CAN FOOD AT HOME

(By H. H. Windsor, editor Popular Mechanics magazine)

Vast amounts of edible corn, tomatoes, pickles, string beans, pumpkins, apples, peaches, grapes and other fruits and vegetables, are allowed to rot on the ground each year in this country. The average family with a garden is supplied so bountifully during the season that long before the first killing frost comes waste begins. In the country and country towns especially, there is little or no market for the overproduction. This year not a pound of vegetable food capable of being saved, by drying or canning or preserving, should be allowed to spoil. The boys can render splendid service by care of the garden and gathering the produce, and the girls can do their part in preparing and canning. The process of cooking for canning is not difficult to learn, nor too exhausting to perform, and this year we should put upon our shelves for next winter's consumption millions upon millions of quarts of canned food. This will release an equal amount, which otherwise would be taken from the output of the big canneries, and which can go to feed our own army and navy or be shipped abroad to starving Europe. No boy or girl need wait until he or she is older in order to do some great thing. If only 5,000,000 families can an extra 100 jars each, the result will be 500,000,000 jars more than last year, and that is anything but a small accomplishment. Don't let a pound of food go to waste this year. Those of us who are not already thrifty must learn to become so, and once the habit is formed, the results are so surprising and satisfying it becomes a pleasure.

NO EXCUSE FOR THIS

Unthinking, perhaps, and with an exuberance of youth difficult to resist, two young soldiers doing duty here playfully knocked over a pile of suit cases in front of a store on Main street.

The act was not witnessed by the proprietor, who discovered his suit cases strewn over the sidewalk after the soldiers had gone. Undoubtedly, had he known the men he would have reported them to their superior officer and punishment of some sort would have been meted out to the culprits.

The act was a deliberate one and could not be excused on any grounds. Had the suit cases fallen as the result of an accident, gentlemen would have piled them in their proper order again. But, this was not done. The soldiers nonchalantly walked away without turning to witness the result of their by-play.

It was such actions as these that brought the National guard into disfavor in times past. Men wearing the uniform of the United States should conduct themselves as gentlemen at all times. No opportunity should be given for discrediting the personell of the army nor the uniform its members wear.

DENNY REFORMS

Martin Denny, who with Larry Sullivan conducted the notorious Friars' club near Milwaukee and who was recently paroled by Judge J. U. Campbell after serving 19 days of a 30-day sentence, has evidently seen the error of his ways. Denny is said to have been a model prisoner and to have aided the officers during his incarceration. He is a native of Australia and was famous as a prize fighter and trainer. He came to this country with Fitzsimmons and was popular in the hey-day of pugilistic sport. His career, however, has been checked with odious publicity and finally crowned with a jail sentence. Thus do the princes of the olden days, when John Barleycorn ruled king, fall from public grace. Martin Denny still has a following, no doubt, and engaged in legitimate business he probably could recover his lost fortunes. But he must stick to his resolution to reform.

lor passed away. Mrs. Taylor lived here until about 18 months ago, when she left for Long Beach, Cal., to visit her daughter, Mrs. C. D. Story, returning to Oregon at Wolf Creek to reside with another daughter, Mrs. Edward Story, at whose home she passed away.

Mrs. Taylor had a legion of friends in Oregon City and Clackamas county, where her unusually cheerful disposition and charming manner and her readiness to aid anyone in distress won her marked respect and distinction.

Although she was 79 years of age, she was very active to within a short time before her death and took keen interest in the welfare of her relatives and friends. She was an active member of the Baptist church for many years.

She is survived by the following children: Mrs. Edwin Harrington, of Gladstone; Elbridge Taylor, of Lake View, Oregon; Mrs. C. D. Story, of Long Beach, Calif.; Mrs. Frank Welsh, of Oregon City; Mrs. Edward Story, of Wolf Creek; Mrs. Amy Martin, of Lost Hill, Calif.; and Mrs. Myrtle Patton, of Royal, Iowa. She is also survived by seventeen grandchildren and seven great grandchildren. County Clerk Harrington and Dr. Orel Welsh, of this city, are great grandchildren of Mrs. Taylor. The remains were brought to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Welsh, of this city.

Funeral services over the remains were held in the Baptist church in Oregon City Tuesday afternoon, Rev. W. T. Milliken officiating. A large number of friends attended the services at the church and in Mountain View cemetery, where the remains were laid beside those of her husband. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful, among them a handsome pillow from the W. C. T. U., of which Mrs. Taylor was a member when she resided in this city. The pall-bearers were H. E. Cross, John Loder, M. McGeehan, C. Schuebel, Clarence Frost and George Stevens. Impressive services at the church were marked by a solo, "Beulah Land," sung by Mrs. L. H. Olmsted, of Portland, and the choir sang "Nearer, My God, to Thee" and "Jesus, Lover of My Soul."

THE KID IS CHANGED

(A sequel to "The Kid Enlists")

The Kid is a kid no longer—So strange it is to see Our girl, once a merry tomboy, Sit sewing so quietly. Sewing for wounded soldiers—With never a careless glance; Since a lad went out on a battleship To lighten the cross of France.

The Kid spends so little for fashion, Tho' she didn't use to lag; But her face has a solemn beauty, And she wears on her breast a flag. She reads—with sweet lips parted—Of a submarine attack—And a look comes in the Kid's young eyes That doesn't mean turning back.

Dad grieves to see her changed so. His babe of yesterday; And mother cries when a letter comes From the lad who sailed away. But the Kid turns most to grandma—And they talk of the call to the brave, When they go to the cemetery With flowers for a soldier's grave.

The Kid is fighting—God bless her—A battle with each new day; As she waits what the day's headlines may tell Of that ship that sailed away. And our girl is learning, tho' still so young, God's mighty lesson of life, That it matters not—so the soul win through—Though the body sink in the strife. —Lou Rodman Polley in Spokane Spokesman-Review.

The Last-Minute Garden

In the June Woman's Home Companion Grace Tabor has an article on how to arrange for and what to put in the last-minute garden.

"It is all very well to say that there should be no such thing," she says, "but sometimes there just has to be, or else no garden at all. And that is the time when criticism and reprimands are least bearable and help the most appreciated. So let us help, if we can.

"First of all, I would suggest that the later your start, the more definite your plan should be. Nothing is such a time-saver as a well-thought-out scheme, wherein all the work moves ahead confidently and certainly toward the desired goal. So put in a little time making your plans, and the gardening itself will go ahead much more rapidly when you are at last ready to start with it.

"When the general scheme is decided upon, it is time to consider in detail the plants with which it is to be executed—and not before. This is contrary to established custom, perhaps; but if you will go about it in this way you will find, I am sure, that it is better than deciding first what plants you will have, and then trying to arrange them harmoniously. It takes slower work than one can allow in a last-minute garden, to do this."

Trouble Entirely Disappeared

Fathers and mothers worry over a child with a chronic cough. Knudt Lee, Wannaska, Minn., writes: "For several years my daughter had a bad chronic cough. Every time she caught a little cold, it aggravated the trouble. We tried many medicines, but not until we tried Foley's Honey and Tar did anything produce any great relief. In a few days the trouble entirely disappeared and has never returned." Foley's Honey and Tar for coughs, colds, croup, whooping cough.—Jones Drug Co.

POULTRY NOTES

Neatness is the basis of profitable work with poultry. There is an excuse for dust in the henery, but not for cobwebs. A turkey hen seldom broods her poult on the same spot more than one or two nights. Don't put too many chicks with one hen or in one brooder just because it is warm weather. The result may be disastrous. For general farm purposes—that is, eggs and poultry combined—the American class of fowls offers the greatest opportunities.

SOUR MILK FOR CHICKS.

Poultry Raiser Found It Valuable In Preventing Bowel Trouble.

About two years ago I read a recommendation for using sour milk as a food for young chicks. We have experimented along that line and can truthfully say that the results have been highly satisfactory. But instead of feeding the raw clabber we scald it and make it into cheese, writes a correspondent of the Farm and Fireside. In this form it is more convenient to feed, and the chicks like it better. The beneficial effect seems to be equal to that claimed for it in clabber form.

In 1915 we fed all our young chicks the clabber cheese as a regular part of their ration until they were about three weeks old, then gradually substituted whole wheat, but continued the clabber cheese until the chicks were of good size broiler age. After that we continued an occasional feed of the clabber cheese whenever the milk supply allowed. Not for years was our success as good in raising chicks. We lost not more than one or two from bowel trouble.

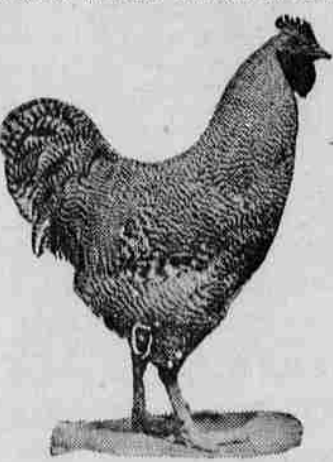

With our 1916 poultry operations we were also successful, but our losses from bowel trouble among the chicks was somewhat greater than in 1915. I believe the reason was owing to a scant supply of milk and the unusually rainy season.

It is a relief to have hit on the right idea for preventing the serious loss from bowel trouble among chicks, and we cannot speak too highly in praise of it.

MATURE HENS BETTER SITTERS THAN PULLETS

All poultrymen agree that the general purpose breeds, such as the Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds, make the best sitters. The lighter breeds, such as the Leghorns, Campines and Hamburgs, which are in reality known and classified as non-sitting varieties, are too nervous and flighty for hatching purposes and are seldom used on that account. Furthermore, they are so small and so closely feathered as compared to a Plymouth Rock, Orpington or Brahma, that they are incapable of covering a large sitting of eggs or to brood a large flock of chicks.

It is economy to set large hens, because they can cover more eggs than a small one, but this point must not be carried to the extreme of using clumsy hens. Clumsy fowls are apt to trample and kill the chicks before the little fellows are strong enough to get out of the way, or the heavy footed hens are likely to smash the eggs while moving about on the nest. The hen that is observed to leave and return to her nest with the greatest care and precision and to step lightly is the bird to select for sitting.

Older fowls usually make better sitters than pullets for the same reason that the heavier breeds are more dependable than the Mediterranean varieties. The younger fowls are naturally more high strung temperamentally and more unsophisticated.

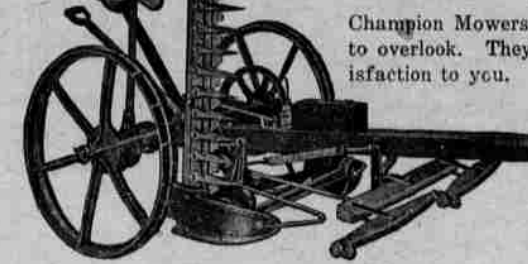

Some hens are quiet and docile and that in spite of everything you do to them they will remain on the nest with the greatest fortitude and determination. Others are wild and nervous and will take flight at the approach of the attendant. These rattle brained hens are not to be intrusted with eggs. They will make poor work of hatching, and later they will be found incompetent to manage a brood of chicks.

What the Farmer Wants

An editorial in the current issue of Farm and Fireside says

"Any insight into the agricultural mind, any index as to the direction in which we farmer folk are traveling, is always interesting. Especially is this true as regards a recent inquiry made through the board of agriculture in a corn-belt state to its crop correspondents is worthy of note. These farmer reporters—some 800 in number—were invited to suggest subjects for desirable legislation, ground of inferior seed, and especial-whether such legislation be the enactment of new laws or the amendment or repeal of existing ones.

"What did the replies reveal? Was there railing against the railroads and a cry to curb all corporations, the good and bad alike? Not so. At the head of the list is the question of roads, a demand for sensible, businesslike legislation. The next most numerous expression is for a pure seed law, designed to prevent the state from longer being the dumping ground of inferior seed, and especially seed containing the seed of noxious weeds. Third in order is the expressed desire for legislation that will afford sheepmen protection against dogs. Schools, with special stress laid upon desirable changes in rural school laws, come next. Then, following, is the plea for protection of the quail—friend of the farmer in his fight against insect pests."
