Henry Ford's Farm Tractor

There exists a world-wide interest in the tractor to be manufactured by Mr. Henry Ford, as inquiries pour into us from every quarter, asking innumerable questions in regard to the tractor, its possibilities, when it will be ready for the market, how it will be marketed, and asking for agency rights to sell it.

To give as wide circulation as possible to the facts concerning Mr. Ford's Tractor we are pleased to say that it is an accomplished success. It has been thoroughly tested through all the fields of experimentation in which a farm tractor can possibly be called upon for service, and has satisfactorily met every expectation.

We take from the local newspaper of Dearborn, Mich., "The Independent," the following excerpts covering the announcement of the building of the tractor plant, and Mr. Ford's plans for the employees of that plant, and also for the practical benefit of those who will buy the tractors, presaging a remarkable evolution in industrial and commercial conditions:

"The Ford Farm Tractor will be manufactured in Dearborn, Michigan. Large factory buildings are being equipped as rapidly as possible. The factory will be completely equipped for the construction of the new tractor from the raw material to the finished product including foundry, engine rooms, and the latest in iron-working machinery. The greatest activity prevails, the first of the two new buildings has been completed, and machinery is being installed.

"In the new tractor plant there will be no stockholders, no directors, no absentee owners, no parasites, declared Henry Ford the other day, in a discussion of modern industrialism. There will be no incorporation. Every man employed during the period of his employment will share in the profits of the industry; but there will be no dividends to stock either at face value.

"When the Ford Motor Company started the world by the announcement that it would share profits with its employees, and make $5 the minimum wage for a day's work of eight hours, Mr. Ford had studied the plan until he became satisfied it was practicable, and from the time of its inauguration a marvelous record of production and efficiency has resulted.

"When the Ford Motor Company later pledged itself to share profits with the retail purchasers if 300,000 cars were sold within the fiscal year, to the amount of from $40 to $60 on each car, and succeeded in selling 308,213 cars and distributed among these purchasers $15,410,650, it gave the world another topic for discussion, although the object as a business proposition was more readily understood. The offer made every Ford owner a more earnest Ford 'booster.'

"And now Henry Ford proposes another revolution, by which will be eliminated every possible absorbent of profit—save honest toil. He does not forget the other end of the line, either, for he will market the product at the lowest safe margin of profit.

"After the inauguration of this new step in the industrial development of the American people, a veritable revolution takes place in that the employees and users of the tractor are to be Henry Ford's partners in the tractor business."

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.
