KENNETH STRAIGHT HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM SEVERE INJURIES

Little Kenneth Straight, five-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Straight, of Clackamas Heights, has already had two narrow escapes from death. The last was Friday morning when his father was engaged in cutting wood with an axe that had just been sharpened. The father of the boy did not know his little son was running toward him, and the first thing he knew was the little fellow bobbed up where the ax blade was to strike. The father had to raise the ax to cut the wood and bringing it down and in order not to strike the child on the head, and in the nick of time, turned it as it struck his tumb, almost severing the member and causing a bad wound. It was necessary to have a number of stitches taken to close the wound.

Little Kenneth, about three years ago, was standing on the bank of the Abernathy Creek, when he accidentally fell in, and as he was floating down stream, his little cousin, George Simpson, who was but little past four years of age, with presence of mind, rushed to a near by rowboat and grasped the little dress of the drowning boy as he floated past. He hung tightly to Kenneth, until members of the family rushed to the assistance of the baby. An effort is being made to secure the little Simpson baby a Carnegie medal. His mother died about a year ago, and the little fellow is crippled. He is a handsome looking child with a wealth of curly locks, and is a pet of the Straight family, one of the pioneer families of Clackamas county.
