SERVICE CORPORATIONS

Commission Should Be Servant in Every Sense of Word

Someone has very truthfully said, "time works wonderful changes."

Not long ago to be at the head of a public service corporation was an achievement; it was a position that elevated one in the public mind; made the man holding that position a ruler, a dictator, a community guide post, to a large extent. But that was in the days when it was considered a high honor to ride on a railroad pass.

Now, how is it? The head of the public service corporation is a servant in every sense of the term. He is straining every nerve to please his patrons. "No public be d—d" with him. Some of his predecessors might have been sufficiently entrenched to utter such a remark, but not the corporation man of today. He gets up in the morning feeling his hold slipping. Many times it is through willful misrepresentations by the demagogue who wants to build his own popularity by tearing down others with untruths. He goes to lunch with a troubled look fearing that his position to a committee of patrons has been misunderstood. He trudges home to his family at nighttime feeling that he has done the best he could on all problems during the day, and still there is a lurking feeling that unjustifiable clouds hang over his administration.

We are speaking now of the square, manly men who are directing honest corporations and not the guilty "slip-one-over-on-the-public" kind, of which there are still some in existence.

Who is to blame for this condition? No, not the public—not the consumer.

Not the honest corporation, nor the honest man who directs the honest corporation.

It is the first of all, the selfish politician and selfish agitator who points to crooked work on the part of some particularly dishonest corporation and then classes all public utilities with the dishonest one. The public finds upon investigation of the dishonest corporation that the charges of the agitators are true and without further investigation places everything under corporate seal in the same class. The fireworks start, the howl grows louder and finally public opinion gets in its work and honest earnings are decreased, damage suits of every description follow. And this is why the head that directs the public utility corporation of today rests uneasy.

Very recently we received a letter from a good friend who is a man among men; who directs an honest corporation. And in that letter he said, "being a public utility man now, a-days is very much like being a prize fighter placed in the ring with both hands and feet tied, and called upon to meet all comers with the principal rules of the game being that no restrictions be placed upon the character of the attack, but the hog-tied defender must fight according to schedule made for him by others."

He is right to a very great extent. How many of us know that bill after bill has been introduced in the legislature for the sole purpose of making trouble for a public service corporation and without any thought whatever of doing good for the public. These are introduced by the same demagogue who raises a cry against all corporations because he finds one that is corrupt.

The only thing for the corporations of Oregon to do is to join with the honest people who are not seeking office, nor trying to run party organizations and make a clean cut, open handed fight against the selfish politician, the blatant demagogue. Take the public into confidence and defy the traducers to produce proof of the inflammatory statements made against all public service corporations, forcing them to specify just which one is meant in their charges.

We believe the people are fair and when once the situation is correctly understood capital will be perfectly safe in Oregon and permitted to earn a proper return on the investment.

Saturday Shopping Hints for Home Shoppers

These pretty summer days bring to the store windows of Oregon City and to the shelves and show-cases, a wide and pleasing variety of wares suited to the season. Wares which include everything to make summer not only a comfortable season, but to make it pleasant, and with the ever increasing ingenuity of manufacturers the displays this season rival anything of the days "before the war."

Adams' Department store shows a special consignment of white summer shoes in all shapes and styles at specially reduced prices. Nowadays no one thinks of wearing any but white shoes in the summer time and Mr. Adams has provided well for the wants of his many patrons.

With the summer season come those beautiful scenes about home and the country that every person would have as an everlasting record. Everlasting records are expensive luxuries unless one happens to read and heed the advertisement of Burneister and Andersen, who have a display of reasonably priced kodaks and supplies.

Wilson and Cooke have prepared for the harvest season that is already occupying major attention among the farmers. This progressive firm has the famous Deering binder on sale. They will willingly show its merits to anyone who calls at their store.

Frank Busch is selling odd pieces of furniture at genuine bargains this week. Broken sets, including some of the finest furniture in the large Busch stock, suffer reductions that should tempt the housewife.

Huntley Drug Co. Many have admired and wished for a Victrola outfit, but price has stood in the way for years. It remained for the Huntley Drug company to provide a Victrola at a price within reach of any purse. The phonograph is almost a summer time necessity.

W. J. Wilson & Co., dealing in the popular Mitchell-Lewis & Staver wagons and farm implements have an advertising story on page four that contains much of interest to farmers. "The Monarch of the Road," is on the floor of this big store ready for your inspection at any time.

BROWN RETURNS

Editor of Benton County Paper Tells Stories of Borderland

M. J. Brown, editor of the Benton County Courier at Corvallis and formerly editor of the Oregon City Courier, returned last week from a month's sojourn along the Mexican border where he gathered material for a series of stories that are to appear in several papers throughout the country, including his own.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown, son and little daughter visited for several days in Oregon City before returning to their Benton county home where Mr. Brown will resume his editorial duties.

Mr. Brown visited the encampment of the Oregon guard troops on the California border and reports much of interest from that very active frontier. He also "saw the sights" at Tia Juana in Lower California, said to be the most "wide open" town in the world. Everything and anything goes in Tia Juana and they go so fast that Mr. Brown did not prolong his visit after getting the details for a story about the lively village.

WOULD RECOVER WAGON

C. James Ivey of Oswego Gets Warrant for Strayer

The Rev. C. James Ivey of Oak

Grove secured a warrant in Justice Sievers' court on Wednesday for the arrest of George E. Strayer, whose exact whereabouts is unknown, charging larceny by baillee.

Strayer, formerly of the Strayer mission of Portland, borrowed a wagon from Mr. Ivey some time ago. After a reasonable time Mr. Ivey sought the borrower, but the gentleman could not be found. Descriptions will be sent over the state in searching for Mr. Strayer.

Camp Party

A delightful evening was that spent on Tuesday at the summer camp of Mrs. C. E. Fraker and daughters, Laverne and Katherine at Gladstone by fifty friends of Mrs. Fraker and the girls. A basket dinner was a feature of the evening and later the happy group assembled about a huge bonfire where marshmallow toasting and camp fire tales helped pass a pleasant hour. The pretty summer camp was deserted today and its occupants have returned to their home in this city.
