

DID YOU EVER CONSIDER

That your watch is normally "on the job" 24 hours each day?

That in each 24 hours the balance wheel vibrates more than 400,000 times?

That a variation of 1-100,000 of a minute in each of these vibrations would cause a variation of more than 4 minutes a day in the time of your watch?

BY ACTUAL COUNT

143 distinct parts must be given individual attention when the average watch is properly cleaned and oiled.

IF YOU HAVE NOT

Thought of these little details, do so now, and give us an opportunity to demonstrate the extremely close timing which fine tools, skill and experience can accomplish with your watch.

Sure We Do

We want no blue laws in Oregon. Certain ministers are advocating "one day of rest out of seven." This appeals to most of us because we want to rest one (or more) out of each week. But it is not the idea of "rest" that prompts the proposal to make that "day of rest" Sunday. The influences back of the proposal to initiate a "day of rest" law desire us to rest their way—to stay away from the Sunday ball game, the Sunday theater, the Sunday picnic, and to forego every Sunday recreation. In short the law will be a Sunday blue law more intent on closing the Sunday lid than in creating a "day of rest." We are willing to wage the people vote down any proposal to enact such Sunday Blue Laws. We want to rest in our own way.—(Aurora Observer.)

TO SAVE OREGON EXHIBIT

Great Log Building at Frisco Fair May Be Moved to Ashland

If the Southern Pacific will haul the Oregon Building to Ashland free of cost, it is not wholly improbable that the famous Oregon Parthenon will grace the wonderful park being developed at Ashland through the expenditure of $175,000 secured by bond issue for this purpose and that of developing the Lithia Springs there. During the past ten days, Bert R. Greer, of the Ashland Tidings, and chairman of the Springs Water Commission has been here in consultation with the Oregon Commission and the Southern Pacific Officials and is serious in his attempt to secure the Oregon building for re-erection in his home city. Just now there is no great hope that the Government will decide to maintain the building here, and contract calls for its removal within ninety days after the close of the Exposition. The best offer that the Commission has had for the building is $1,000, the concern making this offer agreeing to remove the structure and put the ground in the shape required by the contract.

However, Greer figures that the Commission can afford to waive that amount if the famous building could be reset at Oregon's southern gateway, and the public in general will agree. It will cost from twelve to fifteen thousand dollars to wreck the building and Mr. Greer is confident that he can secure that amount in his home city, providing the Southern Pacific will agree to transport the wreckage to Ashland. It is understood that the Springs Commission already has available a considerable sum for the construction of a casino in the park, and there would be no difficulty about financing the reconstruction of the Oregon building.

If the Parthenon is not to be maintained here, it is reasonably certain that all Oregon would delight in its reconstruction at Ashland. That city is spending a very large sum to develop a great resort and the beautification of the mountain park practically in the heart of that city is now in the hands of McLaren, father of Golden Gate Park's landscape beauty, and also responsible for the wondrous beauty of the Exposition grounds. The Oregon Parthenon would have perfect surroundings there, and as a convention hall, museum, casino, or something of the sort it would serve a good purpose and advertise Ashland as nothing else could and result to the great advantage of Oregon in general.

"BUY AT HOME" STUFF

Hubbard Gets Lesson in Value of Patronizing State Industries

Last week's Hubbard Enterprise contains a front page story devoted to telling of the way in which a smooth and talkative stranger "stung" various Hubbard folk with a set of books and a correspondence course in the "Angelo University, of Los Angeles, California." It appears that after buying the books, which were poorly printed, and after paying for the course, which didn't materialize, Hubbard people investigated the proposition and found out it was a fake.

The Courier usually sympathizes with the man who gets the worst end of a deal, but in this Hubbard matter our sympathy is somewhat mixed with mirth. And this is because no person in Hubbard need patronize a California school of learning to get an education. Hubbard has some excellent schools, and the Oregon University and the Oregon Agricultural College both have extension courses that can be had practically for nothing. Knowledge is to be obtained in Oregon in large quantities, and there is no need of patronizing the mail-order houses to get it.

If these Hubbard folk had the "buy it at home idea" drilled into them, they wouldn't have patronized the imaginary California university, and they wouldn't have been out good money. Nor would they have been looking so urgently for the man who "stung" them. There are many reasons why home industry should be supported, even in the matter of obtaining knowledge—and the sad Hubbard episode is a pretty good story with a moral. And the moral is: "Buy it at home."

NEW PLACE POPULAR

County Seat's Latest Restaurant Takes Fancy of Most People

Over two hundred hungry people ate lunch in Ex-Sheriff E. T. Mass's new restaurant and hotel in Oregon City Saturday, when it opened with an orchestra of music and lots of good things to eat, tastefully served. In fact so great was the rush to get into the new place that at times the sidewalk was blocked with those waiting for places at the tables. People who got in found a neatly decorated room, good service, fine cooking and moderate prices. This combination, together with the fact that the restaurant is most centrally located, made it appear as if the ex-sheriff had struck a gold mine in his new venture.

The hotel and restaurant, which occupy the quarters formerly operated as the Brunswick, are modern and up-to-date in every way. The hotel part of the combination has been newly furnished and decorated, and already many permanent lodgers have taken up their quarters therein. Music feature in the restaurant, Mr. Mass having made arrangements for piano-forte selections during the noon and evening hours.

CHANCE TO WRITE

Marines in Haiti Want To Hear from American Girls

When the United States Marine Corps forces, now occupying the towns and cities of Haiti after a sharp brush with the Cacos, learned that a number of Atlanta's fairest daughters were banded together for the purpose of adopting lonesome and forlorn European soldiers, and would write letters of cheer, sympathy and love to their warring wards, they became a trifle peeved to say the least. The Marines are perfectly willing to admit that "none but the brave deserve the fair," but they want to delve deeper into the copybook maxim that, and add: "America first" and "let charity begin at home."

And furthermore, Uncle Sam's "sea soldiers" do not propose to have their own little "two by four" Haitian war overshadowed by the immeasurable conflict raging across the ocean, and so have written to the editor of the "Constitution" pointing out the injustice of the thing, in the hope that he, or some other editor who may chance to read their plea, will find meat in it for a scathing, scorching editorial that will bring the Atlanta girls back to their senses. Here's the letter:

"Editor, 'Constitution': Having learned through the wireless press news that the girls of your city have so generously and magnanimously shown their consideration for the forsaken and lonesome European soldiers by adopting these soldiers and sending them love and letters, we wish to ask you to tell the fair daughters of Atlanta through the columns of your paper that there are some of their own down in Haiti who are ready and willing to be adopted, and would welcome and appreciate such adoption."

"Please tell them, also, that while there is no trench warfare here, and no asphyxiating gases, that we are lonesome and even a postal from the hands of a fair American would brighten a tedious and irksome life in the tropics. Also, Mr. Editor, it looks as though the colored brethren down here wouldn't be able to take over the reins of their government in less than two years, and we'll have to stay right here on the job."

"The more we roam around the world, the more truly do we love, the prouder we are of the American girl—the finest, fairest, dearest and sweetest in the world. God bless her. When we see her turning to the soldiers of Europe, it makes us beg for consideration. Let charity begin at home."

"Yours truly,
"The U. S. MARINES,
"Third Company, First Brigade, U. S. Expeditionary Forces, Port-Au-Prince, Haiti."

WHEN WAS HE HERE?

Reader of the Courier Says Walt Mason Must Have Visited City

Editor, Courier: The other day I saw the following in a daily paper, and after reading it I came to the conclusion that Walt Mason, its author, must have visited Oregon City at some time. Probably after reading it you will see why I think so.

F. H. T.

The Walt Mason "poem" sent with the letter is as follows:

"I often buy gold bricks by mail; in fact, I'm always sending kale to fakery here and fakers there, and rain-bow dealers everywhere. I've blown myself for bogus ore, and orange groves on Greenland's shore, and meerschaum mines and moonlight plants, ginseng and rubber elephants. The fakers get me in their snares, and sell me wind and Belgian hares. But when my fellow-townsmen talk, and ask me to invest in stock to help some local enterprise, I am conservative and wise. 'Nay, nay,' I cry, 'your boosting schemes are merely wild and woolly dreams. I cannot spend my hard earned dough to help me make this village grow. Your schemes would yield but six per cent, which fills my soul with discontent. I want to see my wealth increase hand over hand, and never cease, so I'll buy ice in Hudson's Bay, and mines a million miles away, and wireless stock and pickled snakes and gravel pits and other fakes.' I think my view is safe and sane, yet people say I give them pain, and now and then a vanguard egg breaks on my bosom or my leg, and now and then a long dead cat comes up and hits me on the hat—Walt Mason."

CHEAP SHOES HURT MANY

Investigation Shows Poor Footgear is Crippling Workers

Little old Manhattan is flat-footed, wears poor shoes and stands up at its job, according to figures compiled by Captain Frank E. Evans of the local recruiting office of the United States Marine Corps.

Captain Evans is authority for the statement that approximately 18 per cent of all applicants who applied for enlistment in the Marine Corps at its Twenty-third Street office during the past year, were rejected for "pes planus," or flat-foot. He puts the blame on the cheaply constructed, poorly made shoes the verage toiler wears at his work for the epidemic of failing arch, and on the fact that the majority of victims claimed they were forced to stand on their feet for long stretches while at their employment.

Motormen, conductors, subway guards, policemen, machinists, waiters and clerks are the principal sufferers from "pes planus," Captain Evans says.

West Linn Tax Levy

West Linn's tax levy for next year will be 7 1/2 mills, of which sum five mills will be used to pay interest upon the $200,000 water bonds, by means of which the neighboring city will pay for its share of Oregon City's new mountain water supply. West Linn once made the proud boast that it could run its affairs and never go beyond a three-mill levy. But that was before the days of pure water.

PLAN ARITHMETIC TESTS

Competitions between Pupils of County Schools Planned for Winter

Declaring that he believes tests in arithmetic will be more valuable to the pupils than the "spelling bees" held in former years, County School Superintendent Calavan has outlined a series of competitive drills in arithmetic. Spelling will still be drilled among the pupils, but no open "bees" will be held.

In the arithmetic tests all pupils acquiring an average grade of 80 will be invited to join in competitions with pupils from other schools, and the winners in these tests will finally meet in a test which will decide the best figure in the county. In making this change Mr. Calavan has sent a circular letter to teachers, in which he says that he thinks it is necessary at this time to emphasize more strongly the study of arithmetic.

WAR ON CIGARETTES

School Children and Others to be Enlisted in Campaign

Naughty boys who persist in smoking cigarettes will be deprived of the pleasure of associating with local high school girls if the Women's Christian Temperance Union has its way. A campaign to discourage the use of "bills" by boys and young men has been started by the W. C. T. U., and one of the penalties of their use will be social ostracism. This was agreed upon at a meeting held last week in the Baptist church.

The W. C. T. U. will also award prizes for the best essays on the effect of liquor and tobacco on the human system and it is expected that many will take, for their subjects, the effect of tobacco on the system. Seventy-five were present at the meeting, including a large number of teachers from Oregon City and surrounding towns. Rev. J. K. Hawkins, of the Methodist church, was one of the speakers of the afternoon.

SCHOOL RECORD GOOD

Clackamas County Attendance is 96.7 Percent, Says Calavan

Children of Clackamas county are desirous of getting all the education they can, it appears, for County Superintendent Calavan this week announced that attendance records at the 135 schools of the county show that 96.7 percent of the enrolled pupils have been on hand every day from the opening of the school year.

Five schools made perfect records for the first month of the fall term, and had no absent pupils at all. These banner schools are Meadowbrook, Dickey Prairie, Liberal, New Era, Falls View. Mr. Calavan will make monthly averages showing the percentage of attendance month by month.

FRITZ ENTERS PLEA

Proprietor of Milwaukee Resort Says He Didn't Sell to Minors

Fritz Boyesen, proprietor of the Hotel Belle, at Milwaukee, under indictment for selling liquor to minors, appeared in the circuit court Monday and entered a plea of not guilty. Date for his trial was set for December 10.

All others indicted by the grand jury, excepting W. O. Wellman, superintendent of the Standard Paving company's plant, pleaded not guilty. Wellman, who admits working men on municipal work more than eight hours a day, was sentenced Tuesday.

Other cases set Monday are: Dick Jones, charge assault with a dangerous weapon, December 7; Samuel Case charge murder, December 8, and Oscar Johnson, Alfred Wall and Jack Bolstrom, charge giving liquor to a minor, December 9.

JURY FADES AWAY

Instructions of Judge to Inquisitors Taken by those Hearing Trial

When W. P. Roberts started his suit against Donald Bodley in the circuit court this week, on an appeal from Justice Pomeroy's court at Sandy, there were twelve men in the jury box. Roberts had got the better of the case in the Sandy justice court, and the matter, which had to do with a horse trade, was carried into the higher court by Bodley. The trial had progressed nearly to its conclusion when Judge Campbell adjourned the case for five minutes to receive and swear in the new grand jury.

During this proceeding the jury in the Roberts-Bodley case sat still and looked on. Also at the same time the civil government class from the Oregon City high school came in to see how a grand jury looked. After the grand jury had been sworn and instructed as to the manner of their behavior, Judge Campbell told them they could go, and would not need to report again until notified by the court.

The civil government class and the grand jurors rose and walked out, and two of the jurors in the case at trial did likewise. When Judge Campbell ended the recess, these two jurors were missed. For a few minutes there was consternation, as it appeared that the trial would have to be done all over again, but attorneys for the plaintiff and defendant solved the difficulty by saying they were willing to leave the case in the hands of the ten men still remaining on the job.

Judge Campbell agreed to this if eight of the jurors would find for the same verdict. The case went to the jury, and eight of them at least had the same mind, for the
