TONI CERBONI HAS HIS MIND MADE UP HE WILL BE HANGED FOR MURDER

ITALIAN HELD FOR KILLING A COUNTRYMAN WANTS TO GIVE AWAY BELOVED MANDOLIN.

Want a mandolin?

Toni Cerboni, native of far-off Italy, has one which he will give to anybody. True, it is well worn, but its notes are rich and sweet. Toni once—only a day of to ago, in fact—could entice from its much-thumbed strings the melodious opera of old Italy or the quicker strains of popular American tunes, but no more. This planet earth is a sad place—devoid of the warming sunshine of hope—for Toni now. He is waiting, patiently, for death, which he knows must come.

Toni can't read, and the customs of America are unreal to him. In some states in which he has been the authorities take the life of a murderer, a life for a life, and Toni has killed a man. All American justice must be alike, he reasons, therefore he awaits the rope.

"Two weeks, I be dead," he mourns to visitors at the county jail. "Two weeks more, they killa me. I know."

And, Toni refuses to be comforted. Sheriff Wilson has spent much time in an unsuccessful effort to convince Toni that the law of Oregon says the state cannot take an eye for an eye, a life for a life. Italians have tried to explain to Toni, but their efforts are unavailing. Even an Italian priest from Portland was unable to convince Toni that his life is safe.

Toni, therefore, has not the heart to play. For the last three days county officers have not stopped from their work to hear the sweet music from Toni's mandolin come drifting up from the jail in the courthouse basement, as they did a week ago before the dreadful prospect of certain death etched itself so deeply on Toni's mind.

Toni killed a countryman out in the Bull Run country several weeks ago in a quarrel over 60 cents. Sam, the dead man, says Toni, demanded the 60 cents, which Toni says he did not owe, until he left the camp. A week or two later he returned, and the old quarrel opened up again until in the height of passion Toni shot Sam, and ever since Toni has sincerely regretted his act. He is bound over to the grand jury on a charge of second degree murder, and will probably not be sentenced for several weeks, although he has signed a complete confession.

JAS. WILKINSON IS HIT BY AUTO, SERIOUSLY HURT

PIONEER WOOLEN MILL MAN AND EX-COUNCILMAN STEPS IN FRONT OF MACHINE

STRENGTHENING OF CITY TRAFFIC CODE MAY RESULT FROM ACCIDENT

Chief Blanchard Favors Ordinance Forbidding Motors From Passing Street Cars Loading or Unloading Passengers

James Wilkinson, aged about 73 years, a resident of Oregon City for half a century, was seriously injured at 1 o'clock Tuesday afternoon when he was hit by an automobile driven by David W. Hanrahan, a laundryman. As a result the city traffic ordinances may be revised to forbid automobiles from passing street cars while they are loading or unloading passengers. Portland and many other cities have similar provisions in their traffic codes.

Mr. Wilkinson had just helped Mrs. McLarty, of Portland, who had been at the Wilkinson home over Christmas, on a street car when he stepped back toward the sidewalk. Mr. Hanrahan attempted to bring his auto to a stop suddenly, the machine skidded, he says, and Mr. Wilkinson was knocked to the pavement. The wheels of the machine did not pass over his body, but he was severely bruised.

The injured man lives at Fourteenth and Main streets and witnesses of the accident carried him into the house. Dr. C. H. Meissner was called. The physician says no bones are broken, but Mr. Wilkinson is suffering from severe bruises and possibly internal complications. Dr. Meissner does not regard his condition as critical.

In the matter of passing street cars, the traffic ordinances are weak. A driver is required to exercise caution, there being no clause forbidding an automobile from passing a street car while passengers are boarding or leaving the car. Chief of Police Blanchard, who investigated the accident, is convinced that the traffic ordinances should be amended to forbid an automobile from passing a street car which is loading or unloading passengers to prevent accidents similar to the one which happened Wednesday.

Mr. Wilkinson, a native of Ireland, came to Oregon City in the '60s and for many years was employed by the Oregon City Woolen mills as an expert weaver. He was a member of the council for several years and was prominent in civic activities. For the last 40 years he has been a deacon in the Congregational church.

HIRAM HOSKINS GETS $20 JUDGMENT AGAINST COUNTY FOR DAMAGES

COUNTY WILL MAKE IMPROVEMENTS IN DRAINAGE ON ROAD IN COLTON DISTRICT.

A decree awarding the plaintiff $20 in the case of Hiram Hoskins against Clackamas county for $2400 damages was handed down Friday. The case was tried here some weeks ago by Judge Bagley of Hillsboro.

Since the trial the plaintiff died and the award was made to the estate. The plaintiff in addition to the $2400 sought, asked for an injunction requiring the county to widen a ditch which it had constructed in proximity to the Hoskins farm near Colton. The injunction was granted by Judge Bagley.

The damages were claimed by reason of overflow from the ditch which the county constructed a few years ago to keep the water off the county road. The ditch ran over the natural drainage grounds across lands adjoining Mr. Hoskins place, and emptied into Milk creek. The plaintiff's contention was that the ditch was neither deep enough nor wide enough to handle the overflow, with the result that his lands were damaged in the sum of $2500. The case was tried before Judge Bagley in October and at that time on motion of District Attorney Hedges, the court and the opposing counsel, together with Mr. Hoskins visited the ditch. The court held $20 would amply compensate for the actual damages sustained and gave the county ninety days in which to widen and deepen the ditch so as to accommodate the overflow. This expense will be inconsequential, according to the court.

C. D. Latourette and George C. Brownell represented the Hoskins estate, and District Attorney Gilbert Hedges looked after the county's interests.

OREGON CITY HAS SANE CHRISTMAS WITH NOT A CASE OF DRUNKENESS

PORTLAND, HOWEVER, HAS REMINDER OF OLD WET DAYS WITH JAIL WELL FILLED

Not an arrest and not a case of drunkeness Christmas eve, Christmas or the day after is the proud record of Oregon City. With liquor being received here at the rate of several hundred packages a day, the police feared that the jail would be filled, but those who secured their Christmas spirit from bottles evidently stayed home during the day.

PORTLAND, Ore., Dec. 26.—Old timers in the municipal court had a feeling that the old wet times had returned this morning when Judge Langguth commenced hearing the wails of the drunks. It was a typical "morning after" the holiday as it used to be when the bowl flowed freely on every street corner. Fifty-four men who knocked the props from under the dry law yesterday were on trial, and in the aggregate they parted with $500 or will serve the equivalent in jail. The fines were dealt out in $10 sizes with a few over and undersizes. This was the largest drunk list since the prohibition law went into effect, but a larger number is expected on the mourner's bench next Tuesday morning, following the New Year's christening.

CARRIES UMBRELLA 16 YEARS, RAIN OR SHINE

William Stubbe, of Estacada, who has been a representative of the Enterprise in that section of the county for the last 15 years, was in this city on business Tuesday. Mr. Stubbe, who has carried an umbrella for the past 16 years, had his "rain stick" with him while in this city. When asked by a representative of the Enterprise while in the office if he did not care to leave his umbrella while he did his shopping, as the day was clear, he remarked, "I would be lost without that umbrella, I have carried one for the last 16 years, rain or shine," and even on the hottest summer day Stubbe is seen carrying his umbrella. The one he had while in this city on Tuesday was of unusual size, measuring 160 inches in circumference. He has carried this umbrella for the last four years, and is large enough for a whole family to gather under.

WEDDED 47 YEARS TO A DAY, COUPLE DIVORCED

JUDGE CAMPBELL GRANTS DECREE TO MRS. SARAH WALLACE OF NEEDY DISTRICT.

Forty-six years ago today Sarah S. and J. T. Wallace were married at Topeka, Ill. Yesterday Circuit Judge Campbell granted a divorce after almost half a century of married life.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace lived on a farm in the Needy district, and he is well known not only as a farmer but also as a race horse man. She brought the suit, alleging cruelty, charging that her husband was close in money matters and that he was not true to her. Several women were named by Mrs. Wallace in her complaint. Mrs. Wallace is 67 years old.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Wallace appeared in the circuit court Friday morning with attorneys and witnesses, prepared to contest the action. After the case was stated to the court, Judge Campbell advised them to reach a settlement out of court. His suggestion was followed. Mrs. Wallace will receive the decree, which will probably be signed today, and $4000.

Walter A. Dimick and Judge Grant B. Dimick appeared for Mrs. Wallace and W. C. Winslow, of Salem, for the defendant.
