ULTIMATUM SENT POWER COMPANY

must then be laid in a cement bed and be waterproofed.

The ultimatum sent the company was determined on motion of Councilmen Albright, Metzner and Templeton, who with the mayor joined in denouncing the delay of the company in attending to the matter—of which complaint has been made a number of times. It was the unanimous sentiment of the councilmen present—all except Hackett and Cox—that the city should not permit its new paving to be ruined by the negligence of the interurban company.

This whirlwind finish of the council proceedings came after a quiet and peaceful meeting. The only other real feature was the request of the mayor that the city recorder prepare a statement showing the causes for the present indebtedness of the city. This alibi for the present administration, which denies it has squandered the public funds, is to start with the improvement of Eleventh street some three or four years ago, and of which the city will have to pay one-third of the cost; and it is to include all subsequent outlays in which the city has been forced to stand a share.

Street improvements, sewer work and all such little jobs will be included in the report, and also the names of the past councilmen voting for such work will be included in this report, if the wishes of the mayor are fulfilled.

Incidentally the Courier wonders if this report will show who ordered Fifth street improved, and where the money for the job came from.

Other matters disposed of by the council were the sale of street improvement bonds to Morris Brothers for $7,926.45, which is par and accrued interest; and the acceptance of Tenth, Seventh, John Q. Adams, Third and Main streets.

Bids for the construction of the Mt. Pleasant sidewalk were opened and referred to the street committee. W. B. Andrews bid $290; A. L. Blanchard bid $320; and John Llewellyn offered to do the job for $287.50. The city has appropriated $300 for the work, and the city engineer estimates that it will cost $342.

The fallsview sidewalk was reported to the council to have cost $242.42. Vacation of the alley in block 18 was favored by an ordinance, which had its first reading, and which will come up for final action December 1.

City Attorney Schuchel re-introduced his ordinance declaring the tax levy for 1916 to be 10 mills for city purposes and one-half a mill for the library. It will come up for final passage November 26 at five in the afternoon. This ordinance, like the former one, carries an emergency clause.

The former ordinance for the same purpose will be permitted to die of inattention because certain lay critics of Mr. Schuchel discovered that it could not be passed in time for a report to be made to the county assessor and county clerk by December 1. The old ordinance was to have come up for final passage at eight o'clock in the evening of December 1; and the county offices close at five. Mr. Schuchel, in defending the old ordinance, said that it would have been perfectly legal—but it is to be noted that he had the ordinance reintroduced for rush treatment, just to be on the safe side.

The United States Bureau of Labor gives us of the working shifts of the Bethlehem Steel Co., as drawn from the company's own time books. This is the manner in which the concerns that have drawn down $175,000,000 of the people's money were treating their employees in 1910. Since that time considerable 8-hour-day legislation has been passed, and there is no record of the number of 12-hour shifts now in force.

Workingmen of the nation, are you willing that your government shall continue to give contracts running into the millions annually to firms that have mistreated and underpaid their employees as have these great war-trading concerns. If you are not willing, then protest against it. But let me assure you at the outset that one protest will not be sufficient. The chances are you will have to speak loud and often before your voice will be heard in far-off Washington.

BOYS FOOTBALL STARS

Risley and Bartlett to Participate in Thanksgiving Classic

The annual gridiron classic between the University of Oregon and the Multnomah Club will be fought out on Thanksgiving Day at Multnomah field. Comparative scores would give an advantage to neither of the eleven, but those who have watched the progress of the two teams during the season predict that the collegians have the best chance in years of defeating the Clubmen. The wily Bezedek, realizing that his eleven is much lighter than Multnomah, has built up a wonderful array of aerial plays which undoubtedly will be used on Thanksgiving against the beefy opponents. In the recent game with the University of Southern California it was demonstrated quite clearly that the collegians have the forward pass department of the game down to a fine point.

Oregon City and Clackamas county people will be unusually interested in the game for the reason that two well known lads of this community are on the first string of the Eugene team. Jake Risley, son of Hon. Chas. Risley, is playing a star game at center for the Oregon team, and his work has brought him into the "all-northwest" class. Bartlett, of Estacada, is playing a stellar game at end for the University. A large crowd of gridiron fans from here and also from the Estacada country will witness the game. Press dispatches have stated that the Clackamas county boys are two of Bezedek's best bets and that the famous Oregon coach will look for big things from them at the coming clash.

TRY THIS ON YOUR FARM

Automobile Food Said to be Sure Cure for "Digger" Pests

A farmer tells that he has practically rid his farm of gophers by the use of gasoline. He carried a bottle and a bunch of cotton batting with him while working in the field and when he sees a gopher run in a hole he pours some gasoline upon a wad of cotton and places it at the mouth of the hole and covers the opening with dirt. The gas fumes are heavier than air and go to the bottom of the hole. In an attempt to get air, the gopher comes to the top of the hole and the gas does the rest. Remove cotton in about half an hour and Mr. Gopher will be dead. The plan will apply to many other burrowing animals such as the digger squirrel, etc. (Hubbard Enterprise.)

VERY WRONG, BROTHER

Suspicion of Canby Editor Seem Unfounded to the Courier

And now comes the press agent in the employ of the drug syndicate. A wily one is he. Most of the papers of the state have been approached during the last two weeks with an article, on the face interesting, but in reality only advertising matter, telling of the high price of drugs "owing to the war." With the article is volunteered the willing information that the publisher might use the same as a "news" story if he saw fit. We note with apprehension that one of our county seat brethren in his eager gullibility swallowed a whole column and a half of this drug stuff last week, which certainly ought to be enough to cleanse his system, for at least a little while.

Why bless you, everything has risen "because of the war." Even printers' ink has gone up, and paper and type and brass goods and all kinds of printing material. The lead that formerly went into type they are now making into bullets, you know, and the brass that was made into rules and galleys in the days when "the art preservative" was flourishing is now made into shells. In fact, some of the European countries they have actually discontinued the manufacture of type and brass goods for printing offices altogether, but why don't some ingenious press agent get up a nice long story and tell us all about this?

The press agent was described at the editor's meeting at Salem last week by Editor Brodie of Oregon City, as fittingly and in as few words as we have ever heard, as follows: "The press agent is the serpent in our Garden of Eden; he has no mercy on us, he is more wily than the snake and more deadly to the profit side of the ledger than a fire. He is employed at a salary that lures him from the newspaper field to become the foe of his former profession; and his one aim in life is to get something for nothing."

So said the Canby Herald last week; and inasmuch as the Oregon City Courier printed the article to which this gentle criticism is directed, we feel that we have got to alibi some.

In the first place the article was not furnished by a press agent of any druggist or group of druggists. It was written in the Courier office. What happened after that we do not know. But the Courier thought it might interest its readers to know how and why the price of drugs had gone soaring—and we couldn't see any inducement to buy drugs after we had told people that they'd cost anywhere from ten to 200 percent more than formerly.

And, lest the Canby editor think the second "drug story"—to be found elsewhere in these columns, is also "press agent bunk," we humbly announce that it was written in this office, also—and that at least one druggist who heard it was going to be published asked us to leave it out.

With the Canby editor and others we agree that the press-agent is a thing accursed; but we also think that the "serpent in the Garden of Eden" has a pretty hard time to crawl in through the doors of the Courier.

FINE FOR CITY

Visiting Autoists Praise Street in Front of Club Rooms—Not

Saturday of last week, when that little trip up the Columbia river driveway was given the county road supervisors there were about 27 assorted automobiles lined up in front of the Commercial club rooms at Eighth and Main streets when the start was made. Some of the cars were driven by local men, and some of them were driven by people who don't often get to the county seat.

One of these latter stepped into the mud on Eighth street to crank up just before the start, and after he got his engine running he stepped back on the sidewalk and wiped off his shoes. Then he looked at the Commercial club building and at the street, and unbowed himself of the following:

"It strikes me as perfectly wonderful that the Oregon City Commercial club, devoted to boosting this city, permits such a street to lie right in front of its doors. Just think what a fine impression it makes on a stranger to roll up to this club, and then to get mired right in front of the door. Queer ideas of boosting, you people have."

It is understood that the street department will shortly tinker with Eighth street—at least that part of it in front of the Commercial club, where distinguished visitors are expected to arrive.

"TRADE AT HOME"

Senator Lane Talks in the Right Way About Government Affairs

Senator Harry Lane believes in preparedness if the United States does the work in getting into that state. He does not think it good policy to spend many millions on the trusts and have little to show for the money. The senator is inclined somewhat toward government ownership. He wants the government to build its own naval fighters, manufacture its own powder and war munitions, and thinks it might also build a merchant marine. There is sound sense in such talk, particularly so when the government can build and manufacture for one-half of what it now pays the trusts; but Senator Lane should not rest after talking to the gallery here. He should make a few such popular speeches in the senate and also demand that his colleagues in congress join him in taking such a stand. Senator Lane's course in the senate this winter will be watched with considerable interest, especially so if he makes the public stir that he promises to do. The President probably erred in not wiring him also for consultation. (Woodburn Independent.)

THANKS TO GEORGE

Former Oregonian Reporter Appears to be Damaging National Guard

As a result of the appointment of Geo. A. White as adjutant general of the Oregon National Guard by Governor Withycombe about nine months ago, and the actions of the adjutant general and Colonel McLaughlin since that time in not rewarding faithful and conscientious service of the officers of the company, the local company is all but disorganized. Company I, less than ten months ago was the largest company in the state and according to the present adjutant general was the largest militia company in the United States.

Almost every conceivable scheme has been tried to eliminate Captain Eugene Moshberger, the ranking captain of the regiment, and appoint as major some political friend and throw the national guard into the dirty political game. As a result, about one-half of the company has been mustered out and for several weeks the balance of the company has failed to report for drill, being loyal to the officers who have been handed a lemon.

The officers of the company have their resignations filled out and they will be forwarded to the adjutant general tomorrow (Friday). As soon as this is done the equipment will be checked up and the Armory at Woodburn will be locked up, and will be a fitting monument to the political machinations of the officers of the National Guard of Oregon, apparently abetted by the Governor of the state.

It is reported that Col. McLaughlin, when he heard of the condition of affairs at Woodburn, stated that they would find someone else to take the places of the present officers of Company I, but it is doubtful if there is a man in Woodburn or vicinity who would make himself a party to such a disreputable scheme.

From all appearances, Geo. A. White, the alleged illegal adjutant general of the O. N. G. will have to organize the school children of the state into militia companies, and take them very young at that, if he is to have a guard of any consequence in Oregon.

While Woodburn is making the principal fight against the contemptible actions of the officers of the Guard, the feeling is the same in every company in the state.—(Woodburn Independent.)

FOR "LIVE WIRES"

Gentle Hints for Boosters of "Buy It in Oregon City" Campaign

Responding to the Observer's invitation to discuss the matter of how to retain the $10,000 per year that goes from this section to the mail order houses, a farmer who will not allow his name mentioned, says that town people often fail to realize what the farmer is the mainstay of the town—the backbone of the community. He has noted that if the farmer has had a bad year, then the town stores, shops and the business community in general suffers. Everybody feels the pinch of a close season. When the farmer prospers everybody is benefitted. But cities and towns do not always work in harmony with the farmer. They expect his patronage under all circumstances, but often fail to furnish him a place to hitch his team in a dry place; to furnish rest rooms for his wife and children; to establish feeding sheds where he can feed his horses; put forth efforts to afford a good market for their surplus products, and to show the friendly interest that every farmer appreciates. Doubtless this view is held by most farmers. Isn't it a rather sad view? Doesn't the farmer's patronage entitle him to all the courtesies and interest that we have to give. Isn't he entitled to our best service to foster kindly feelings and greater harmony in the work for a better and more prosperous community? Isn't it possible that greater efforts along the lines outlined by this farmer, might help to retain to local business a good part of the $10,000 now annually sent east to the mail order house?—(Aurora Observer.)

TO FIND SINNERS

If You're Looking for Wicked People Do as the Ministers Do

It is a well established rule in advertising to go after the sort of people who want to buy what you have to sell. Thus, a firm that sells ear-muffs advertises in the colder sections of the world; and a firm that sells electric fans places its advertising in the sections where people get warm and need electric fans. People who have stock food for sale advertise in cattle countries, and people who manufacture near-beer make a specialty of advertising in prohibition territory.

This being a rule in advertising, we note with considerable joy that Oregon City ministers who advertise their services and churches do so exclusively in the Enterprise. Judging from this it may be taken for granted that the best way to reach sinners is to advertise in the columns of the Enterprise. The Courier, circulating largely among nice people who go to church regularly, apparently is not valued as an advertising medium through which the very wicked may be reached.

This Sounds Reasonable

The proposed Sunday closing law which the Oregon Weekly Rest Day League (Rev. G. L. Tufts, Supt.) proposes to initiate will close the following business places on Sunday, candy stores, cigar stores, pool halls, bowling alleys, shooting galleries, news stands all places where goods, wares and merchandise are sold, and all places of amusement operated for a profit. However, it is not proposed (now) to prohibit Sunday fishing, picnicking, hunting and other private Sunday amusements. The Rev. Tufts declares it will not be a "Blue Law," but if such a law is passed, the state of Oregon will have a "lid" on that will make the liquor prohibition "lid" a mere screen.—(Aurora Observer.)

HOW ABOUT EGGS?

Food Commissioner Mickle Wants Some Definite Signs Used

Deploping the lack of laws that will regulate "cold storage eggs," Dairy and Food Commissioner John D. Mickle has broken into print with a roast on Oregon practices of marketing eggs that is well worth reading. The Dairy Commissioner thinks that eggs ought to be truthfully labelled, and in giving his reasons for this says in part:

"Some very good evidence of the need of a cold storage law can be gathered right now by following the markets and observing the placards used by dealers in eggs to impart (or rather to conserve), information concerning their wares. A great many storage eggs are on sale at this time of the year, but none can be found labeled or placarded as such. Following are some of the most prominent placards found:

"Select breakfast eggs," "guaranteed eggs," "strictly fresh," "fancy select, guaranteed," "every egg guaranteed," "selected guaranteed," "candled," "ranch," "Oregon ranch," "guaranteed Oregon ranch," "select guaranteed."

"One of these placards announces the quality of the eggs as being fresh; all the others are evasive and serve but to fill one with doubt. The eggs over which these placards are placed are in many cases storage eggs. Fear of frightening away customers prevents the dealer from telling the plain truth.

"If the law demanded honest labeling of all cold storage food products and all the dealers complied, the housewife would soon learn that cold storage is not the bugaboo that it is now looked upon by many, and that proper cold storage and proper handling after cold storage is much safer than much of the present day 'hen-house storage' or 'barnyard storage.'"

"What does 'Guaranteed Oregon Ranch' or 'Select Breakfast Eggs' placard over a case of eggs mean? The words 'Doubtful Eggs' would express the same feeling in the region of the breakfast shock absorber.

"The manufacturers of package food products are each year approaching more nearly to the point of honest labels. They have found by years of experience that it pays to be fair. The exacting consumer has helped it along so that today, aside from the legal entanglements, the manufacturer who attempts to step the real facts regarding his product finds that a voluntary jury of housewives has convicted him of attempting to throw injurious substances on a defenseless stomach.

"The hen herself is not a party to any crime against the food laws, for she lays the daintiest morsel of food that ever found its way to the inner region of man. It is only after the influence of the hen ceases that the egg can possibly fall into disrepute. It deteriorates rapidly with but very meagre outward indication of deterioration. No other food product can look so innocent and yet smell so foul as the mismanaged egg. To the naked eye its appearance yields no clue to its history. With the label so evasive as the ones above quoted, we simply hold our noses until the mystery is solved."

CHANCE FOR FAME

Oregon Corn Growers Invited to Enter Nation-wide Competition

Local bankers have received for distribution a supply of entry blanks and circulars containing full details regarding the "First National" Corn Show to be held in the new Railroad Building, St. Paul, Minn., December 1st, to 31st, under the auspices of The First National Bank and Northwestern Trust Company of St. Paul and Bankers of the Northwest. Farmers and farmers' sons in the States of Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota, Montana, Washington Oregon and Idaho are invited to compete for the beautiful silver and "Golden Bronze" loving cups offered as prizes which number 136 and are valued at $5,000.00.

The States in this contest have been divided into districts so that competition among exhibitors is practically local. The fact that a farmer's corn does not appear to him to be up to the average this season should not deter him from competing for the prizes offered, as all exhibitors will be handicapped to a more or less extent in the quality of their corn owing to the weather conditions that have prevailed this year adverse to the successful growing and maturing of standard corn.

Ten ears of any variety of corn will constitute an exhibit. No entry fee is charged. All exhibits will be returned to contestants who request that this be done at the time of making entry. A special feature of this Corn Show will be the "Boys' Corn Raising Competition" open to entries by boy corn growers throughout the Northwest, eighteen years of age or under. They will be awarded the same valuable prizes as are offered the adult exhibitors.

Many exhibits have already been submitted by farmers in various sections of the contest territory. In order to prepare a large and representative display for the Northwest, it is the desire of the promoters of this project to have all corn growers participate in the contest, sending in a ten-ear exhibit. Local bankers will furnish pamphlets giving full details and form of entry blank on request.

While entries will be received and judged up to and including December 15th, the Management of the show are anxious to have contestants make entry at the earliest date possible.

REAL "WEB-FOOT" BARRED

Marine Corps Doesn't Want Men with Funny Pedal Extremities

Because a thin membranous filament connecting his toes made him web-footed, Frank Leque, Holtville, La., thought he would make a splendid recruit for that semi-aquatic organization, the United States Marine Corps, and was keenly disappointed when Sergeant George B. McGee, in charge of the recruiting station, rejected him for that very reason. Now Leque believes that if Uncle Sam can't use a man-duck, he still has a mission in life, and is contemplating applying for a position as traffic "cop" in the city of unfixed leaks—Venice.

Sergeant McGee, of the Marines, was loath to reject Leque for what he was pleased to term "duckitis," and he had momentary visions of the Long Island recruit being trained actually to walk on the water and so, in time, to hurdle hot-foot over hissing combers from one vessel to another to deliver his "Don't give up the ship, boys" messages from the admiral.

But perfect feet are absolutely essential to Marines, and since the corps is usually filled up to maximum strength with exceptionally well-developed men, the web-footed one was told that he wouldn't do. Now nothing remains for him to do except to join the Venetian traffic squad, or, as another rejected applicant told him, "acquire water on the knee and a floating kidney with your other accomplishments and you could enter the Patagonian Navy."

SHERIFF IS HURT

Accommodating Official Stabbed in Hand by Prisoner's Baggage

William J. Wilson, the obliging and pleasant sheriff of Clackamas county, who does everything except catch bandits single-handed, sustained painful, if not serious, injuries of his hand recently while assisting one of his charges to get ready for a little trip to the state asylum at Salem. The gentleman whom the sheriff was helping had a heavy grip which he had some difficulty in packing.

Hating to see his temporary guest exert himself, Mr. Wilson offered to pack the man's satchel for him, and in closing it threw all his great weight upon it. This tremendous display of strength warped the bag and the metal trimmings thereof, and a nice, jagged piece of iron shoved itself into the sheriff's mighty hand. Mr. Wilson obtained first-aid treatment at a local drugstore, and in spite of a lacerated palm, hopes to escape tetanus.

Lime Aids Clover

It has been considered impossible to produce clover on some of the prairie soils of Tillamook County, according to County Agriculturist R. C. Jnes, but recent experiments with liming the soils tend to show that clover may be made to succeed there by proper use of lime. Of three places visited two fields showed a fine stand of clover, and the third indicated that the same result would have been secured had not the cover crop of oats choked out the clover.

We take particular pains with the stationery we print for our customers.

He is an influential man in Clackamas county and his many friends and admirers are of the loyal kind. It is to be regretted that so good and able a lawyer is lost to the profession, and he is to be admired while in his prime for stepping out to leave more room for the young men, who should emulate Mr. Hayes' example in being ever faithful to clients.—(Woodburn Independent.)

BOOKER T. IS DEAD

Noted Negro Educator Goes Home to Die in Land of Cotton

Booker T. Washington, born as a slave before the Civil War, and later rising to a position of leadership among his fellow members of the negro race, is dead at Tuskegee, where he was instrumental in getting founded the greatest unit in "solving the negro problem" that the country has seen. Mr. Washington knew his end was approaching, and expressed a wish to be taken home to his beloved South, so that he might die in the land where he was born. Four hours after his arrival at home he died.

Booker T. Washington believed that the negro was best suited to manual labor, and devoted the greater part of his more active life to perfecting a system of trades education for the black men. The great institute at Tuskegee was brought into being by Washington's continued effort; and many of the graduates of his system have gone out into the world to make life for the black man easier and better.

What is a One Cent Sale?

It is a sale where you buy one article at the regular price and then get another of the same article for one cent.

The One Cent Sale was originated by the United Drug Co.,—the parent of the "Rexall Stores"—for the purpose of introducing more widely the famous Rexall Remedies, the Violet Dulce and Harmony line of Toilet Preparations, the Rexall line of Stationery and Rubber Goods.

A record is kept of the Rexall goods disposed of at 1c by the store putting on the One Cent Sale, and the United Drug company rebates the dealer for the loss.

It stands to reason that Rexall goods must be high class and prove satisfactory to the buyers, for both the United Drug Co. and the Rexall druggist depend upon future sales to make their profit.

With goods that would not please the customer and bring him back for more it would be a losing game.

An example of what one cent will buy in one of these sales is shown on page 3 in the advertisement of Huntley Bros. Co., the Rexall Store in Oregon City.
