TEACHERS PETITION DEFEATS THEIR AIM

WORDY TILT BETWEEN HEDGES AND TOOZE AT SCHOOL DIRECTOR'S MEETING

In spite of warnings that their petition would not be cordially received by at least one member of the city school board, 35 teachers in the grade and high schools of Oregon City last Friday night presented a petition asking for an increase in wages. Superintendent F. J. Tooze had been told at a previous meeting by Joseph E. Hedges, a member of the board, that the board was considering a voluntary raise in the salaries of teachers and that any petition presented by them would be out of order under the circumstances.

Disregarding that statement, Mr. Tooze Friday night presented the petition asking for a 10 per cent increase in salaries. The teachers asked for a new salary scale whereby they might be paid for the entire year rather than for nine months of the school year. In place of receiving $60 a month for the first school year as at present the first year scale would be $49.50 for 12 months. The scale would advance to $53.52 for the second year of 12 months, as against $65 for nine months as at present, and the third year scale would be $57.57 for 12 months, contrasting with $70 for nine months under the present scale. Principals would receive an annual advance of $120, making their salaries $1320 a year. High school teachers asked a similar arrangement and corresponding advances.

The petition was the bone that started contention between Mr. Tooze and J. E. Hedges. Mr. Hedges recalled a motion that had been made at a previous meeting whereby the board would have voted a higher wage scale without request. This motion was not passed at the previous meeting pending investigation by other members of the board, but Mr. Hedges had served notice on the board that he would again make the motion for an increase at the next meeting. He presented these facts again to Mr. Tooze, who demanded to see the previous motion, which, to his knowledge, it is said, had been struck from the records awaiting the investigation.

The argument between Mr. Tooze and Mr. Hedges became heated at times, with Mr. Hedges pointing out the reasons for his objection to the teachers' petition when the board already had an increased salary scale under consideration. He charged Mr. Tooze with bringing in the objectionable petition in the face of the director's statement that he would vote against it.

The conclusion of the matter was the flat denial of the petition by the school board. The teachers, it is said, defeated their own ends through Mr. Tooze and were denied the sweeping increases they called for. The denial, however, does not consider any future action that may be taken, and it is said to be entirely probable that Mr. Hedges will again present a motion to increase the salaries of the majority of the teachers.

Teachers had a good deal to say about the tilt between Director Hedges and Mr. Tooze. Prof. Bowland said, as he retired from the meeting: "I did not fully understand things when I came to this meeting, but I have learned a great deal by being here and getting the details of this matter."

FIVE IN CITY JAIL

Night Police Round Up Aimless Gentlemen from Portland

The city jail had five guests in its keeping Friday night as a result of the efforts of Night Policemen Cooke and Burke. When Mr. Burke saw a suspicious looking pair in the vicinity of Parkplace he called for Chief of Police French, and the two officers brought the characters to the city jail, where they could give no account of themselves. Later in the evening Officers Cooke and Burke were watching for a train from Portland when they saw three men rush into the bushes on the bank above the tracks. Commanded to come down one of the men gave himself up and denied knowledge of the whereabouts of the others. Burke went up the hill after them and they were found and registered at the jail for the night. The five appear to be young men and all say they came from Portland.

REPORT COMPLETED

County Clerk's Records Show 61 Divorce Cases Filed in 90 Days

County Clerk Harrington has completed the quarterly report of business in her office as required by a law of the last legislature and has submitted it to Secretary of State Olcott. The report shows that during the past three months 61 divorce cases were filed in the circuit court and only seven of the entire number were contested. Forty-five of these cases were heard in the court, but not one contested. The cost of the petit jury for that period was $204.40 and the cost for bailiffs $125.

GOATS AND WASTE LAND SPELL CASH

LIVE WIRES MAY HAVE SMALL ANGINA GOAT DEMONSTRATION FARM

WOULD RECLAIM IDLE ACRES

Judge Dimick Sees Bank Accounts Growing from Pasturing Goats. To Be Tried.

Eleven goats and four acres of farm land may prove the salvation of Clackamas county's hundreds of thousands of acres of waste and idle lands, if the Live Wires of the Oregon City Commercial club have their way with plans proposed by Judge Grant B. Dimick. And to make sure that they will have their way, the Live Wires have already become fathers of what may prove the greatest reclamation idea ever inaugurated in this county.

Only one acre in every five of Clackamas county's great timbered expanse has been cleared of the tall firs of the primeval forest. Less than one-eighth of this vast area of nearly 1,500,000 acres is in cultivation, although the county is one of the best developed and richest in the state. The present agricultural value of nearly 700,000 acres of the finest land in the world is not more than $25 an acre on the average. There are 37,000 people in the county and not more than 20,000 of these are actually on the farm, although, aside from the county seat, the county is strictly an agricultural one. There is an average population in the county, aside from the cities, of approximately 10 persons to the square mile, but that average is not generally distributed. Not one-half the county is assessed on tax rolls, because nearly a half of it is held in the name of the United States government and much more of it is classed as O. & C. railroad grant land.

The Live Wires of the Commercial club of Oregon City are concerned then, with almost four-fifths of the 522,450 acres of assessed land, and with the entire area of government land and railroad grant land. And the concern the organization has is to turn these idle miles into bank accounts for the benefit of Clackamas county's great and constantly increasing citizenship. It would be pleasant, the Live Wires believe, to turn the annual value of 1,000,000 acres of land into $60,000,000, and from the looks of things the club will not be satisfied until it has shown the county that such a stupendous thing is nearly if not actually possible. Of course, such figures mean that the entire waste area of the county would have to be reclaimed, and the Live Wires are not letting their rosy dreams get too far in that direction.

The angora goat is the proof of the consistency of this progressive dream. In short, Judge Grant B. Dimick's proposal to the organization from whose chairmanship he has just retired, is this: To open a Live Wire demonstration farm to prove to owners of waste acres that the earning capacity of their land is a minimum of $25 an acre annually. If the Live Wires' dream inspired by the judge does not burst, Clackamas county could, within a very few years, be the chief mohair producer in the nation for while others are going behind in production, this county with a new purpose in life will be going ahead until it overtakes and passes far-sighted and well-suited counties.

The Abernathy canyon alone would feed 10,000 head of angora goats, according to figures presented to the business men of the county seat, and there is land by the thousands of acres in addition to the Abernathy canyon.

Three goats to the acre will not even injure the pasture while the animals wax fat and profitable, and sheep can be run over the same ground and produce more millions for the county and the state. The scheme is this: Put three goats on one acre; in one year there will be four kids. Enlarge the pasture to two acres to accommodate the increased family and there are seven goats worth about $25 each, in addition to the value of the mohair that comes from their fleecy backs. Judge Dimick likes to figure on this basis with several hundred thousand acres of land for pasture and mohair selling at 70 cents a pound. It spells millions to the land owners of Clackamas county and to the man who can secure to his own uses the government land available. It spells a population four times that of today, and great mills and much industry.

The Live Wire demonstration farm will comprise four acres of fenced land, no better than the average acreage available for pasturing angora goats, and the project will be started with 11 head of registered angoras from Judge Dimick's herd. A committee to have charge of the farm and to check all figures in connection with costs of operation and profits was ordered appointed by

SUNDAY SCHOOLS TO HOLD ANNUAL MEET

PROGRAM FOR TWO-DAY SESSION READY. PROVIDES INTEREST TO WORKERS

All plans have been completed for the annual Sunday school convention to be held at Wilsonville on Friday and Saturday, and not the least of these involves the preparation of a program for the two-day session. The officers who have charge of this work include Charles F. Romig, president; Mrs. Duncan Shanks, vice president; Mrs. W. A. White, treasurer, and Mrs. B. A. Hoag, secretary. The meeting of the Sunday School association of the county opens on Friday morning with a praise service and greeting by the Rev. H. B. Hoffman, of Salt Pond. MRS. SEELY IS A GUEST

OF HONOR AT RECEPTION

Mrs. E. A. Seely was an honored guest at the home of Mrs. B. A. Hoag at Gladstone, Thursday, the occasion being a farewell party tendered by friends before Mrs. Seely's departure for Milwaukie. She has been very active in church circles here, having served as president of the Woman's Foreign Missionary society for seven years and as Methodist Sunday school superintendent for six years. The Hoag home was beautifully decorated with garden flowers, and an interesting program was rendered. Readings were given by Mrs. Hickman, Mrs. McDermott and Mrs. Rosa Tabor. A delicious buffet luncheon was served and the women busied themselves with needlework and knitting. A beautiful Bible was presented to Mrs. Seely by her friends through Mrs. Hickman. Among those present were: Mesdames Seely, Tabor, Roettger, Hollingsworth, Walker, Humphrey, Osborne, Hickman, Graves, Myers, Smith, Cushing, Straight, Blanchard, Ross, Peterson, McDermott, Castles, LaSalle, Taggart, Beechley, Curtis, Brock, Davidson, Mills, Wagner, Conover, Tingle, Kordnat, Gilbert, Hoag and Miss Case.

LOVELACE IS MAYOR

At a meeting of the Estacada city council last week J. F. Lovelace, a retired merchant and a member of the council for the past two years, was named mayor of the city, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of I. D. Wright. The latter was a director and cashier of the Estacada State bank and is leaving soon for his newly acquired ranch near Denio. John C. Peterson, of Estacada, was appointed councilman in Mr. Lovelace's place and John Page was appointed city marshal, taking the place of L. M. Park, resigned.

Baby Boy Born

An 8-pound baby boy arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Mobley on Wednesday morning. Mrs. Mobley and the new heir are attended by Dr. Hugh Mount, who gives them an excellent certificate of health. The father is assistant cashier of the Bank of Commerce.

Willard P. Hawley, Jr., who has just retired as Main Trunk of the Live Wires. The opinion of many well-known angora goat raisers is that Clackamas county is ideal for the angora goat business because of the nature of the growth on the lands of the county and because of its climate.

How real is the dream of the Live Wires and Judge Dimick, how many millions may be turned to the everlasting benefit of the state and how many thousands of acres of the county's waste land, much of it useless for any other purpose can be converted to the use of man remains to be seen when the results attained on the Live Wire demonstration farm four miles from Oregon City are made known.

EAGLE SCREECHES TO BOND BUYERS

VISITORS BRING MESSAGES OF PATRIOTISM FOR CAUSE OF LOAN

SERIES OF MEETINGS HELD

Loan Value Represents $18 for Each Minute Since the Birth of Christ

With Seventh street filled with a mass of humanity, the second Liberty loan of 1917 was put before Oregon City Monday night with a new significance and with new force, when Portland sent Jay Bowerman, Milton A. Miller and Dr. E. Lof T. Hedlund to spread the gospel of liberty. On a flag-draped platform these men stood and gave facts and figures to show the necessity of the bond issue and their words were accompanied by the stirring martial music of the band that played during the evening. The Grand Army life and drum corps lent a patriotic touch to the program with its quaint notes.

The speakers were met upon their arrival here by a group of business men and were honored guests at a banquet at the Commercial club, where they were introduced for brief talks by Senator Walter A. Dimick. The program at the club was enhanced in interest by Mrs. E. E. Brodie, who sang "The Star Spangled Banner."

In his talks at the Commercial club and on the street, Jay Bowerman put the necessity for money in the war in a new light. He had computed the number of minutes since the birth of Christ and pointed out that the estimated cost to the United States of prosecuting the war would be equal to $18 for each minute since Christ was born.

Milton A. Miller made two speeches that were filled with patriotic fervor and he was interrupted repeatedly by the clamorous applause of his audience.

Tuesday evening the same speakers held a Liberty bond meeting at Canby and that town gave the visitors a fine reception. Wednesday evening the last meeting of the series of three was held at Molalla. It was attended by a train load of Live Wires from Oregon City who went to Molalla in a body for the meeting.

MARKER PLACED ON OLD PIONEER TRAIL

"WESTWARD HO!" OF EARLY SETTLERS RESOUNDS AT CEREMONIES

Echoes of the "Westward Ho!" of the pioneers were heard in Oregon City on Saturday—71 years after that epoch in a nation's history which brought a rush of new and hardy citizens into the wild and distant Oregon country. A little band of folk gathered on Saturday to perpetuate the memory of those brave souls who battled their way against Indians, wild life and the elements in their pilgrimage to the new, little-known land that held out to them the promise of a future studded with the bright gems of prosperity and happiness.

The occasion was the erection of a marker on the old Oregon trail, which passed through Oregon City across the Abernathy creek. At the junction of the trail and the creek Williamette chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution of Portland, Saturday spent their time and money to place a monument to the Oregon pioneers. A number of prominent Oregon City people took part in the ceremonies that brought to mind again the thrilling story of the hardy men and women who ventured into this wild territory nearly three-quarters of a century to carve from the wilderness and the primeval forest the fine homes and the great industry that we have today and to found here a new world for American citizens from all corners of the world.

Mayor E. C. Hackett of Oregon City, before whose home the marker is erected, gave an address of welcome; George H. Himes, secretary of the Oregon Historical society and W. H. Dufur, president of the Pioneer association, made addresses. Dr. W. T. Milliken of Oregon City led devotional exercises and Mrs. J. M. Knight read a poem written for the occasion by June McMillan Ordway. Miss Ruby Starkweather and Miss Esther Scott, daughters of pioneer families, unveiled the trail marker. Mrs. W. H. T. Green, acting regent of the D. A. R., presented the marker to Mrs. Isaac Lee Peterson, state regent. Miss Metta Brown of Portland led the musical program.

No other paper in Clackamas county publishes as much Clackamas county news as The Courier.

LIVE WIRES OPERATE SPECIAL TO MOLALLA

GOAT FARM AND STREET WORK ARE SUBJECTS ON REGULAR MEETING DAY

The Live Wires of the Commercial club operated a special train to Molalla last evening to carry the members to the Liberty Loan meeting in that city, to be addressed by Jay Bowerman and Milton A. Miller, of Portland. The wires assembled at the club at 6:30 and went to the Willamette Valley Southern train in a body. A committee in charge of the affair included C. W. Robey, E. Bowerman and E. E. Brodie. This excursion was the result of action taken at the meeting of the Wires on Tuesday.

Grant B. Dimick, A. A. Price and O. D. Eby were appointed as a committee to wait upon the city council with a request for the improvement of Linn avenue. Residents of the district petitioned the Live Wires to take some action in this matter, threatening to take their trade elsewhere unless roads into this city were made passable.

The Live Wires also appointed a committee of six to take up the matter of a demonstration farm, where Angora goats will be pastured. This committee comprises Judge Grant B. Dimick, father of the farm plan; Dr. Clyde Mount, J. J. Cooke, A. R. Jacobs, George A. Harding and W. P. Hawley, Jr. The Wires will pasture 11 goats on the farm to show what value can be produced on waste acreage.

A membership committee to provide a maximum attendance of members for the next meeting will comprise Livy Stipp, D. F. Skene, A. E. Rugg, B. T. McCain, E. E. Brodie, Dr. L. A. Morris, O. D. Eby, Rev. C. H. L. Chandler and Grant B. Dimick. This group will make an active canvass of the membership prior to the next meeting.

The Wires enjoyed a treat at their meeting Tuesday in the form of a large basket of grapes presented by O. A. Kruse.

GUERNSEY CLUB SENDS

EAST FOR FINE STOCK

Big business entered into the affairs of the Clackamas County Guernsey Cattle club at a meeting held at the Bank of Commerce in Oregon City on Tuesday, when $11,000 were placed to the credit of the club to buy foundation stock for farmers in this county. The members of the club, with one exception, signed a joint note to finance their great plans and tomorrow evening the state club president, Dr. John T. Whalley of Molalla, accompanied by E. L. Westover, United States and Oregon Agricultural college field dairy specialist, will leave for Waukesha, Wisconsin, to purchase stock from the noted Guernsey centers of the country. The one man who did not sign the joint note of the club posted a certified check for $1200 to guarantee his end of the big deal in blooded cattle.

The delegated purchasers for the club will bring back 35 head of the finest Guernseys money can buy and will see to their safe arrival in Oregon City aboard a Pullman express car. Upon arrival in this city the stock will be held at the Elkhorn stables for a week while they are given their final examination as a precaution against the importation of any disease, and will then be distributed to the members of the club. The price for each head of this fine stock will be high and will represent one of the largest untied cattle importations ever made into Oregon. The club's action in buying the stock is considered about the biggest thing that has ever been done for the dairymen and cattle raisers of Clackamas county.

It is expected that the buyers for the club who leave tomorrow will return with their car of cattle within two weeks. Both Dr. Whalley and Mr. Westover plan side trips from their destination to visit Guernsey centers and national meetings of importance to Guernsey breeders. Dr. Whalley is president of the club and Mrs. A. I. Hughes secretary. Other officers and a group of the men who are interested in Guernsey cattle attended the meeting on Tuesday. The credit of the club was assured at its meeting by the Bank of Commerce.

The present jury is composed of D. H. Purcell, Parkplace; S. B. Seely, Wilsonville; W. A. Hedges, Canemah; L. B. Yoder, Hubbard, route 2; Jerome Avery, Milwaukie, route 2; L. H. Wang, Clackamas, and Walter Foster, Clackamas.

SERVING TIME IN AN ALASKA TOWN

TOURISTS REFUSED PASSAGE AND SPEND TWO WEEKS IN DRENCHED VILLAGE

OUTSIDE NEWS IS VERY OLD

Life and Travel in the Northland Is Not All That It Is Cracked Up to Be

(M. J. Brown)

The "about five days" stretched into seven before the Alice came, and I imagine I know how a prisoner felt when he was counting the last days of his time.

It rained the most of the time, a cold drizzle that was almost snow, and we simply had to stay inside. There was nothing to read but newspapers more than a month old, papers we had read before coming in, in digging for something new under a pile of papers a foot deep, I found a copy of the Buffalo Evening News, dated sometime in May, and I wondered if the New Yorker who brought it in had as much pleasure and comfort as I was enjoying.

The nights were as discomfiting as the days. After midnight the cold would settle down and I had to spread my coat and overcoat over the blankets to keep warm.

When the rain would let up Wilson and I would walk the "beat" from the fort to the Indian village, about a mile, and a swarm of mosquitoes would follow us. Every man of the 200 inhabitants of the town would declare he "never saw the like" of the weather. Probably he never saw a summer any different, but as this section of Alaska is being boomed for a farming country, it was a part of the program to alibi.

In the more than thousand miles I had traveled this was the first place where I had seen anything growing that had a 10 to 1 chance. Here there was soil, black, rich soil, and I never saw vegetation look so green and grow so rank. I wondered if the potatoes (just little garden patches) were not all growing to vines and the vegetables to tops. A man told me this would be the result unless the sun came out soon, and it would when the moon changed.

He should have been in the weather forecast bureau. The moon changed, the sky cleared and at three o'clock in the morning a killing frost descended on the potatoes and vegetables, and farming on the Tananna got a set back. I was told that a fog saved the gardens further up the river.

"Too bad," said "Austrian Joe." "Too late to ship in potatoes now." The folders and boom literature sent out picture Fairbanks and the surrounding country as a wonderful agricultural section, yet the boats that come up from Nome bring loads of the very stuff the folders state is being raised in such abundance where it is unloaded.

It isn't a farming country. I don't believe it ever will be. The seasons are too short and the weather too uncertain. When the sun does shine on its long summer schedule, everything grows wonderfully fast, but the sudden and unexpected changes in the weather, and a killing frost, will ruin everything in an hour. In my judgment crop raising in Alaska is as uncertain and hazardous as mining.

There were only two places to eat in Tananna, and you could take your choice—and there was no choice. Two chinks had restaurants side by side, and they had a closed combination on competition. Meals were one dollar each, and there was no discount to tourists. A longshoreman would sit at the lunch counter and order the same meal as I did and pay four bits for it, and then the Celestial would ring up one dollar for me, at the same time, while I watched the figures on the cash register. It appears to me a splendid exhibition of nerve. But tourists are considered legitimate prey. They are stalked. But I will say that the meals were good and well cooked, barring some trifles. One of the trifles, or a pair of them, were two able-bodied mosquitoes floating around in my coffee cup. I called the chink's attention to the natatorium and he remarked "get in water." I asked for another cup of coffee, and he replied, "Make no diff, get in next cup." I left the coffee for the next man.

When the weather cleared we slopped out to a little stream where some miners were prospecting—fighting the water and cave-ins and trying to get a hole down to bed rock. One of them told me there was a "prospect" there. "A prospect." Those two words are heard all over Alaska. They are the miners' hope, the grub-stakers' curse. "A prospect." Men chase them for years and years. They go through hardship and suffering known nowhere else on God's earth. They work 18 hours a day at the hardest possible labor, live like beasts and half starve.

JEFF NEW SENTENCED FOR DRAFT EVASION

RECORDS OF BIBLE ALTERED AND TESTIMONY OF RELATIVES IS CONFLICTING

While all county officers in the court house were closed Friday because of Columbus day, several county officers, including Sheriff W. J. Wilson, County Clerk Iva Harrington and Deputy District Attorney Thomas A. Burke, spent the day in the federal court at Portland, where the trial of Jefferson New, of Jennings Lodge, was in progress. These witnesses offered testimony which aided in the conviction of New as a slacker, and marked the first distinct slacker case tried in Oregon. Assistant United States Attorney Earl C. Latourette assisted in the prosecution of the case, and George C. Brownell, of this city, took part in the defense of New.

The age of Jeff New, of Jennings Lodge, is 30 years. That is, Jeff is 30 so far as the law is concerned. His age was decided by a jury in the federal court Friday. After hearing testimony from both sides it decided that Jeff was guilty of failure to register for the war draft as charged. Judge Bean sentenced him to 60 days in jail.

The ages of New and other children of the family have been cause for speculation by themselves and others for some years. At a family conference last Christmas, so they testified, they finally decided upon their birth and will New the eldest set them down in the family Bible.

Unfortunately for Jeff his sister, Maude Hancock, was under the impression that Jeff was born in 1887 and that date was inked in. Then Will insisted that it was in 1886 that Jeff first saw day and he put the figure "6" over the figure "7." The jury decided that the "7" was the correct figure and convicted New.

In passing sentence upon New, Judge Bean said that in this time of national crisis a man or woman is either a patriot or the opposite. The punishment meted out was 60 days in the Multnomah county jail. At the expiration of the jail sentence New must register for service in the army and will be automatically drafted into the national army.

When New, convicted by a jury in Judge Bean's court Friday afternoon, was up for sentence Saturday George C. Brownell, of Oregon City, his counsel, pleaded for clemency on the ground of his client's ignorance of the law and belief that he was above the age specified in the draft act.

Judge Bean's answer was brief, but pointed. He said he was "out of patience" with any kind of "slacker"; that there is no middle ground in this conflict and that shirkers will not receive any consideration when convicted in his court. His sentence of 60 days, he explained, was only because of some slight question of the young man's age.

Deputy United States District Attorney Goldstein, who prosecuted the case, declared that he felt New would eventually feel grateful to his country for compelling him to do army service—a thing New himself had not the moral courage to do.

SCHOOL HAS PROGRAM

Children at Clarks Enter Upon Year's Work with Enthusiasm

An enjoyable Columbus day program was given by the Clarks school children, October 12. The children and teachers were highly complemented upon the good program produced within such a short time.

School has been in session just four weeks. Odin Anderson, of Month, is the principal and Mrs. Anderson, of the same place, is the lower grade teacher. Everything is running smoothly and a big year is planned.

The school expects to soon be the proud possessor of a basketball and a volley ball. The boys are already enthusiastically playing baseball.

All are cordially invited to come to the schoolhouse on the afternoon of Frances E. Willard day, October 26. Also to the Halloween party to be held in the schoolhouse on the afternoon of October 31.

OSWEGO MAY APPEAL

A. King Wilson Does Not Like Judge Bagley's Decision

A. King Wilson, mayor of Oswego, and with that city involved in the recent case brought by Mrs. Julia Cooper to restrain the mayor and the city council from the improvement of Front street in Oswego until other needed work is done, Tuesday took up the matter of appealing the case from Judge Bagley's decision against the city to the state supreme court. Judge Bagley's decision bars the city from working on Front street because that thoroughfare is out of the municipality's jurisdiction, being a county road. The Oswego council will meet this evening to make a decision as to appealing the case.

Have You Bought a Bond?

A Liberty bond pays four per cent interest. It is the best investment in America. It is free from all state and local taxation; and free from national taxation up to $5,000.
