LOOK OUT FOR GRAFT

The Courier cautions its readers against misdirected patriotism insofar as a spirit of loyalty may prompt subscriptions to unworthy causes, which confront us daily. Revelations of graft here and elsewhere in taking money for so-called patriotic purposes has brought to light startling facts. Under the guise of patriotism we are asked to pledge our hard earned shillings for everything from homes for indigent kittens to the advancement of astronomy among the cannibals of South Africa.

The latest thing that has come to our attention, and a cause which we brand as two parts right, four parts foolishness and four parts graft, is a plan for money to eliminate vice in army training camps and cantonments in America. Without a falter we refuse to give our dollars to such a cause. And the chief reason is that there is no vice that requires thousands of dollars to eliminate when such worthy undertakings as the work of the Red Cross, the army Y. M. C. A. and Liberty bonds are before us.

The United States army and navy do not tolerate vice among their men. Those who would prey upon the men in uniform are expelled from the vicinity of training camps under war department orders; the saloon is eliminated already from our consideration by congressional action against selling intoxicants to men in uniform. The officers of the army and navy and the officials of the war department have proved themselves thoroughly capable of handling the vice problem.

Those who seek our money to combat evil among soldiers thereby brand the young men who are serving the colors of our nation as a gang of irresponsible, craven hoodlums and The Courier shows its resentment of such allegations by its antagonism to the so-called "cause." The majority of our soldiers and sailors are our own sons and brothers and are thoroughly capable of caring for themselves. Those who are irresponsible are cared for by their officers and government. The Red Cross continues to need money, Liberty bonds are on sale at every bank and food conservation demands dollars and attention. Let us, then, not be misguided by the false and tainted "causes" of many of the unworthy pleas that are made. Our money must be given freely where it will do good, but where it serves no other purpose than to fill the purse of figurehead officials we must be misers.

GERMAN FRIENDS

Let us take courage from the story brought from a Tillamook lumber camp by Judge Grant B. Dimick, who addressed 80 lumberjacks at a Liberty loan meeting there recently. One great bulk of German manhood, Americanized in the sense that his mind and heart have had instilled into them the principles of liberty and freedom for which our sons and brothers are fighting, heard the judge talk. And with the money he had earned from his strenuous labors at the business end of an axe, this man bought a Liberty bond. "I want to lend my mite to Uncle Sam. His cause is right," the German said.

The incident is just a repetition of The Courier's belief and statement that Germans in America are not all alien enemies. Among those who have sought relief from the itching yoke of Prussianism by casting their lot with the American nation are some of our most loyal people. Reading over the lists of Liberty loan subscribers we are impressed by the number of names obviously German. That a man or woman was born in Germany or of German parentage does not make him a spy nor a traitor to his adopted country.

After writing recently of a young man in the United States army, a youth born across the waters and who lived there with his parents until he was 13 years old, the editor recently was favored by a visit from the boy's aged mother. The good woman, speaking in Germanic accent so strong that it was difficult to understand her, and with the tears from a noble heart welling into her eyes as she carefully folded out the newspaper to the item mentioning her son as a soldier, told us that in all her life she had never been so proud as the day she kissed, maybe for the last time on earth, the youngest of her three sons, all German-born, who were enlisted under the Stars and Stripes.

Mothers and fathers of such German boys are legion. They are helping the United States with their own flesh and with their dollars and they teach us a lesson in patriotism that could well be emulated by many who have more claim to American freedom. And they are setting a fine example for others from across the sea who would prevent this nation from achieving her destiny, who would prevent Uncle Sam and his allies from ridding the world of the arch-devil, Kaiser Wilhelm.

RULE OF PATRIOTISM

There is no better rule of patriotism for the guidance of all pacifists, conscientious objectors and sticklers for the rights of free speech than that laid down by William J. Bryan in an address in Chicago.

After asserting that the citizen who insists upon criticizing the war policies of the government is "a promoter of anarchy," Mr. Bryan said: "I don't know how long the war will last, but I know that the quickest way out is straight through. Any division or discussion now would simply prolong the war and make it more costly in lives and treasure." No man hates war more bitterly than Mr. Bryan, but the war has come in spite of everything that was done to avoid it, and Mr. Bryan's way of ending it is to beat Germany as soon as possible. That is the way of all men who see straight, and Mr. Bryan is doing a great public service in bringing the issues into the open.—World.

A RIGHTFUL PEACE

America, says President Wilson, will not make a peace that is not based on a rightful settlement of the principles for which the nation is fighting. The only end to the war is a complete victory for the nations representing democratic ideals over the nations adhering to the German doctrine of force. A German success would mean not only the prevention of the spirit of democracy but possibly might include the suppression of that already existing.

The president voices the ideals and the determination of the American people. There must be no compromise with the things that the German imperial government stands for and has practiced. Germany sought to impose her "kultur" on the world; the result is going to be that the American ideals of liberty and right and justice will prevail throughout the world even in Germany.

THE "NEWS" APPROVES

And now the Oregon City Courier is getting into line with the News in complaining against some of the present fish and game laws; for editor Robby also likes to eat salmon and enjoy the right of a Clackamas county citizen of catching his own.

In this connection, we also understand that our county agriculturist, R. J. Werner, is interesting himself in having the barriers in the Clackamas and Sandy rivers removed.

If we will keep at it long enough and stick together, the time may yet come when the residents of this "home of the salmon" won't have to go to the coast to catch our fish or depend upon the cannery for their high priced, prepared output.—Estate News.

Did you buy your Liberty bond?

But there is no camouflage for the chap who had the price, yet failed to buy a Liberty bond.

At any rate, we are justified in the remark that it is getting about time to unpack last winter's woollens.

When the youngsters begin on: "The frost is on the pumpkin and the fodder's in the shock," it's high time to believe that Halloween is nigh.

A contemporary pauses in its mad rush to remark that Russian women will make better soldiers than the men. They cannot run so fast.

Buying Liberty bonds is a duty of those who stay at home. The duty of our boys across the water is to "go over the top." Are they more valorous than we?

Speaking of the consumer and his relation to the high cost of living as it is forced by the trust: Did you ever notice how the corset trust squeezes the consumer?

The world's series farce is over. Baseball has degenerated. How much more sport was in the game when we used to play it in the pasture or the sand lot!

Press reports mention a Dutch scientist who has constructed vacuum walls to make his quarters absolutely quiet. Nothing wonderful about that! Several local merchants obtain the same results by simply failing to advertise.

The life of Allen Eaton of Eugene is practically ruined, as far as his good intent is now concerned, because he made one unpatriotic step. Sometimes patriotism of the unimpeachable variety is a paying proposition.

You have heard, dear reader, of the unfortunate fellow who says he never uttered a swear word. It's pickles to palace that fellow never dropped a collar button and watched it roll under the dresser three minutes before the train was due.

Portland's baseball team, incidentally, went into fifth place in the league again on Sunday. The great American game just now is wiping up the world's floor with Kaiser "Bill" and The Courier would like to see at least that one team engaged at the wiping job.

Senator Raynoss, in the congress of Mexico, said: "Mexico, doing honor to her history, ideals and progress, must be with the countries fighting for justice, liberty and civilization." Mexico, our revolution-ridden sister, must be coming to her senses.

"I made the mistake of my career when I had the opportunity that I did not remove the Hohenzollerns from the throne of Prussia. As long as this house reigns and until the red cap of liberty is erected in Germany there will be no peace in Europe." Napoleon at St. Helena.

There are many examples of "camouflage" in Oregon City—we do not have to go to the trenches to discover them. Sand in the sugar; the powder on milady's face; the big potatoes on top of a sackful of marbled spuds; and in the glorious springtime, the luscious big strawberries that cover a box of tiny little withered ones.

WILSON PREDICTS EARLY DEPARTURE FROM CAMP

The following interesting letter, containing what is taken to be an original poem by the young man, was received on Monday by County Clerk Iva Harrington from Sergeant Kent R. Wilson, son of Sheriff and Mrs. W. J. Wilson, who is stationed at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C. The letter says:

I was transferred last week from the medical department, 162nd infantry, (Oregon) by order of the division surgeon, and placed in charge of the regimental hospital attached to the 147th machine gun battalion. This battalion was formerly the 2nd Idaho infantry, having been split up in accordance with the plans of the war department. Many of the infantry units are being changed into machine gun and artillery organizations, for the purpose of supplying these distinctive units that the division was lacking. It is rumored that the "Rainbow division" is quarantined at Long Island with spinal meningitis, which is probably the reason for the general hurrying of things around here. I believe that with the complete organization of the division and a month or so of intensive training we will be on our way to France.

This is really a wonderful camp, ideally located, perfect drainage, as we are right in the low rolling hill country characteristic of this part of the state. Groves of oak, maple and pine cover the entire camp and with their crimson tints and varied hues of autumn at this time they are really beautiful. The weather here is somewhat similar to Indian summer in Oregon. The days are ideal with the warm southern sun, but oh! the nights are awfully cold and especially when you only have two thin blankets—

Me and my two thin blankets—
As thin as a slice of ham.
A German spy was likely the guy
Who made 'em for Uncle Sam.
How did I sleep? Don't kid me,
My bedtick is filled with straw
And lumps and humps and big fat bumps
That punched me till I'm all raw.

Me and my two thin blankets,
As thin as the last thin dime,
As thin, I guess, as a chorus girl's dress—
Well, I had one hell of a time.
I pull 'em up from the bottom—
(My nightie's my B. V. D.'s)
A couple of yanks to cover my slanks,
And then my ——— I freeze.

You could use 'em for porous plaster,
Or maybe to strain the soup,
(My pillow's my shoes when I try to snooze—)
And I've chilblains, cough and the croup.

Me and my two thin blankets,
Bundled up under my chin—
Yes, a German spy was likely the guy,
And Gosh! but he made 'em thin.

A steady stream of soldiers from the northwest continues to pour into camp each day. The capacity of the camp is about 50,000 men; to date there are about 25,000. Yesterday being pay day these 25,000 wild men from the northwest took possession of the dignified town of Charlotte. Charlotte is a "quaint old town" and it has quaint old southern customs, one being an absolute closed town on Sundays, even to the drugstore. You can't even buy a cigar, let alone a "Coca Cola." A vigorous campaign has been started by the public-spirited citizens of the town to remove the Sunday "lid," but to date the movement has been unsuccessful.

The "Oregon" boys in camp are showing up great in every department. They are really the pride of the camp and I know that they will be among the first to "go over the top."

I saw Captain Blanchard yesterday, he is looking fine. He said his men were in great condition and "rearing to go." Captain and Adjutant "Bill" Logus is a busy man all the time as it is thru him that all the orders and instructions pertaining to the 162nd infantry, (3rd Ore.) are transmitted. The Oregon City boys with the engineers are a busy lot these days, learning the arts and trades that are necessary to a real army engineer. It is the Oregon Engineers that are going to pave the way to Berlin.

I know all the Oregon City boys join me and send their regards to the people in the best little town on the globe.

A BUSINESS CHAT

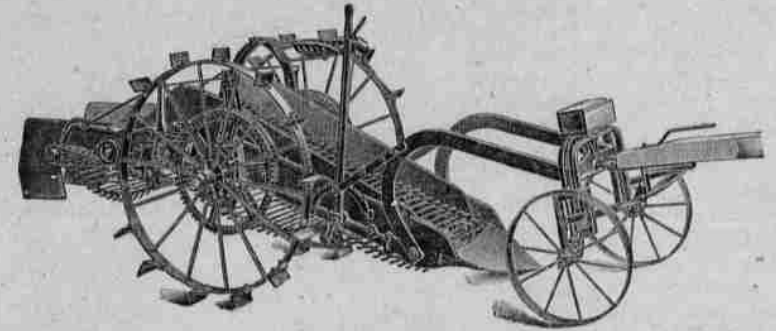

When the average reader runs up against an advertising spiel in his home paper he may read it, but it's a sure bet that he won't digest it. Nine times out of ten that very reader will have a tub of new-made butter that will turn rancid and spoil before he thinks of advertising it for sale. Mayhap he has an orchard with the finest fruit in the county—and he lets it rot on the trees for want of buyers when there are scores in Oregon City and elsewhere who would pay his price without a question if they knew of the fruit. Buyers can't know that you have anything from butter to a bawky horse for sale unless you advertise it.

THE COURIER columns are open at reasonable rates to the proper kind of advertising. The proof of the pudding is in the tasting, and until you get common business brains enough to tell the buying public that you have pickles, pork or pumicestones for sale you can't know the value of advertising. One woman has made her fortune from preserves—she advertised them. Scores of farmers have an independent, direct-to-the-consumer business simply because they told the world what they had to sell and the world found out it was pretty good stuff. Think it over and come in and let's have a business chat.

OLCOTT APOLOGIZES

Secretary Denies Intention of Injuring or Offending Clerk
County Clerk Iva Harrington last Thursday received a letter from Secretary of State Ben W. Olcott, in which that official denies any intention of retiring Miss Harrington or any of the other 12 county clerks mentioned in recent newspaper stories as subject to removal from office for failure to furnish information to the state office. Miss Harrington had explained her delay by the fact that necessary blanks had not arrived and that the help in the office could not handle the extra work promptly. Secretary Olcott says in his letter that the newspaper stories were in no way inspired by anything he said.

The mandate in the case of the Weyerhaeuser Land company against the board of equalization of this county was sent to Judge Campbell Friday from the supreme court.
