

This Coming Week is to Be Given Over to a Demonstration and Sale of Wirthmor Waists at $1 and Welworth Blouses at $2

There is so much that is good and different about these famous waists that we have planned a demonstration and sale to last all week long. Make it a point to see our advertisements and windows every day this week.

The Wirthmor waists at $1

—We could use a whole page to good advantage for these Wirthmor waists alone.

—You'll find it hard to figure out how such waists as these can be sold for $1. Here's the "How" of it—The manufacturer has contracted with one large store in nearly every city in the United States to take a certain quantity of these waists each week—this means that he can buy his materials more intelligently and more economically—he can keep his shops running at full speed all the time and he eliminates all of the heavy selling expense which other manufacturers contend with.

—All these savings which the manufacturer makes are savings for you. We don't claim to be offering you a $1.50 waist for $1, but we do claim that they're better waists than we have ever seen sold at $1 before.

—You will always find a great range of styles to choose from—some of them made nearly plain—others of them very exquisitely trimmed with laces and embroideries. Remember that a new lot arrives every week. Several styles will be shown for the first time To Day.

The Welworth Blouses at $2

Welworth blouses come from the same manufacturer who makes Wirthmor waists. The same scientific plan of making and selling is used for both. It is fitting that the first announcement of new Welworth blouses for Fall should be made during this demonstration and sale. Here it is:

Welworths of crepe de chine at $2.00

In the wonderful waists which came this last Spring we thought the very climax of value-giving had been reached—but the manufacturer had a surprise in store for us and for you in these crepe de Chines at $2.00.

Of course there are other Welworths of wash silks—and of lingerie weaves, too—Plan to see them all To Day!

THE TREES ARE "LEAVING"

At Least We Suppose so, from What the S. P. Press Agent Says

Every now and then the Courier, along with other papers, is favored by contributions from the press agent department of the Southern Pacific. Quite frequently these little things are worth printing, and some time they are worthy of comment. Courier readers may recall some of our comments on the charitable railroad that runs through this county. And this week we have with us again the S. P. press agent, and a little story about trees that "have taken route." We don't blame a railroad press-agent for making that mistake; and just to show that we forgive him, here's the dope he sent us:

Every section's quarters on the desert on the Southern Pacific's Los Angeles and Tucson divisions will soon be shaded, according to present indications. In line with its policy of bettering the living conditions of its men, the company has planted at its section houses in the hot country shade trees of some kind or other. Usually, they are umbrellas or acacia. In all cases, the trees have taken route and there are several places where the temperature is highest, that are plentifully supplied with shade.

The results of this work thus far have been gratifying in more ways than one. The Mexican laborers have taken interest in growing green stuff in the way of vegetables around the premises. At Pope, for instance, which is on the Los Angeles Division, lettuce, tomatoes and string beans are growing and there is vegetable life around most of the quarters.

In place of the old tie bunkhouses, with dirt roofs, the railroad is now using hollow tile bunk houses and car bodies with sun roofs. These make the living quarters of the men much more comfortable as they are cool in summer and warm in winter.

The results of the company's welfare work in desert territory is being reflected in the contentment of the Mexican track laborer. Where, a few years ago he was unsteady and inclined to cling to the languorous customs of hottest Mexico, he is today of a different type. He is steady at his work, he has become very much Americanized and he puts his earnings to good use. In many cases he is married and has a family, and he sees that the latter are not neglected.

The Courier has a full line of Legal Blanks for sale. If you are in need of Legal Blanks you will find that it will pay you to come to the Courier.

NEW MILITARY RULES

Lieutenants Not Supposed to have Wisdom but Sergeants are Wise

When "Johnny" Poe, ex-Princeton football star, soldier, adventurer, and member of the family to which Edgar Allen Poe, the poet, belonged, was killed in France during the Allies' offensive, while serving as a private in the British Black Watch Regiment, officers of the United States Marine Corps began to recall incidents in Poe's career with the American Marines.

In 1903, when a war between the United States and Columbia over the Panama Canal strip threatened, Poe, by authority of the then Secretary of the Navy, John D. Long, enlisted with the "sea soldiers" to serve during the war. If war should result he was to be discharged, for, excellent soldier though he was, he could not bear the "rigors" of a peaceful campaign.

Captain Smedley D. Butler appointed Poe a sergeant in his Machine Gun Company, an appointment not at all to the adventurer's liking. So he went to Colonel Littleton W. T. Haller (now in command of the Marine Corps force ashore in Haiti) and asked to be reduced to private.

"I don't think I'm capable of holding the rank of sergeant in the United States Marine Corps," he told Colonel Waller.

This was an unusual case and the colonel wanted to know why Poe considered himself not fitted to hold the rank.

"I have a fair education and considerable military training," Poe replied, "but I haven't been in the Marine Corps long enough to be a sergeant, and to do the duties as well as a Marine sergeant should do them."

Colonel Waller smiled. "Why, Poe," he said, "a number of second lieutenants, only recently commissioned, have just joined us, and no one expects them to know everything there is to know."

"That's all right, colonel," Poe replied quickly. "No one expects a second lieutenant to know anything, but they do expect a whole lot from a sergeant."

In spite of the republican walls about the paralysis that would overtake shipping when the LaFollette seamen's bill went into effect, it is to be noted that business goes on as usual, and that several new American steamship lines have been announced.

MAX FIGMAN AT THE GRAND SUNDAY IN "WHAT'S HIS NAME"

With a laugh in every movement, Max Figman comes to the Grand Theatre Sunday in "What's His Name," a rollicking comedy-drama of stage life. The photo-play is a Paramount feature in five reels, and is guaranteed a sure cure for the blues, billiousness or any other form of grouch.

Max Figman is one of the leading comedians of the American stage, and before joining the Paramount stars made many hits behind the footlights. Perhaps his greatest success in regular drama was in "The Man on the Box," in which he made two tours of the country, as well as playing extended engagements in the larger eastern cities. Figman is a man to conjure with in the comedy world; and in "What's His Name," there is ample opportunity for the jolly comedian to be seen at his best.

"What's His Name" is not all fun, however. Some of the scenes hold the audience tense with their pathos, while unexpected and striking action is not missing in the plot of the play. The drama, however, leaves a good feeling in the heart at its conclusion, and is one of the best "stage plays" that have ever been written. "What's His Name" will be shown Sunday only at the Grand, and regular prices of 15 cents for adults and 5 cents for children will prevail.

"JIT" SKELETONS RATTLE MONDAY

ing a week or so ago in its incompleteness.

Section 1 of the ordinance is much like the first section of the ordinance that was put on skids by the injunction granted by Judge Bagley. It attempts to define what a "public utility vehicle" shall be, and exempts street and railroad cars, hotel busses, sight-seeing cars and taxicabs. It includes, however, goat-carts, ox-carts, and all other weird vehicles that may be used to haul passengers from point to point for hire.

Sections 2 and 3 provide that all such vehicles shall be licensed, and provide also that the license may be cancelled for any violations of the various provisions in the ordinance.

Section 4 provides "routes" for the public utility vehicles, and is designed to separate the sheep from the goats—or the Portland jitneys from all others. Attorneys say that the council cannot thus discriminate between jitneys that operate on the hill and those that operate elsewhere.

Sections 5 to 9 inclusive, attempt to prescribe just how the jitneys may run, and between what hours they may run. Section 9 concludes with the mystic phrase: "etc., etc., etc." Attorneys say that all the sections up to that point mean just about that—and no more.

Section 10 regulates the speed of jitneys, and section 11 provides that there must be a light within all covered jitneys from half an hour before sunset to midnight. After midnight this light may be turned off, and the supposition is that "rough stuff" is to be allowed.

Section 12 provides for a monthly inspection of jitneys "by some persons authorized by the council of Oregon City to make such inspection." As the budget has no provision for a jitney inspector's salary, it is presumed that this expense will come out of the street committee's funds.

Section 13, when filled in where it is now blank, will define the license fees to be paid for the jitney according to their seating capacity.

Section 14 provides that all drivers must be licensed by a board of official authorized by the council. Jitney drivers now are forced to have a state license, and attorneys say that they cannot be compelled to take out a second license for Oregon City, and that neither can they be compelled to pay for such a license.

Section 15 provides a few penalties for drivers who do not obey the ordinance. Section 16 limits the age of drivers to not less than 18. Section 17 says the jits must carry signs; and section 18 says the council may pass any other regulatory measures that it is told to. Section 19 forbids intoxicated persons to ride on jitneys.

Section 20 provides that each operator of a jitney must secure a surety bond must be. Section 21 provides fine and imprisonment for violating the ordinance, but doesn't say how much the fine or how long the imprisonment.

Section 22 clears the Portland Railway, Light & Power company from all fear of the effects of the ordinance; and section 23 tacks on an emergency clause—which according to court decisions is sufficient to knock out the entire ordinance all by itself.

And hidden away somewhere in the famous "skeleton" is a provision that no jitney can carry passengers on the running boards, doors or mudguards. If this goes into effect the sardine-box methods of the Van Auken jit will be suddenly reformed.

Man Falls Far

George Link, who lives at 901 Williams avenue, Portland, fell from the roof of the Oregon City high school to the basement Wednesday afternoon. He was taken to the Oregon City hospital suffering from internal injuries and several fractured ribs. The man was repairing the high school roof at the time.

U'Ren Changes Office

W. S. U'Ren, formerly one of the county seat's leading attorneys, has moved into new offices in Portland, and may now be found by his friends at room 506 Oregonian building. The fact that Mr. U'Ren has moved under the shadow of the "tall tower" need not alarm his political followers, as he is still an avowed supporter of the doctrine of single tax and popular rule.

Oregon Scores Again

There is over 98 billion feet of Douglas fir on the National Forests of Washington and Oregon. The largest body of this timber is found on the Cascade Forest, which lies on the west slope of the Cascade Range in Lane county.

WHY YOU ARE NERVOUS

The nervous system is the alarm system of the human body.

In perfect health we hardly realize that we have a network of nerves, but when health is ebbing, when strength is declining, the same nervous system gives the alarm in headaches, tiredness, dreamful sleep, irritability and unless corrected, leads straight to a breakdown.

To correct nervousness, Scott's Emulsion is exactly what you should take; its rich nutriment gets into the blood and rich blood feeds the tiny nerve-cells while the whole system responds to its refreshing tonic force. It is free from alcohol.

HUNTLEY BROS. CO.

Oregon City, Drugists Oregon

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Huntley's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
