THE CAR THAT WILL WORK FOR A MAN

I have looked at the canopied coaches that ride like ships of the gods on the sea, and the swaths of their cutting are heavy and wide. Like a bungalow out on a spree; I have heard of their story and of their speed, and the more of their glory I see the better I know that the car I need is a car that will work for a man.

I am not of the gods; I reside on the earth; I am fond of the neighborhood, too. And I want a machine that will render its worth in the things that I want it to do; and the ship of the gods may be good for the gink with a million or so in his hoard, but I know what I want, and I think what I think, and I think I will get me a Ford.

I will get it, and settle, and put it to use, and the ships of the gods may cavort; they may run them on hundreds of gallons of juice—but the Ford gets there first—on a quart. They may smile at the little machine that I run, they may laugh, if they like to, and can, but the car that I want for myself is the one, that is worth what it costs to a man.

Joke a Ford and you joke at the sands of the seas and the leaves when the forests are full; when a bull rushes into a nest of bees is the joke on the bees or the bull? They are common—for everyone has 'em but me, and I feel pretty lonesome and bored, and I want what will be what I want it to be, so I'm going to buy me a Ford.

America's Leading Tragedienne

MRS. LESLIE CARTER IN A FILM VERSION OF "THE HEART OF MARYLAND"

Will Be at The Grand Friday

Mrs. Leslie Carter, David Belasco's former star, and the leading tragedienne of the American stage, will be seen at the Grand Theatre, Oregon City, Friday only of this week, in her great success "The Heart of Maryland." As an emotional actress Mrs. Carter has no equal on the stage today; and as a vehicle with which to exhibit to the fullest her power of dramatic art, "The Heart of Maryland" probably cannot be excelled. It was in this play that she leaped into first place in the hearts of the theatre-going public when she was under the management of that wizard of stage-craft, David Belasco; and it is in this great war-drama, also, that she makes her debut in the new dramatic world offered by the moving pictures.

Mrs. Leslie Carter's art is of the variety that shows to its best in the "silent drama," for much of her fame has been built up upon her power to portray human emotions by look and gesture. She does not need the spoken word to carry her message over the footlights to her audience; and those who have seen her both in the movies and in the older form of "The Heart of Maryland" declare that her acting is more appealing and charming in the intensified version of the war play which is shown upon the screen. In securing this wonderful picture of this remarkable actress for the Grand Theatre, Manager Schram has scored a distinct "beat" on all other county houses.

"The Heart of Maryland," written especially for Mrs. Leslie Carter by David Belasco, is a thrilling story of the Civil War, in which heart interest, spectacular situations, and the pomp, glory and sadness of war are all portrayed with telling effect. While the great scene of the play is that in which Mrs. Carter swings high in the air from the clapper of the bell in the belfry tower, so that the signal for her lover's death shall not be heard; there are many other situations of breathless interest, and there are intimate scenes in which the audience is moved to tears by the tenderness of the story being told.

"The Heart of Maryland" is an American classic, as well as a historical masterpiece; and to see it with Mrs. Leslie Carter in the leading role is to witness the greatest of all-American plays that the modern stage has produced. Every patriotic citizen, everybody who had heroic kin who served in the great struggle to preserve the union, everybody who likes a superb play, should take advantage of the opportunity, and see Mrs. Carter in the Belasco play at the Grand Friday.

Knowing the interest that Civil War veterans will have in viewing the scenes of that great struggle, Manager Schram has invited all members of the Meade Post, G. A. R., to attend the production of "The Heart of Maryland" as his guests.

"OLD GLORY"

And Why the Town of Sand Hill Didn't Hoist Him.

By M. QUAD Copyright, 1915, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

It was Enos Hopkins who got the idea that Sand Hill should prove her patriotism to the world at large by displaying the American flag for seven days a week. He got the idea one Sunday mornin' as he lay in bed, and he hugged it to his soul and chuckled over it for a week before he said anything to a livin' soul. Everybody knew by his actions that somethin' was up.

At length, when Saturday night came and there was the usual crowd at the postoffice, he shot off his gun. He had his speech all prepared. He told how the American flag was first bunt to the breeze; how men cheered for liberty as they saw it; how it had given happiness to millions. Men had fought cheerin' for that flag, and men had died blessin' it. He wanted it hoisted in Sand Hill at sunrise every day in the year, and he wanted children to cry for it and men and women to venerate it.

As soon as the crowd had recovered from its surprise and began to cheer Deacon Black said it was a mighty strong plan and one worthy of a leadin' patriot of Sand Hill. He was heartily in favor of the idea, and he would then and there contribute 15 cents toward the purchase of a public flag.

Then Hosea Saunders spoke. His grandfather had died while fightin' under the stars and stripes. His father had fallen and killed himself while climbin' a flagpole. His mother had wrapped him in the flag of liberty when he was born. It was hard times and money was tight, but he would go without tobacco for a month in order to contribute a shillin' toward the purchase of a flag. With his own hands, if agreeable to all, he would hoist the emblem at sunrise and lower it at sunset durin' the rest of his natural life.

The deacon said that was also a beautiful speech, with a mighty strong plan to it, and the feelin's of the crowd had got so worked up over freedom and liberty that tears stood in many eyes. Hosea was followed by Squar Joslyn, Philletus Williams, Abraham White and others, and there was frequent cheerin' and shakin' hands.

About ten years ago Abijah Davidson's dog tore the ear off a hog owned by Joel Hardman, and the men had been enemies ever since, but under the excitement and patriotism engendered by the speeches they fell into each other's arms and became brothers ag'in. It was settled that a public contribution should be taken up to buy a fifteen dollar flag, and then came the question of where it should be raised. Enos Hopkins, who had started it all, got up in a modest way and said he would go to the expense of plantin' a pole in front of his house. It was on high ground and the flag could be seen from every house in town.

"We wouldn't put Enos to all that trouble," said Deacon Black as he rose up. "He's done his sheer in thinkin' out the plan. I'll see that the flag is duly displayed from the roof of my cooper shop when it arrives."

"What's the matter b'listin' it over my grocery?" asked Dan Skinner as he wiped the tears of emotion from his eyes. "It isn't as high as some places, but more central."

Then everybody bobbed up and demanded to be heard. Every man present wanted that flag in front of his house or place of business and nowhere else, and purty soon they were shakin' their fists and sayin' they'd be durned if they wouldn't have it there or refuse to contribute a red cent. There was a lively row on in two minutes, with no more weepin' over patriotism.

Deacon Black rattled on the stovepipe with his cane until he quieted the racket, and then he said: "Feller patriots, have we no public spirit among us?"

"We have!" yelled the crowd. "Then let us exhibit it. Bein' my cooper shop is the highest buildin' in town and bein' the American flag has got to fliplop in the breeze to be seen and venerated, I unselfishly offer to put up a pole and take charge of the flag."

"So do I!" shouts every man in the crowd. Then Squar Joslyn made a speech. He told how a million men had died for that flag, how its stars and bars had made tyrants tremble, how a young nation had worshiped it and made all the world respect it. He wound up after ten minutes by offerin' to float it from his horse barn, but only hisses and groans followed. There was signs that three or four patriots would soon be punchin' each other's heads when Tom Bates strolled in in that careless way of his. Deacon Black pointed and rattled till he got order and then said:

"I want to hear from Tom Bates on this matter. Mobbe he can suggest somthin'. Tom, what place in town would you say the American flag ought to float from?" "How many stars are there in the American flag?" calmly asked Tom. Nobody could tell. "Well, how many stripes?" Nobody could tell. "Pears to me," said Tom as he started to wander out ag'in—"pears to me that as none of you can tell the difference between the American flag and a tablecloth you'd better hang up an old army blanket most anywhere and let it go at that."

And at the end of five minutes more there wasn't a patriot left in the postoffice, and nothin' more has ever been said about buyin' a public flag.

ASK BREEDERS' AID

Club Members Want Brood Sows; Agent Seeks List from Men

Oregon swine breeders can help solve the problem of good breeding stock for girls and boys of the pig clubs by sending to the club leader at O. A. C., Corvallis, a list of brood sows and gilts that they have for sale. This should also help the breeders find a market for their surplus breeding stuff. When these lists are received by the agent he will send them to club members making inquiries.

Lists should be detailed enough to give intending purchasers an idea of the quality and other necessary points. Either pure breeds or high grades may be enlisted for sale. Address lists to L. J. Allen, Pig Club Leader, O. A. C., Corvallis, Oregon.

CURED BOY OF CROUP

Nothing frightens a mother than the loud, hoarse cough of croup. The labored breathing, strangling, choking and gasping for breath call for instant action. Mrs. T. Neureuer, Eau Claire, Wis., says: "Foley's Honey and Tar cured my boy of a serious attack of croup after other remedies had failed. I recommend it to every one as we know from our own experience that it is a wonderful remedy for coughs, colds, croup and whooping cough." It clears air passages, soothes and heals.—Jones Drug Co.

To Talk on Britain

Sunday evening, at the Congregational church, the Rev. George Nelson Edwards will deliver the third of his illustrated talks upon the nations engaged in the European war, devoting special attention to Great Britain and her colonies. Members of the Burns society have been invited to attend in a body. The lantern slides thrown upon the screen will show typical British and colonial views, and England's statesmen and her armies and battle-ships will also be shown.

A MOTHER'S HOPES AND ANXIETIES

Until the first grade card is brought from school, each mother's heart will be filled with hopes and fears of the expected school advancement of her children. Have you left undone any duty that might change these hopes to certainties? What about good VISION—most necessary of all the child's equipment? Defective eye-sight is too great a handicap for any child to carry thru school; yet ONE in every FOUR suffer from it. Make sure; neglect may mean much.

RAILROAD GIVES SCHOOLS

Southern Pacific Deals in Unique Form of Charity in Southwest

Bunkhouses or dismantled car bodies are being used for school house purposes on the Southern California and Arizona desert territory through which the Southern California passes. As a result, the company is, and has been able for some time, to provide school privileges for every child of school age on the desert, regardless of their race or position. In most of the desert country, the railroad depends almost entirely upon Mexican labor for track forces, and the educational privileges are being eagerly taken advantage of by the Mexican children.

Before the Southern Pacific took an active interest in the welfare of its men in the cactus country, because of sparse population and isolation there were not enough residents in the communities to make it possible to obtain funds to put up suitable buildings. To send the children to distant towns to school was out of the question, so that until Assistant General Manager H. V. Platt and Superintendent W. H. Whalen and T. H. Williams took the matter in hand, a job on the desert had a disadvantage to the employee with a family—a disadvantage that, happily, does not now exist. On the Tucson Division at Mohawk, for instance, the company recently put up a tie house for a school and it is one of the best patronized by Mexican children. At other points on the division, the company is furnishing drinking water to nearby public schools. In other ways it is aiming to encourage educational opportunities. For example, the Los Angeles Division might be said to be divided into two sections—desert and divide. When a man has worked on the desert for some time and his children get to be of school age, the railroad endeavors to transfer him to an inside point where his children may have the advantages of an education.

away the water which has gathered in the ditches.

A road properly built generally will not have an average grade of more than 5 per cent. By "per cent of grade" is meant the number of feet the road rises or "climbs" for every 100 feet of its length. On a road of 1 per cent grade the horses need pull the load up a rise of only 1 foot for every 100 feet they travel. It has been found that where a horse can pull a full load on level ground; he is able to pull only one-half that load on a 5 per cent grade and only one-fourth that load on a 10 per cent grade. More trips must be made to and from market on a road with just one bad hill in order to haul the same amount that can be hauled at one trip on a level road.

HOW TO ROTATE CROPS

Federal Advice on Replenishing Food Values in Soil is Given

The most profitable crop rotation does not consist merely in changing the crops around from year to year, regardless of the relation of the crops to each other. The central aim in all crop-rotation systems should be to leave each field in a better state of cultivation, better physical condition and reasonably free from pests at the end of each rotation cycle.

No hard and fast rotation system can be laid down for any community, but the most profitable system must be worked out for each farm and, indeed, for each field. There are certain general principles, however, that should be borne in mind in this connection in order to accomplish the most satisfactory results. For soil improvement there should be at least one leguminous crop in each rotation cycle. To this class of plants belong the clovers, alfalfa, peas, beans, etc. There should be also a sufficient quantity of live stock, especially milk cows, on each farm to utilize the roughage and to supply the desired quantity of stable manure, which, in addition to green crops plowed under, will furnish the necessary amount of humus to the soil.

The conditions resulting from this treatment, if the soil is properly handled, will make the succeeding crops more vigorous and capable of offsetting, in some measure at least, the effects of any pests that may appear. Again, the successive crops in any rotation should be so selected and arranged that no two upon which the same pest may thrive will be grown in succession. The principles of disease control by means of crop rotation are based upon the fact that certain pests can thrive only on certain kinds of plants. Therefore, when the crops are changed and the food supply thereby cut off, the pests must perish or be greatly reduced in number.

WOMEN LOSE FIGHT

Suffrage Recently Denied Fair Sex in Three Leading States

Hopes of women of three leading eastern states were shattered Tuesday, when amendments in Massachusetts, New York and New Jersey giving them full suffrage were voted down by large majorities. Leaders in the battle for suffrage say that they will continue the fight, however, and that the matter will be brought up at following elections.

It is perhaps interesting to note that in the states where suffrage was defeated, the republican candidates received general support at the polls. This would seem to indicate that republican organizations in these three states are opposed to suffrage, and that the mass of republican voters was guided by the stand taken by the leaders of the party.
