

SEEN FROM THE OPTIMIST'S TOWER

A hog is an ingrowing self-consciousness wrapped in a conscience-proof hide. Like all other animal species he is of several varieties. Sus Scrofa has four legs and a ravenous appetite, and is in some respects the noblest brute of them all. Pig sticking is a game which contains considerable zest, for Sus Scrofa will fight. His first cousin on his mother's side is Sus Domesticus, noteworthy for his melodious baritone voice at meal times, and for his proclivity for swill. He was the first financier who got a corner on anything. He crowded out all competition by getting into the community trough with all four feet, and holding it down against all competitors. Up on his father's side his nearest relative is Svinus Bipedicus, who followed his example by getting a corner on foodstuffs. Of this variety the species Domesticus is most in evidence. He usually carries on his chin a sample of all the varieties of cut plug he has chewed for ten or twelve hours preceding, and his vest is garnished with samples of his menus for the last three months. Women have been known with courage sufficient and stomachs stout enough to kiss him. If you get on the windward side of one of them you can tell of his approach in the dark as well as in the light. Once catch the indecipherable odor and you will want to change places with the Swede of the story. He was acting as chauffeur for a German general. While waiting, the General thought he could not pass the time better than by having a little lunch. So he reached around into his pocket, and drew out a hunk of limberger and a sandwich of weiners and sauerkraut. By and by the pervading odor of the limberger got down to where Olie lay under the car. With a dazed look on his face he crawled out holding his nose.

"Vat iss der matter mit yu?" asked the General.

"Ay don't know," gasped Olie, "but ay tank de blamed engine bane dead."

Yet some women seem to enjoy putting up with that sort of thing for a lifetime!

Another variety of the two-legged species is the Svinus Cuscedest. One cold day last winter one of him got onto a car with the writer. He was warmly clad, with a heavy overcoat and gloves. Across the aisle from him sat a sickly looking and poorly clad old man. Behind him were two delicate looking ladies. The wind was blowing from his direction, but he sat down near the front of the car and fired the window up full height, regardless of the fact that all the folks about him were shivering with cold. He had fat enough on his carcass to keep out the chill for half an hour without the aid of any other covering. But it was all nothing to him how others felt so long as he was comfortable. Another of the kind recently made three million dollars out of a corner on the food stuffs of the nation while every true citizen was sacrificing to prepare to meet war conditions. There is something rotten in Denmark when you can send Sus Domesticus to the slaughter house when he becomes a public nuisance, but you cannot do anything to his more unsavory cousin. It is true that if he were hanged to the nearest telegraph pole he would litter up the landscape some. It is also true that while Sus Domesticus can be transformed into savory hams and side-bacon, the other brute is useless even for soap-grease.

Speaking of hogs, reminds one that a commission recently appointed in the city of Chicago reported that enough food-stuffs were stored for speculation in the "Windy City" to feed the nation. During the civil war certain interests stole the cream of the public domain. During the Spanish-American war more American soldiers were shot in the stomach with embalmed beef and weevily biscuit than perished by bullets of the enemy. The rank and file of the nation are sacrificing today. We are giving of our substance, and are parting with our sons—dearer to us than our life's blood itself. Is it any wonder then that we feel that a short shift and a quick swing from the nearest telephone pole is the just desert of the traitor who makes a fortune out of the need of his nation? Summary example should be made of every one found guilty.

In marked contrast with the attitude of these thieves and traitors is that of J. Ogden Armour, who proposes to turn over his immense packing plants to the government, and to run them for the benefit of the government at a minimum profit. The Northeastern Nebraska Live Stock Breeders' association follows suit, saying:

"If Mr. Armour proposes to turn over the packers' plants to the government and run them for the benefit of the government at a minimum profit, we will not allow him to be more magnanimous than we. We too will turn over our plants. We will turn our farms over to the government and operate them for the government on a basis of three per cent on the investment. This is only a bondholders' percentage, and the bondholder does not give his services as we propose to do without extra wage or salary. This offer is bona fide, and we are prepared to stand by it."

"We desire some security for the future. No stockman today knows what to do. The tendency is to cash corn and quit the producing of finished beef. This would be a national calamity, and in some way must be averted. Secure to the feeder and producer of corn-fed pork and beef adequate remuneration for his labor and feed, and the future supply of corn-fed beef and pork is assured."

Should gambling in foodstuffs be made a criminal offense, involving confiscation of all ill-gotten gains, and a long term in the penitentiary, it might do something. Of the two the man who acts as a German spy because he loves and believes in the fatherland is a polished gentleman beside the edulous scoundrel who sacrifices the needs of his people upon the altar of his own greed.

What a hellish affair this war has been anyhow. Two-thirds of the people of the earth are now in the maelstrom. More men are engaged than in the wars of all the ages combined. The most ever known before was the two millions under arms in our own civil war. Official statistics collected by the Young Men's Christian association show the following astounding figures:

Russian army, 17 millions; Central Powers, 12 millions; British army, 6 millions; French army, 5 millions; Italian army, 3 millions. A total of 43 millions in all. Of these 7 millions have been hopelessly mutilated—knocked out for keeps. This does not include the seventy per cent who are patched up and sent back to try it over again.

6 millions are prisoners of war in camps, conditions in many of which, especially in Germany, are far worse than those at Andersonville. Association officers found scurvy in many camps; men with eyes sunken, teeth dropping out and bodies rotting away. An epidemic in one camp claimed 5,000 victims.

5 millions of men and boys have been killed. 5 millions are now in Naval and Military hospitals. Twentythree millions of men already out of commission because the Kaiser wished to become a second Alexander! When you think of the heartbroken mothers, of the ruined homes, of the thousands—nay, millions—of young lives blotted out in the budding of their manhood, all because of the lust for power of a coterie of Prussian blue blood barbarians it makes one believe that the old fashioned hell of our grandfathers is inadequate to fill the bill. Such rascals ought to have a new fire-lined edition-de-luxe of their own made expressly to meet conditions. And the Optimist is just old fashioned enough to believe that "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," either here or somewhere. One thing is certain. Now that civilization has undertaken the job of cleaning up the rattlesnakes' den it cannot afford to stop until the job is complete.

What an anomaly it is that a kindly, gentle, trustworthy race like the Germans should be so thoroughly under the heel of a military autocracy! There is no finer stock on earth than the Teutonic. Dr. Robert Speer reports seeing regiments of boys twelve to sixteen years of age in the Austrian trenches, upon his last visit to the Y. M. C. A. camps at the front. Dr. Kasper Rene Gregory, the great Bible teacher, one of the finest in the world, was killed on the front in France the other day. He was one of the greatest theologians in Germany and was seventy-one years of age. Germany has more men under arms than at any time during the war, but has stripped the cradle and robbed the grave to get them. What will be the result upon the life of the nation for generations to come and all to satisfy the blood and conquest lust of a military caste which is not truly part of the people! To rid Europe of kaiserism and of the von Hindenburg nightmare will be to liberate the German people and to free the world.

FLORIDA OF RUSSIA

The Historic Crimean Peninsula of the Black Sea.

HORRORS OF ITS GREAT WAR.

In This Famous Conflict Soldiers Died Like Flies From Disease and Florence Nightingale Won Her Crown of Glory on the Battlefield.

"Hanging down into the Black sea like a butcher's cleaver, with its handle pointed east and the rear corner of the blade joined to the mainland of Russia, the Crimea, where it was first planned to exile the czar when he abdicated, is about as near to being an island as a peninsula well can be, even though a very narrow strait is the only water that lies between it and a second connection with the mainland. On the one side—the west—lies the Perekop gulf, and to the east, shut out from the Black sea by the handle of the cleaver, is the sea of Azov."

Thus the Crimea is outlined in a bulletin by the National Geographic society from its Washington headquarters for geographic research, concerning this Florida of Russia jutting out into Europe's inland sea.

"With an area matching that of New Hampshire, a population equal to that of New Hampshire and Vermont together and a climate that borrows good features from Florida and southern California and bad ones from many places, the Crimea is one of the most fascinating bits of territory between Portugal and Ceylon China. Its populace a congress of races, its industries ranging from the growing of subtropical fruits and the housing of Russia's elite as they flee from the cold, to the herding of sheep and the growing of grain. It is a place of many sided activities."

"As the men of wealth of America have their winter homes in Florida and those of western Europe have theirs along the Riviera, the people of position in Russia have their country seats in the Crimea. And beautiful places they are, for in Russia the rich are very rich. The height of the social season is from the middle of August to the first of November."

"The peninsula is occupied by 855,000 people, according to the last census, mostly Turkish speaking Tartars, with a scattering of Russians, Greeks, Germans and Jews. Cleanliness and morality are said to be proverbial traits of the Crimean Tartars, who have been undergoing the influences of Russification for several generations. They have taken up vine culture, fruit growing and kindred occupations with a zeal seldom equaled east of the Aegean."

"Of course most interesting of all things Crimean are its history, its fortress and its imperial palace. In the second century B. C. the Scythians founded a kingdom there, and the land passed through many changes, now under one sovereignty, and now under another, finally passing to the Tartars, who in turn were brought under the rule of the Turks. In 1783 Russia forced the last khan to abdicate and made the Crimea a part of one of her provinces. The Crime Tartars, who give the peninsula its name by reason of their substantial admixture of Greek and other bloods, have lost most of the Mongolian features, being slender in build, possessing aquiline noses, eyes that have lost the oriental slant and countenances not quite so inscrutable as the eastern type."

"In the Crimean war, fought by England, France and Turkey against Russia, the final test of strength came at Sebastopol. Here the factors of unlimited resources operated in the allies' favor. Through their command of the sea they could secure everything needed, while the Russians could bring up their supplies only across the barren steppes, whose highways were marked at every step by the dead and the dying, both man and beast."

"The novels of Tolstoy give a graphic picture of the Crimean war from the Russian viewpoint, depicting the miseries of the march, the anguish of the life in the casemates and the nerve destroying order of manning the lines under shellfire, there to await the night attack that might or might not come. It was in this war that Florence Nightingale rendered services as a nurse that made her name a synonym of ministering angel on the world's battlefield. Then men knew nothing of the cause of cholera and such diseases, and the soldiers died like flies. It is estimated that 50,000 British soldiers lie buried in the cemetery outside of Sebastopol."

"The imperial palace, to which the dethroned monarch was to retire, is situated at Livadia, surrounded by a magnificent park. It is of recent construction and was completed in 1910. Hard by is the simply constructed small palace, in an upper room of which Alexander III. died. In no other country in the world was the reigning ruler possessed of so many lands or such extensive properties as was the case in Russia."

"Have you any late trains out here?" asked the prospective purchaser. "Sure," replied the suburban real estate agent. "All our trains are generally late."—Philadelphia Record.

THE FASHIONS

The patriotic spirit of flag-decked New York begins to make itself felt in many of the small accessories that make a woman's costume, and often in the costume itself. With flags to the right and flags to the left, it is not to be wondered at that the spirit of the times is being reflected in our clothes.

The red, white and blue colors are in evidence everywhere. New vests and collars of white silk or satin are edged with narrow red, white and blue ribbon, or rows of red and blue ribbon are stitched around the edges of white collars. The vests are the very latest addition to coats, and are so popular that even blouses are being made in vest effect now.

Hosiery and gloves embroidered with stars and stripes are among the latest novelties seen, showing the extent to which patriotism may be taken.

There are also small silk handkerchiefs edged with little flags, and parasols edged with ribbon bearing the stars and stripes. Even a parasol of red, white and blue bunting has been devised, with the colors used alternately in each section.

Costumes consisting of red or blue wool jersey middie blouses are worn with skirts of white wash satin or sports silk. The blouses are decorated with embroidered emblems on the sleeves, on the ends of collars or in front. With the blue blouses are worn red ties, and with the red blouses, blue ties.

Foulard Combined with Organdy or Georgette

Every smartly-dressed woman realizes that if she is to be up-to-date she must have a dress of foulard in her wardrobe this summer. Blue foulard with large white polka-dots is the kind one sees most of, but sometimes the order is reversed and blue dots standing out on a white background appear. They are just as smart and even a little newer than the white dots on the blue.

Foulard is often combined with Georgette or organdy. In the sketch it is combined with the soft gathered vest and collar of a very modish bolero dress of navy-blue dotted foulard. The pretty bolero style has come back to us, and this is one of the many attractive models in which it is seen. Some of the new summer suits have short bolero coats trimmed around the edge with some form of embroidery or stitching. A very smart model was made of blue twill and foulard.

Speaking of the combinations of materials, one of the very newest effects is that of using organdy and net together. And speaking of organdy, it is to be very popular this summer for entire dresses and also for trimming. A white net summer frock worn over a pink organdy slip and trimmed with bands of pale pink organdy on the skirt was recently seen. A very cool and refreshing frock for summer it looked.

Silk Braid a Fashionable Trimming

The use of flat woven silk braid as a trimming is becoming more and more favored. Braid about half an inch in width is applied on coats and skirts in straight rows one above the other, and at even distances apart. Sometimes the braid covers an entire coat, sleeves and all.

Black braid on navy blue, and dark blue on tan are the combinations most frequently seen. To accompany a dark-blue coat, white flannel skirts trimmed with rows of dark-blue braid are sometimes used.

Capes Make Their Appearance

Coats with capes, and dresses with capes, have been making their appearance lately. The capes are not the short variety that were used some seasons ago. They are very long, as long as the coat to which it is attached in most cases, and many of them are attached only at the back of a coat or dress. While being very smart, these capes have a practical value in that they give extra warmth. In a very smart dress which combined dark-blue satin and serge, a cape of serge was attached at the shoulders. The lining of apricot-colored silk formed an effective background for the dark dress.

Much of this satin and serge combination is being used again this spring, and frocks of this kind are especially practical for shopping and street wear. With one of the fur capes no other way is necessary at this time of the year.

The linen frock for summer means as much as the satin-and-serge frock does for spring. A tailored coat dress of white linen buttoned down the front and brightened by a colored linen collar, a belt and large pockets of the same, is seen in the sketch. Stitching is the tailored trimming used to accentuate the distinctive lines of this model.

Hard Work for Women

It is a question if women doing men's work deserve particular sympathy, for it is doubtful if there is any work that is harder than everyday housework. Overwork tells on the kidneys, and when the kidneys are affected one looks and feels older than the actual years. Mrs. A. G. Wells, R. R. 5, Rocky Mount, N. C., writes: "I cannot praise Foley Kidney Pills enough for the wonderful benefit I have derived from their use for a short while."—Jones Drug Co.

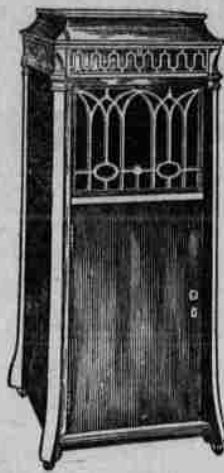

Is the Middle West Apathetic?

In the June American Magazine Booth Tarkington says:

"Apathy of the Middle West? Not now! Not since Bethmann-Hollweg told us that the Germans had only postponed the submarine war until they got the boats to do the job! Not when the flags are up!"

"Apathy of the Middle West? Not to a voice that dares to call! Since the day when the Germans told us that once a week we could send one ship beyond the mouth of the Hudson river, provided three hundred and forty-one green polka dots were painted on the stern, with a yellow streak around the captain's cabin, while all other American ships would stay in port or be blown up—since that day the Middle West has exhibited a liveliness which may surprise the foreign gentleman who said he controlled America through 3,000,000 good German-American votes. Since that day, in the matter of enlistments in the United States army, Indiana (for instance) has stood third of all

THE PHONOGRAPH which really sings

There are many kinds of talking machines and sound reproducing machines, but there is only one instrument that REALLY SINGS; the rest of them give an imitation of singing, just as you or I might give an imitation of a dog barking.

The NEW EDISON

"The Phonograph with a Soul"

actually sings. It has stood beside Marie Rappold, Anna Case, Margaret Matzenauer, Giovanni Zenatello, Guido Ciccolini, Jacques Urlus, Arthur Middleton, Thomas Chalmers, and a score of other great artists, and has sung duets with them and then sung in comparison with them. The music critics of five hundred of America's principal newspapers concede in the columns of their own papers that it is only by watching the lips of the flesh-and-blood artists that they can tell whether it is the artist singing or the New Edison singing.

MAKE US PROVE OUR STATEMENTS

We almost hope that you will disbelieve what we say. If you question our word, please do us the justice to come into our store and give us a chance to prove that the New Edison does all we claim for it. You will not be asked to buy. We are satisfied if we can convert you as fully as the music critics of America's principal newspapers have been converted.

NOTICE—Please do not ask us to sell you Edison Re-Creations if you intend to attempt to play them on any other instrument than the New Edison. No other instrument can bring out the true musical quality of Edison Re-Creations. Furthermore, injury to the records is likely to result if you attempt to play them on an ordinary phonograph or talking machine.

More Personalities

Editor Courier:—Evidently the truth gets under Mr. Spence's skin. If he will carry on an honorable campaign and not bring in personalities and stop "slinging mud," as he calls it, there will be no need on anyone's part to meet "fire with fire" or "mud with mud."

If Mr. Spence will acknowledge that he lied and knew he was lying when he called us the "paid tools of the paving trust" we will never mention his name again and stop advertising him.

Infantile Paralysis

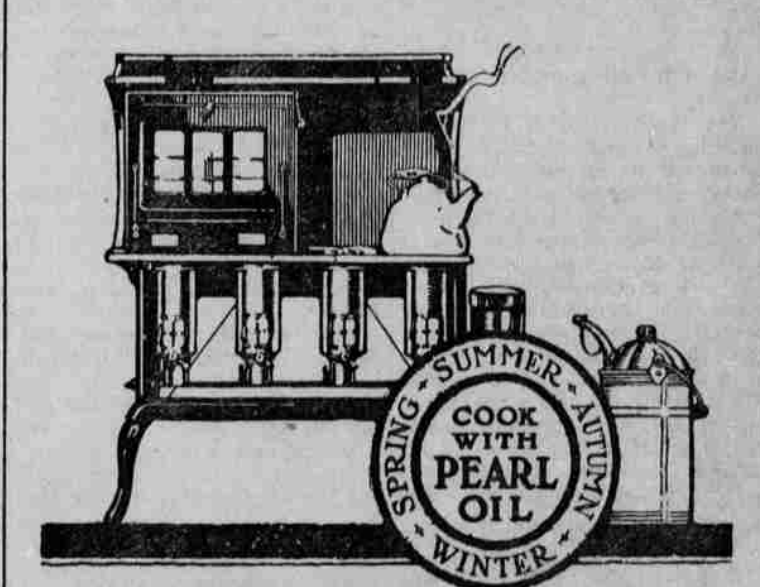

In the June Woman's Home Companion Dr. Roger H. Dennett has an excellent article on Infantile Paralysis, the scourge that so many physicians fear will return with the warm weather. Among other things Dr. Dennett says:

"It is impossible to tell, when the child is first taken with the disease, what the eventual outcome is to be. Even those who are most completely paralyzed at the start occasionally become entirely well; whereas, paralysis that is very slight in the beginning may show no later improvement, even with the most faithful treatment. It is never too late, however, to start some sort of treatment, even for the little ones who have had their infantile paralysis for a long while, and who have not had the advantage of any special treatment afterward. One never knows how much can be done until one has tried, and it is only fair, at any stage of the paralysis, to give the child the benefit of science, no matter how discouraging the outlook may seem."

Wants Divorce; No Alimony

Emily S. Jackson, who married Andrew O. Jackson at Corbett, Oregon, in 1892, filed suit for divorce last Saturday alleging desertion in 1905. No alimony is asked as the question of property rights was settled out of court.

What Does Catarrh Mean?

It means inflammation of a mucous membrane somewhere in the head, throat, bronchial tubes, stomach, biliary ducts or bowels. It always means stagnant blood—the blood that is full of impurities. Left alone, it extends until it is followed by indigestion, colds, congestion or fever. It weakens the system generally and spreads its operations until systemic catarrh or an acute illness is the result.

Peruna

Is the nation's reliable remedy for this condition. It restores appetite, aids digestion, checks and removes inflammation, and thus enables the membranes, through which we breathe and through which our food is absorbed, to do their work properly. Forty-four years of success, with thousands of testimonials, have established it as the home remedy—Ever-Ready-to-Take. Its record of success holds a promise for you.
