MYSTERY IN DEATH OF MODEL
FOUND STRANDED IN APARTMENT

MRS. GRACE ROBERTS

Valde Agnes Colbert, of Mrs. Grace Roberts as she preferred to be known, the model was found dead, beaten and strangled, in her apartment in Philadelphia, was killed in a quarrel with a wealthy suitor after he learned that the girl was to become reconciled to a man with whom she was madly infatuated and from whom she had been estranged for several months. This is the story admitted by detectives after they received sensational information regarding this fatal triangle from a man connected with the highway bureau of Philadelphia.

To complicate the mystery in the murder of the model the detectives when they sought this man learned that he had paid his hotel bill and left. The family is wealthy and owns considerable brewing and other properties in an inland city of Pennsylvania.

The man whom Miss Colbert was in love lives in Cynwyd, a suburb of Philadelphia. He is a former student at the University of Pennsylvania, is employed in the engineering department of one of the largest public service corporations in the city and is popularly known to his intimates as "Nick."

"Nick," according to the police informant, has been the accepted favorite of Miss Roberts for several years. She was insanely jealous of him, too, and one night when she learned that he was attending a dance at one of the larger hotels she went there in a rage and almost tore his evening clothes off him. The affair caused a scandal, as the guests included some persons high in social circles, but the episode itself was hushed up.

POMONA GRANGE MUCH
OPPOSED TO A DIVISION OF CLACKAMAS COUNTY

Resolutions opposing the creation of a new county for the benefit of Estacada and the plan of cutting off 12 square miles of territory around Oswego and annexing it to Multnomah county were unanimously adopted at a meeting of the Clackamas county Pomona grange at Oswego Wednesday.

New officers were installed, a dinner was served at noon and the resolutions discussed during the day and in the evening a program was given. Between 50 and 60 attended.

HERE'S DUFFY, WHO WOULDN'T LOWER
FLAG FOR U-BOAT COMMANDER

CAPTAIN JOHN L. DUFFY, WHO KEPT THE CHEMUNG'S FLAG FLYING

Captain John L. Duffy of New York, stockily built, square jawed, weather tanned, arrived in New York from France. Until Nov. 28 the captain was in command of the American steamship Chemung. On that day a torpedo from an Austrian submarine sank his ship in the Mediterranean off the coast of Spain. But Duffy would not lower the American flag at the order of the submarine commander.

The captain was not at all dismayed by his experience, and he said that he would take out another vessel just as soon as he could get one. He has made several trips to Archangel during the war, and submarines do not scare him a bit.

"The Chemung went down with her flag flying," said the captain. "We were out from New York with a general cargo and off the Spanish coast in the Mediterranean when the submarine came along. A shot across our bows was the signal for us to stop, and we did."

In response to a signal from the submarine Third Officer Jacobson rowed to her, carrying with him the ship's papers. The commander was for arresting the skipper, but apparently he was satisfied with the destruction of the steamer.

There was no argument over the lowering of the flag. The submarine commander signaled for the flag to be lowered. He and his crew of thirty-four got into small boats, and the flag was snatched from the staff as they pulled away from the side of the doomed liner.

"We were hardly out of range when the submarine opened fire on the Chemung," said the skipper. "She attempted to sink the ship by shell fire, but as this had apparently no effect and the vessel continued to ride high out of water, the commander sent a torpedo into her. She sank within two minutes."

When the Chemung went down the submarine circled about and picked up the two small boats. Lines were passed by the submarine, and for two hours she towed the boats toward the shore. Then the Spanish steamship Salvadore Giner came in sight and the men on the submarine cut the towline, and a few seconds later dived beneath the sea.

RECEIVER ORCHARDS COMPANY REPORTS; INVESTORS PROBABLY WILL NOT GET BACK ONE CENT

Tom P. Randall, receiver for the Northwestern association, Wednesday filed in the Clackamas county circuit court his report as receiver. The report shows the tangled condition of the association's affairs. The head of the concern, Jesse Hazell, recently completed a sentence of a year in the Multnomah county jail on a charge of using the mails to defraud.

The report shows that claims totaling over $21,000 have been filed with the receiver, although many contract holders, it is thought, have not been heard from. The association proposed to sell small orchards in this county on the installment plan.

Of the 44 contract holders who did file their claims, 27 live in the eastern states and only 16 on the coast. One, Herbert P. Claridge, with a claim for $540, lives at 21 Colston avenue, Wallingford, Cheshire, England.

The chance for any of these 44 investors to recover any of the money they sank in the Clackamas county orchards tracts is considered remote. The property at Redlands, which was to have been divided into small tracts and planted in fruit trees, was heavily mortgaged even while the association was selling contracts.

The receiver reports that he leased the property at Redlands to Carl Mohaupt for $160 for the year ending October 16, 1917, and of that sum he has left, after paying for postage, filing fees and other small items, a balance of $131.67.

The receiver reports the following judgments against the land: Martha Hobbs, administratrix of the estate of Charles Hobbs, deceased, judgment in favor of Charles Hobbs for $1716.08.

R. A. Andrews judgment for $420.50. Alice Snyder and Max Glutach have suits pending against the association. Walter and Lewis Gruel Wednesday secured a judgment for $3090 against about 100 acres of the land and D. C. Latourette and the First National Bank won a judgment for $2000. Bertha Smith has foreclosing proceedings pending covering about 25 acres of the property.

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 10.—(Special)—The joint ways and means committee of the legislature late today agreed to present a bill granting $50 to the McLoughlin memorial home in Oregon City for repairs and improvements.

SALEM, Ore., Jan. 10.—(Special)—If an appropriation is made for a state historical building at this session of the legislature, a strong bid will be put in to locate the building at Oregon City. While stating that he is not particularly favorable to many appropriations for new buildings this year, in light of the almost universal demands for economy in the administration of state affairs, Senator Dimick gave assurance today that if such a building is to be provided for, Oregon City will have no want of a champion to throw down his gauntlet for the location of the building.

"Oregon City is the ideal place for such a building, if the legislature deems that the time is ripe for honoring the old pioneers with such a structure," stated Senator Dimick today.

"Oregon City is the seat of the old territorial government. It is there that the McLoughlin home, most interesting of all old historical monuments of Oregon is situated, and with that home as a nucleus, I fail to see where sentiment, or historical interest could find a better or more picturesque setting for the building that is designed to hold the ancient archives. He gathered the following information showing the financial condition of the county:

Road Machinery.
14 rock crushers, valued at $14,000
5 road rollers, valued at 10,000
4 traction engines 4,000
46 road drags 450
34 road graders 5,950
