAMETTE

The body of a new-born baby girl was taken from the racks of the Hawley Pulp & Paper company's mill at the head of the basin in the Willamette river here late Tuesday afternoon having apparently been in the water about 24 hours.

The little body was turned over to the Holman company and was buried Wednesday in the potter's field while county officials attempt to unravel a deep mystery. The theory is that the child was born aboard a Great Northern train and its journey continued on a Southern Pacific train, from which it was cast into the water. The body was wrapped in towels and a sheet which bears the laundry mark of the Great Northern company. The baby was thrown directly into the basin leading to the paper company's racks, as the current would have carried it to the west side otherwise.

Dr. Guy Mount, called yesterday by Judge John S. Stevers, acting coroner, to examine the tiny body, said the child was dead before it had been cast into the river, since there was no water in the little lungs. At the same time the doctor gave his opinion that the child had been deliberately murdered by being allowed to bleed to death, when the slightest effort could have saved its life.
