WILLAMETTE

The masquerade of deaf and dumb party given by Mrs. Mary Cristeater and her seventh and eighth grades last Friday evening, was a great success. Most of those present were so effectively disguised that it was difficult for their recognition even by members of their own families. Before unmasking, a Who's Who Contest was held, which resulted in Lloyd Duncan and Vena Barnes carrying off the honors, since they were successful in recognizing the most of the persons in disguise. Suitable prizes were awarded.

Some very unique and pretty characters were given. Miss Cora Hunt and Thelma DeBok were the most successful in guessing these and they, too, received prizes.

Much interest was manifested in giving the school yells under the leadership of Terry Barnes. From the sentiment of the yells and the enthusiasm with which they were given there was no doubt but that all of the school work is progressing with the utmost harmony. The patrons declare that they never had a better school.

Among those present as guests, there were: Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Courtney, Mrs. Jess Hyatt and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Shipley, Miss Cora Hunt and Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Romig and daughter, Elizabeth.

After the playing of games and the partaking of refreshments, suitable to the occasion, all adjourned just before the midnight hour arrived. All seemed to have a most pleasant time, and much credit is due the hosts and hostesses.

Principal C. F. Romig, Misses Cristeater, Wirt and Marshall, teachers of Willamette, attended the reception given by the W. C. T. U. of Oregon City to the School teachers of Oregon City and the surrounding neighboring districts on Monday afternoon at the Baptist church, and they report a most pleasant time.

John Helburg, of the Mountain Road district, who was severely hurt in a runaway about a week ago, has recovered sufficiently to be removed to his own home.

Mrs. Geo. Zielinski has been ill for some time and is reported no better.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. F. Young was brightened by the arrival of a daughter Thursday, Oct. 28th. Both child and mother are reported as getting along finely.

The regular meeting of the Ladies Aid of the M. E. Church was held in the church Thursday afternoon of this week.

Rev. Abbott of the M. E. church held services Sabbath evening. Miss Wirt rendered a very beautiful solo at this service.

The school board at their meeting last Monday evening decided to standardize the rooms of the grades.

On Friday evening of this week the second year of the high school will hold a reception for the Freshman class, the eighth grade, the board of directors and their wives, the teachers and the high school pupils living in Willamette and attending Oregon City High School.

A masquerade Halloween party was held Saturday evening, Oct. 30, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Isongle. Games were a prominent feature of the evening, and Mrs. J. McNeil and Mr. Carl Elliott were among those awarded prizes. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Wilson, Mrs. J. McNeil, Mr. and Mrs. Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Carpenter, Mr. and Mrs. J. Ream, Mr. and Mrs. E. Downey, Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Tuor, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Elliott, Mr. and Mrs. Ewald Leisman and Misses Gladys Baker and Belle Mathers.

CHERRYVILLE

The gobblins were out last Saturday night.

The question for discussion at the Literary Society's last meeting was: "Resolved, That Every Man physically Fit Should Receive Military Training."

The new hotel and bungalow now being erected at Cherryville is rapidly approaching completion and is surely a very attractive building. It has already been noticed by travelers and favorably commented upon. It does much to keep this burg on the map, and will be the means of others building these bungalows along the auto road, which is now the Loop on the great scenic Columbia Highway, being the return route from Hood River.

Frank Walsh, of Kansas City, and chairman of the late Industrial Commission, is now editor of a newspaper in Kansas City. There will be no hobbles or blind bridges on this sheet and some greedy and blood-thirsty wretches grinding the face of the poor will get what's coming to them.

Wholesale liquor houses in Portland are sending out frantic appeals to send in orders for booze, as they want to unload before the dry spell begins; and they warn their patrons that when 1916 arrives a person can get only two dozen bottles of beer and two quarts of whiskey a month then. How very considerate they are to remind us of this law.

A Federal Reserve note was received at the postoffice here lately in the way of business. Pray tell me how the government can furnish the regional banks with money—the people's money—at two and one-half percent when the people, according to John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency, have to pay these banks from six percent up to 24 percent. We must have Rural Credits so that the farmers can have some show to live. They can't begin to pay the interest these man-eating banks ask and live.

PARKPLACE

A surprise party was given Gilbert Coffey at his home October 27th by the C. E. to celebrate his 17th birthday. There were about twenty-five there, and everyone had a fine time. About half past ten o'clock refreshments were served, and about an hour later the young people went home. The evening was spent playing games.

October 28 there was an illustrated lecture given by the Rev. Edwards, pastor of the Congregation church in Oregon City, assisted by Rev. Smith, pastor of the church at Parkplace. They showed pictures of Germany, and they were certainly well worth a larger home than was present.

The Ladies of the Jennings Lodge Aid Society invited the Ladies' Aid of the Congregation church of Oregon City, Parkplace and Clackamas, to meet with them on October 27th to a luncheon, which was a most elaborate affair and was greatly enjoyed by more than 60 who were present. Mrs. Ostrom, president of Jennings Lodge society, acted as toast mistress. Those responding were Mrs. David Canfield, Mrs. Haskell, Mrs. Money, Mrs. Dye, Mrs. Stevens, Mrs. Rannels, Mrs. Lucas and Mrs. Smith. Mrs. Mark and Mrs. Jacobs were coffee makers.

A meeting was held in the auditorium of the school in Parkplace October 22nd to take up the organization of a parent teacher's association. Miss Volsted called the gathering to order. The program opened with a solo by Miss Wallace, piano solo by Miss Holmes. Supt. Calavan then took charge and after a short but good talk, called on Prof. Tooez, who gave a very able talk, emphasizing the selection of reading for children, and also that the parents should work with the teacher. To start such an organization they appointed Mrs. Lucas as president and Mrs. Pope as secretary. They appointed Miss Volsted Miss Chadburne and Mrs. La Dieux a committee on organization to meet next month.

MOUNTAIN VIEW

O. H. Van Hoy and son, Claude, have purchased the Streeve property on South Molalla avenue, and are improving the same.

Frank Chandler is putting down a plank road from Molalla avenue and Caulfield street in order to get his jenny to the garage.

Miss Florence Bierman fell last Tuesday in the high school building, sustaining bad bruises, but fortunately no bones were broken. She was taken to her home and Dr. Strickland was called.

Mrs. Chandler returned to her home here after several weeks spent in Washington with her daughter.

Mrs. Josie Snyder, of Portland, is spending several days here with her aunt, Mrs. Will Hall, who has been very poorly lately.

Mrs. Leona Hickman and Mrs. Harvey Hickman were visitors with Mrs. Amanda Hickman at her home this week.

Mrs. M. M. Hall is moving into the Dix property this week.

Mrs. J. P. Roehl returned to her home near Canby after several weeks visit with friends in Oregon City.

Miss Little, a cousin of Mrs. Beverlin, who has been visiting here for some time, started last Tuesday for her home at Galesburg, Illinois.

A jolly crowd of 16 girls was entertained by Mrs. Van Anken last Friday night at a Halloween party. Ghosts and spirits predominated, and yet they all could eat when refreshments were served.

Frank Bullard lost several of his porkers last week by their eating brine that they accidentally had access to.

Mr. Wiley May was able to walk up to one of the stores last Tuesday after being almost helpless for some time from paralysis.

The Ladies' Aid of Mountain View church, are a busy crowd, and are always ready to help any who need their assistance.

Everybody is happy over the new water, and it is needless to spend five hundred dollars for a jobline.

CLARKES

Miss Adline Gassar and Bert Hubbard were married last week. The bride's brother, Frank Gassar, was also married last week.

Miss Mary Bottemiller is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. Ralph, in Oregon City.

Arthur Gugg sawed wood for Mr. W. H. Bottemiller recently.

A dance was held at the Grange hall last Saturday night.

Violet and Panzy Wettlaufer, of Oregon City, visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wettlaufer, over Sunday.

Joe Fishley is out in Clarkes again, and he is helping Mr. Zwalhen.

Mr. Wettlaufer hauled a load of potatoes to town last Friday.

There was a temperance lecture held last Sunday night.

A. Guff has been sawing wood for

HIGHLAND

A number of folks from here attended the dance at the Grange hall at Clarkes Saturday night.

Mrs. Hawkins and son, of Portland, are visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Adams.

Joe Parrish and family moved to Oregon City last week.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Kandle went to Portland on business the latter part of the week.

Frank Shute went to Oregon City Saturday.

Mrs. J. Caldwell, of Molene, Wash., is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. O. Caldwell.

Mr. and Mrs. M. E. Kandle were Oregon City visitors Monday.

Mrs. Hanhart returned home Monday after a few days visit with some friends in Portland.

Miss Josephine Adams, who is working in Portland, spent Saturday and Sunday visiting her parents.

FROM DR. FORD

Former Methodist Pastor Tells the Courier What He Thinks of It

Editor Courier: I thank you sincerely for your kind words concerning me, and my work in Oregon City. You paid me a very high compliment and I greatly appreciate the kindness and the spirit in which it was given.

I went to Oregon City without the slightest reluctance, and with a view to affiliate myself with its citizens regardless of politics or religion, in every movement that meant the betterment of its people, its business men, schools and churches, and I did my very best while there.

I believed, and still believe, that the city has resources, relations and possibilities that few even dream of, and some day travelers from all parts of the country will come there, not only to see the "Falls" and the mills and the full use of the power, much of which is now going to waste, and to visit the historic spots and first buildings as shrines and to thank God for the men and women who laid the foundations and for others who build thereon.

Clackamas county, much of which is tributary to the city, is one of the most resourceful fields in the state and the lines of railways already constructed and projected; with an open river, make it possible for the business men of sagacity and enterprise to put in and carry out a truly liberal policy that will, from farmers and the people of the thirty villages to the city as the commercial center of a large area, and this means work, people, better business, better homes, better schools, better churches—a thriving city of scenic beauty.

And, although I have moved to Salem and we are well pleased with our new location and the city, and have been warmly welcomed, I shall not lose my interest in Oregon City, its institutions and people, and I wish for them the best things.

I hope to drop into the Live Wires some Tuesday and with the men there to feed the spirit and to partake with them of one of the delicious lunches that the Guild ladies put up for the refreshing of the tired man.

With best wishes I am,
Yours truly,
T. B. FORD.

FOR "LITTLE ARMY" FOLK

Comments From the Marines On A Form of Popular Agitation

An Anti-enlistment league, pledging all male members over 18 years of age to refrain from enlisting for any international war in which the United States may become involved, is forming at 61 Quincy Street, Brooklyn, N. Y., not far from the Navy Yard, where hundreds of United States Marines are held in readiness to leave at a moment's notice for any part of the world where American interests are threatened.

And the Marines are all "het up" over the matter, too. "Telling it" to them has its drawbacks, for, as "Johnnie-on-the-spot" they form the first line of the national mobile defense, and they cannot get the viewpoint of the peace-at-any-price propagandists who have established headquarters close by.

"The United Marine Corps is up to maximum strength this minute and is ready to a man for anything that may arise," said a grizzled old gunnery sergeant when told the news. "Let 'em strike, the home enemy, or the foreign kind, and they'll always find the Marines able to give a good account of themselves. We sometimes need a few men to fill our ranks, but we've never yet had to call in the kind of male bipeds who wanted to know who the enemy was going to be before they enlisted. The United States Marine Corps is no place for a milkop, mollycoddle, or half-hearted man, for we're always in the thick of something or other, and we like to have a ticklish job to do. Look at aiti. No sir, these anti-enlistment people do not realize what they are doing. They do not realize that an adequate army and navy is the surest protection against war, and the stronger our armed forces are the less likelihood there is of a surprise attack by an unscrupulous enemy. The United States Marine Corps (which is neither army or navy), has a scant ten thousand men with which to hold the foe at bay in the early stages of an invasion. These ten thousand are ready to a man and a button, but instead of ten we should be fifty thousand strong, to insure against war and as a means of protection against an unjust aggression. Perhaps if New York was bombarded by a foreign fleet the headquarters of the anti-enlistment league would remove from 61 Quincy Street, Brooklyn, to the Navy Yard, maybe. Stranger things that that have happened."

Everybody Well; Business Poor

WORDS IN PASSING

Item Printed in Courier Brings in at Least Two Comments

People appear to read the Courier. Last week this paper published a brief and not over-serious item, announcing the forthcoming retirement of the Hon. Gordon E. Hayes.

Since then people have been coming in and saying things, and others have been writing. The Courier doesn't feel called upon to offer here all the commentaries that have been made on the Hayes announcement, but perhaps two of them are worthy a wider circulation than they would receive simply in the Courier office.

One man, a farmer, dropped in and spoke as follows:

"John Stark is all right, keep him a-writing. And I see that Hayes is going to take his shingle off. If he does that his roof will leak worse than ever."

One letter received ran as follows; and it was from our old friend:

"Editor, Courier: I note that you announce the approaching retirement of Judge Hayes. I personally don't see how such a retiring man can retire any further. What do you mean by this retire stuff—a joke? Yours as usual,

LIVE STOCK HUSBANDRY

WEAK BONED PIGS.

Cause Is Due to Lack of Mineral Matter in the Ration.

All hogs, but principally brood sows, are likely to have weak bones or be subject to partial paralysis, writes a correspondent of the National Stockman. This is a condition that is hard to cure, but easier to prevent, and is often the source of loss. It is due to a lack of the bone building material, principally phosphate of lime, in the ration.

Hogs fed to a large extent on potatoes often show this condition. Root crops and, to a smaller extent, the common grains are also deficient in phosphate of lime. Bran, which is considered a very good bone building food, contains a large amount of this substance. Shorts and the legume hays also contain phosphorus. It is safe and cheap to allow the hogs free access to bone building material at all times. Bone ash, principally phosphate of lime, is the best. Wood ashes are of some value for this purpose and are of value also to keep hogs in good condition. It has been proved that hogs can make good use of ground phosphate rock or floats. If the material is kept before them constantly they will not eat too much, being governed by the appetite in the same way that the appetite restricts the amount of salt eaten to the amount the body needs.

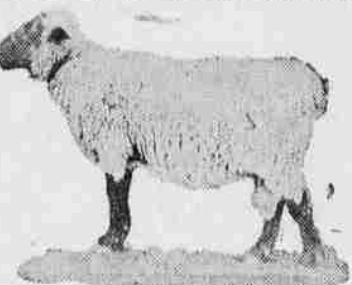

Sows carrying or suckling a litter of young, and rapidly growing pigs have the greatest need for bone building material.

SELECTING THE EWES.

Early Maturing Lambs Make the Best Flock Improvers.

The man who replaces the culls from his flock or adds to its size with ewe lambs of his own raising has an opportunity to take advantage of several factors. The ewe lambs retained for breeding purposes should be the first born rather than the last. In other words, have them as nearly the same age as possible. It is said by old shepherds that late born lambs have a tendency to breed late, and many times they fail to develop into good, thrifty breeding ewes. Ewe lambs that are about the same age will usually all breed about the same time, and hence one can expect more uniformity in the lamb crop.

Again, the early maturing ewe lamb should be retained. By so doing one can expect to build up in the course of time a flock of sheep that will produce early maturing lambs. This is a big factor in the business from a market viewpoint, for the early maturing lamb is always by far the most profitable. One of the things that help a lamb to mature early is a mother that is a good suckler. Here again is another factor for the breeder to consider. The lambs that are to remain in the flock should be from heavy suckling ewes. There is nothing that adds finish to the lamb and palatability to the meat so much as a good covering of milk fat on the carcass.

Shropshires and Hampshires originated partly from different foundation stock. The most striking feature distinguishing the Hampshire is its jet black face, ears and shanks, with less wool on the face than Shropshires. The Hampshire face and ears are also more prominent and longer, and the neck is commonly longer than in Shropshires. The mutton forms of the best representatives of each breed are quite similar. The sheep shown is a Hampshire, a distinctly mutton sheep.

The ewes usually have the fence corners, roadsides, stubble field and truck patches cleaned up before this time of the year, and the owner can well afford to give them plenty of feed for the proper conditioning of the breeding season. On the average farm very little or nothing need be expended for feed between the weaning and breeding period. This is the season of the year sheep are a valuable asset to the farm, for they utilize the weeds and other products that would be considered waste if it were not for them. By the time the breeding season arrives the ewes are in good condition and thrifty from the tender forage they have grazed from waste places. Of course, in case the scavenger feed is not enough to make them put on enough flesh to look plump a little barley feed in helping to round the ewes into form.—C. Harper, Illinois Agricultural College.

Electricity

Simplifies Housekeeping

In The New Home

People who are building new homes should see that their houses are properly wired for Electric Domestic Appliances, not forgetting the Electric Range, which has arrived to stay.

In Homes Already Built

Those already established in new modern homes or those built years ago, will find it comparatively easy and inexpensive to extend the wiring so that an Electric Range may be connected.

The Electric Way is the Modern Way

For years inventors have worked on the problem of Electric Cooking Ranges. It is only recently that comparative perfection has been reached by the invention of a new metallic combination. So that now manufacturers are ready to Guarantee their products. It is now that this Company confidently presents Electric Cookery as practical.

ONE MAN'S IDEA

Correspondent Writes about a Number of Things and Folks

Editor, Courier: I see by Monday's Oregonian that Col. E. Hofer, the Salem rain-maker, and late advocate of the cause of the "wets," finds in the agitation for Sunday closing of everything a chance to rise up and scream: "I told you so." The Colonel—I wonder how he got his title—says that when he was campaigning against prohibition he repeatedly told the people that if they voted Oregon dry, the next step would be to put the lid on everything on Sunday.

Maybe the Colonel did say this—I do not know, for I never attended any of his little talks, not even his joint debates with Clarence True Wilson. I have often heard Dr. Wilson, and found him entertaining, so I didn't feel that I cared to go and listen to the Colonel try to poke holes in Dr. Wilson's arguments. But I get away from my subject—as I notice that John Stark does quite frequently. And not caring to imitate Mr. Stark, let me get back to Sunday closing, which is the matter I have in mind.

Personally I think Sunday closing would be a good thing, if it was exercised in the right direction. For instance, I would like to see the overworked and tired-out ministers given a rest on Sunday. These people ought to receive lots more sympathy than they do, for they really lead a very hard life. Most of them, according to their own statements, are grossly underpaid; and for the stipend that they receive they have to spend five days of the week cheering up the doleful, spend all day Saturday getting up a sermon that they preach Sunday, and on Sunday they only get about three hours attention from the members of their flock.

Aside from this they are constantly besieged by people who want to borrow money from them, by others who want to sell them gilt-edged stock printed in two colors and carrying pictures of a cornucopia of plenty, and by young men who want to know if two dollars is a big enough fee for the marriage ceremony. They have no time to themselves at all, and have to be constantly at the call of those who think they need them. In addition to this they have to wear good clothes, eat chicken every time they are invited out to dinner, and must never laugh unduly or go to a minstrel or a girl show. Their lives are hard and barren and drear, and they ought to have freedom at least on Sunday, so that they can get out with the common working man and his family and have a good time.

I am sure, Mister Editor, that you will agree with me, and that you will aid me in trying to get the Sunday closing law to apply to churches, so that some joy may filter into the lives of our pastors—who are trying so hard to make things better for the rest of us.

Who's "Sore" Now?

A splendid opportunity for a weekly newspaper to receive a genuine support in a live country town of 5000 people; and in the entire county, if independent and will publish facts exposing grafters. No subsidy, but address AV 264, Oregonian.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure it, science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

NOVEL STOCK FOOD

Soft Coal, Almost, Recommended as Fodder for Dairy Cattle

Some interesting uses are being made of heat in the United States. It is manufactured into a fertilizer and employed as a fertilizer filler, according to the United States Geological Survey; it is also used for making paper, stock food and mud baths. In Germany and Austria peat baths are well-established institutions, and during the last few years such baths have been tried in some of the sanitariums in the Middle West and found beneficial in certain cases. As food for live stock, however, peat seems to have found its most curious use, inasmuch as the kind of peat used is thousands of years old, and although it may still be classed as vegetable in character, it is only a step removed from low-grade coal. As a stock food it is used in a mixture containing molasses.

The results are stated to have been very satisfactory in practice, the peat acting as a tonic and corrective. The peat used is the black, well-humified or rotted kind and is prepared in practically the same way as when used for fertilizer. Peat for various purposes was produced in the United States last year to the extent of 57,000 tons, valued at $367,000. The peat deposits of the United States are of enormous extent.
