

OREGON CITY COURIER

C. W. ROBEY, Editor and Business Manager

Published Thursdays from the Courier Building, Eighth Street, and entered in the Postoffice at Oregon City, Ore., as 2nd class mail matter.

Subscription Price $1.50.

Telephones: Pacific 51; Home A-51.

MEMBER OF WILLAMETTE VALLEY EDITORIAL ASSOCIATION
MEMBER OF OREGON STATE EDITORIAL ASSOCIATIONTHIS PAPER REPRESENTED FOR FOREIGN ADVERTISING BY THE

AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

GENERAL OFFICES
NEW YORK AND CHICAGO
BRANCHES IN ALL THE PRINCIPAL CITIES

FRUIT INDUSTRY ENDANGERED

Leaders identified with the fruit industry in the northwest are very much worried concerning the influence of the war on the fruit industry. There is a possibility that the government may classify fruits as a luxury and not as a staple food product. If this is done it will mean that the labor used in the production, handling and harvesting of fruit, in the warehouses, packing houses, cold storage plants, etc., will be subject to military conscription. Already the supply of men for work in the orchards is short. Also if the government should make this ruling it will mean that it would be harder than ever to give way for other products and stand and see their fruit spoil. There is also the bare possibility that zones may be established. This will mean that the fruit produced in certain districts can be shipped only to certain zones. With the box fruit trade of the Pacific coast this would be working a tremendous hardship, because our markets are widely scattered. It would force a very large tonnage of fruit in regions where perhaps it could not be consumed.

There is a possibility that the government will fix a minimum price for farm products. If this is done it should apply to fruits as well as to other foods. If it does not the fruit grower will have to pay the high wages, taxes, etc., and have no assurance that he will secure a good market for his product, which would be an unfair discrimination.

The Fruit Growers' Agency, Inc., of Walla Walla, Wash., which is the agency established by the United States department of agriculture, recently had a meeting, and as a result telegrams were sent to all members of congress representing the states of Oregon, Washington, Montana and Idaho. Telegrams were also sent to the International Apple Shippers' Association, Western Fruit Jobbers and the California Fruit exchange.

The members of the agency realize that if the fruit should be discriminated against it will simply mean ruin to thousands of people. Fruit is a valuable food. Many people simply look upon certain staples like wheat and meat as necessary food, and deprive their diet of the value of fruits. But on the other hand, thousands of men and women have dropped meat from their daily diet and are beneficially using fruit and nuts instead. Many others are including a larger and larger proportion of fruits in their diet. Physicians are encouraging the use of more fruits. They contain very valuable acids, extracts and fibers and are rich in sugars. Some of the fruits are very rich in oils.

Fruit and nut growers should write at once to their representatives and senators, urging that no action be taken which would jeopardize the fruit and nut industry of the Pacific coast, which is destined to become one of the greatest industries of the entire United States.—C. I. Lewis, Chief, Div. of Horticulture, U. S. A.

FOR ECONOMY'S SAKE

In these days of increasing prices we sometimes hear this argument advanced: "If So-and-So didn't spend so much money for advertising they could sell cheaper."

No argument could be farther from the truth. Advertising means more sales at a lower cost, which in turn makes possible a lower selling price. You can easily see why this is true. Anything which enables a manufacturer or a merchant to sell larger quantities of a certain article makes it possible for him to buy materials in larger quantities and at a less cost—it also enables him to cut costs in every process of his business and he can sell for less.

Take a pair of shoes, for example. The little manufacturer, with an output of 50 pairs a day, who buys leather two or three rolls at a time, and his findings in proportion, could not possibly sell as cheap, for the same quality, as if he were making 5000 pairs a day. The cost of the advertising to create demand is more than absorbed by the saving in quantity buying and big production.

Apply the same thing to the local merchant. It costs him the same amount for heat, for light, for rent and for clerk hire whether his clerks are "standing around" two-thirds of the day or if they are busy every minute of the time.

His expenses are the same in either case. But if he advertises and brings more people to the store, so his clerks are busy all the time, it is very obvious that they will sell more goods, be able to buy in larger quantities and his profits will be many times greater. He can therefore afford to sell for less.

Advertising lowers selling cost for both the manufacturer and the merchant.

YOUR "HOME TOWN" PAPER

After July 1 a very large number of subscriptions to eastern publications will "expire" for the reason that any printed matter containing liquor advertisements will be barred from the United States mails in twenty-eight states, including Oregon. Such a law was enacted March 3 to become effective July 1. It was in no sense a war measure, merely co-operation by the federal government with the dry states.

In the case of weekly magazines of national circulation the probability is that all of them will issue an edition for the dry states. Some of the magazines which boast that they are still "on good terms with Uncle Sam" issue a dry states edition from which all liquor advertisements are eliminated. This is done to protect news dealers who are forbidden by state laws to sell any publication containing a liquor advertisement.

It will hardly be possible for newspapers to adopt this plan. The territory from which liquor advertisements are barred are the entire states of Alabama, Arizona, Colorado, Arkansas, Georgia, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Michigan, Mississippi, Montana, Nebraska, New Hampshire, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Carolina, South Dakota, Utah, Virginia and the large portion of Maryland, Ohio, Rhode Island and Texas.

If you are taking your "home town" paper, and it is published in any state other than those mentioned, and it prints an advertisement for any kind of intoxicating liquor, how can the publisher get it to you? Certainly not through the mails. Your only recourse is to have one of your people "back home" clip the news that will probably interest you and mail it, but be sure to give instructions to look out for a liquor advertisement on the reverse side. It would seem that the new law will automatically reduce the mail circulation of many newspapers and create numerous private clipping bureaus that will work without compensation except gratitude.—Portland Telegram.

BUSINESS SENSE

It takes business sense to make initiative valuable. And business sense comes to the employee over the lines of red tape, or custom, which constitute the nervous system of the business. The employee who cuts a red tape nerve here and knocks it there is a business sultan or destroyer—who eventually and inadvertently cuts the nerve that supplies his pay envelope.

The employee who respects and obeys his business organization red tape is the one whose interest in the organization grows until he learns the how and why of every inch of red tape. His business sense grows with his understanding and with its growth comes wisdom in knowing where and how to initiate—where to lay new red tape, beyond or across the lines of the old, short-cutting, superseding, transcending the old.

For in business organization the chief end of initiative is to lay new and better red tape for the guidance of the great body of workers.

The next most valuable person, after the one who can do the best thing without being told, is the one who can do it after being told once. In other words, the one who can follow the red tape without somebody to check after him.

"To obey is better than sacrifice," obedience is the first law of organization.

Obedience plus the will to learn why is the first law of progress, and the way, the truth and the life of that business sense without which initiative rides to many a fall.—Elizabeth Towne in June Nautilus.

SCHOOL IS OUT

School is out for the summer. Our boys and girls have spoken their pieces, made their bows and said goodbye to Teacher for four months. And what about Teacher? He or she, as the case may be, has had the training of your child's mind in charge for the last eight months. More than any other one person—yourself excepted, of course—she has shaped and influenced your child's character.

For six or seven hours each day, she has been his constant companion. Has she done a good job? Has she been conscientious and interested? Has the child grown and developed under her training? Let us hope so, and if he has, some day before Teacher goes away to spend the summer with her people, go to see her, or at least call her up and let her know that you appreciate her interest and her work. It will mean a lot to her.

McNARY SUCCEEDS LANE

Governor Withycombe has appointed Judge Charles L. McNary, chairman of the state Republican central committee, and formerly of the supreme court, to the United States senate to succeed Senator Harry Lane, who died in San Francisco last week and whose funeral was held in Portland Tuesday afternoon. The executive reached a decision the latter part of last week to appoint Judge McNary, but, out of respect to Senator Lane, deferred formal announcement of his choice until after the funeral.

LIFE AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Our Firm Democracy Has Killed Its Early "Court" Flavor.

The White House is far and away the most desirable residence to get at the national capital. It is the most personal, most picturesque of the government's possessions. Its history is the history of many of our American ideals.

In the early days of the Virginian dynasty of presidents there were "leaves" and "drawing rooms" at the White House, and it sheltered something very like a court. The court ideal dies hard. Even now the red velvet rope, which in more effete civilization separates the social sheep from the goats, is occasionally almost put into use when new administrations try to have receptions where the privileged few are allowed a brief encounter with the royal presence in the blue room, serving temporarily as a holy of holies.

The White House, as is natural, is the constant theater of the conflict to be observed everywhere in American life between our wish to have an aristocracy and our wish not to. But, on the whole, the disinterested observer must adjudge victory to our deep seated democracy, which makes it really unsuitable that the White House should ever be exactly fashionable.

We forget not only that the presidential residence is our house, but that the president in it is our man. The almost utopian democracy of public receptions at the White House is both engaging and picturesque. In the early days congressmen used to come to them with bowie knives in their high, cowhide boots, and in Jackson's time guards with stout sticks beat back the guests while the food was being fetched from the kitchens. Then an evening party had all the charm of a riot. A diplomat complained not so long ago that even at the exclusive reception for the corps the American young ladies surreptitiously cut all the buttons off his clothes for souvenirs.

Another diplomat, new to these democratic shores, arriving late for a New Year's day reception, was astonished to find that the negro hackman, who had driven him to the White House and slipped in ahead of him and was the first to grasp the president's hand! He could not understand that the executive hand is as much the people's property as the mansion. Mr. Washington did not shake hands, but since then every presidential paw has been squeezed by the populace almost beyond the power of flexed joints or massage to bring it back to anything like original shape. The shake is expected to be wholesome and hearty—even a Boston gentleman complained, under Tyler's administration, that he had caught cold from shaking the president's hand.—Harrison Rhodes in Harper's Magazine.

Swafford Given Jewel

Harold A. Swafford, who enlisted recently in Col. Cavanaugh's engineer corps for service in France and who expects orders to leave soon, was presented with a pastmaster's jewel by Multnomah lodge, No. 1, A. F. and A. M., of which he is the present master. The jewel is usually given at the expiration of a master's term, but was given to Mr. Swafford because of the fact that he may leave before his term expires.

Courier and Daily Journal—$4.75.

WOMEN AND GOLF.

Some Advice to Those Just Starting to Learn the Game.

"The grown woman who wishes to start playing golf should immediately put herself into the hands of a good professional teacher. It is far better to go to some one whose business it is to teach and who has had experience along that line than to heed the instructions of well meaning friends," according to "Golf For Women," by a Woman Golfer, quoted in the Christian Science Monitor.

"There are two sides to teaching golf—one, the ability to demonstrate clearly what should be done and the other the ability to see the pupil's faults and to correct them. . . . Once having chosen an instructor the pupil should put herself entirely under his tutelage and obey his behests as well as in her lies.

"She should not dispute with him at every point and, above all, should never say or think 'I can't.' But, on the other hand, she should not hesitate to ask any question that comes to her. . . . She should know the 'reason why' for every move she makes, and no false shame at displaying ignorance should prevent her from asking even what may seem a foolish question.

"When a woman engages the services of a professional teacher her whole . . . attention should be given to finding out everything she can in the time at her disposal. If she will do this assiduously and will practice between lessons what she has learned she will soon become well grounded in the rudiments of the game. . . . Golf is a game that requires a great deal of practice at all stages, even when one ranks as a really good player. . . .

"If one learns to stand, to hold her club, to make her swing and to time her stroke correctly she will find that she has achieved good form without being aware of it, but no one can obtain 'good form' by trying to cultivate it for its own sake. . . .

TROOPS IN CAMP.

Lines by Which They Are Protected From the Enemy.

"Security" has the same meaning in the military world as elsewhere. We properly think of the security of our persons, our property, our families, in connection with the term. In the military world the family, or community, being so much larger, the word "security" acquires additional dignity.

A body of troops in camp is protected (made secure) by the use of groups placed between the enemy and the camp. We were told by a bee expert in Arizona that a limited number of bees remained in the vicinity of the hive. They were quick to observe and resist (the two great duties of an outpost) any intruder.

We should know the names of these groups. Farthest away is the line that sees and reports what it sees, but can offer only a limited resistance. This is called the "line of observation" or the "line of outguards." In rear of the line of outguards we have larger groups placed at greater distances. These are called "supports." This is the line that fights. This is the line that makes all preparations for fighting (or resisting). It is called the "line of supports" or the "line of resistance." We have one farther and last line of groups, which is still larger and occupies still greater distances than the two we have just discussed. This is the safety valve and is called the "reserve," or the "line of reserves."—From "The Plattsbury Manual."

Early Diplomats to Turkey.

Some of the early diplomats accredited to Constantinople had unpleasant experiences even in times of peace. In 1673 the grand vizier, having intercepted some French dispatches, tried to borrow the cipher of the embassy. Delahaye, the first secretary, who refused to accede to this request, was thrown into prison, where he was bastinadoed and all his teeth were broken. Louis XIV. was then at the height of his power, yet no reprisals were made for this treatment of his representative. Until the middle of the eighteenth century the foreign envoys in Constantinople were under close supervision. They were forbidden to visit one another's houses or to meet elsewhere.

Nails and Screws.

A nail not driven entirely in and which has become so rusted that it cannot be withdrawn without breaking a hammer handle will come out easily if it is struck a smart blow first. The same holds true with a screw. If it will not turn out try turning it in first. These suggestions may not always work, but many times the trouble may be overcome by their use.—Popular Science Monthly.

Short Sermons.

Bishop Sanford Olmsted of Denver is noted for the brevity of his sermons. Congratulated at a tea on his happy quality of being brief, Bishop Olmsted smiled and said:

"One of my first pulpit discoveries was that you can't make a sermon too mortal by making it everlasting."

Always the Same.

"You see little apples and big apples, sour oranges and juicy oranges." "What are you driving at?" "The old reliable banana comes as near being standardized as any fruit nature has attempted."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Father's Definition.

Tommy—Pop, what is a glutton? Tommy's Pop—A glutton, my son, is a grown man who can eat almost as much as a small boy.—Philadelphia Record.

$100 Reward, $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages and that is catarrh. Catarrh being greatly influenced by constitutional conditions requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Medicine is taken internally and acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in the curative powers of Hall's Catarrh Medicine that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address P. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, Ohio. Sold by All Druggists, etc.

Champion

The Old Time Favorite
The Choice of the Modern Farm

MOWERS

Champion Mowers have features which you as a buyer cannot afford to overlook. They mean increased length of service and greater satisfaction to you.

Wide Substantial Yoke.
Extra large case hardened yoke pins.
Extra long case hardened wearing plates.
Extra wide and strong wrought knife head.
Extra light draft and easy of operation.
These are but a few of the reasons why a Champion is an extra good mower to buy.

RAKES

No change has been necessary in the Champion Rake for several years, which is proof that it has reached as near perfection as it is possible ever to obtain in machinery.

Reversing axle stubs, when reversed is like new.
Reversing wheel ratchets.
Removable and renewable wheel boxes.
Best quality spring steel teeth.
Sure working self dump.
Come and study the sturdy construction of the Champion Rake.

TEDDERS

The Champion Tedder has often saved its cost in a single season. One has but to see the Champion work to learn of its excellent service. It is light draft and smooth operating. No matter what you need in cutting machinery, come in and look over what we offer in the Champion. You will find no better on the market and we can make you right prices.

W. J. WILSON & CO.

OREGON CITY, ORE.

GEO. BLATCHFORD
MOLALLA, ORE.Mitchell
LEWIS & STAYER CO.
Portland
Ore.

Fighting Top of Super-Dreadnought New York CHILD WELFARE CIRCLE

TO BE ORGANIZED HERE

Photo by American Press Association.

The fighting tops of the lattice masts of the United States navy are found in no other navy. This shows one of the masts of the superdreadnought New York. The size of the tops may be judged from the number of men assembled there.

ENGINEER FINED $5

Justice of the Peace Sievers is Lenient With Two Speeders

B. W. Jones, of Portland, and D. C. Henney, former consulting engineer of the Oregon City water board, were each fined five dollars by Justice of the Peace John N. Sievers for speeding their automobiles over the county roads. Captain Cicero Hogan, of Troop A, gave bonds to appear on a similar charge today. All of the men were arrested by Motorcycle Officer H. E. Meades.

Keep Machines in Repair.

A Colorado expert reports that more than 40 per cent of farm implements examined during a May and June investigation needed repairs. And the owners admitted it. Only 16 per cent of the smoothing harrows had ever had their teeth reversed or sharpened. Some of them had been in use twenty years.

Honor Retiring Minister

As an honor testimonial to Rev. T. J. Williams, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal church, of this city, who is retiring, local lodge No. 961 of the Loyal Order of Moose attended the services in the church Sunday night in a body led by the lodge band. Rev. Williams is lieutenant governor of the junior order of Moose, members of which also attended the services.

Barton Schools Close

A Japanese program marked the closing of the Barlow schools Friday afternoon. A lengthy program was also given in the evening, when ice cream and cake were served to parents and friends of the pupils.

Admiral William B. Cagerton.

Assume New Name

L. A. Jones and C. R. Meyer have filed notice of their assumption of the firm name "Milwaukee Garage," under which they will do business henceforth.

Forecloses $1500 Mortgage
Judge J. U. Campbell ordered a foreclosure of a $1500 mortgage Thursday against C. W. Johnson, Emma Johnson, George Zipsy and the Security Savings & Trust company and B. Lee Paget in favor of D. B. Howell, administrator of the estate of Clara Zipsy.

Asks Maiden Name
Ada Everton is suing for a divorce from J. W. Everton, who she charges, deserted her in May, 1916. They were married at Grants Pass, Oregon, June 6, 1911. She asks that her maiden name, Ada Sexton, be restored to her.

Naturalization Examiner Here
Henry B. Hazzard, deputy United States naturalization examiner, was here Thursday making preliminary investigation of applicants for citizenship. Final examinations will be held June 11.

Default Judgment Entered
A default judgment has been entered against the heirs of A. F. Langley for $1,060 in favor of A. R. Johnson and T. E. Dodson, in the superior court here.

Charges Incompatibility
Mrs. Maud Barks started suit for a divorce from Ralph E. Barks in the Clackamas county court Tuesday. She charges incompatibility and that they were never suited to be married. They were married in Portland, May 15, 1912.

"Oldest, Largest and Strongest Bank in Clackamas County."Established in 1881

THOUGH OLDEST in age—it being 36 years since The Bank of Oregon City was organized—the fact that it is still by far the Largest and Strongest financial institution in Clackamas County is proof that it has always remained Young in PROGRESSIVENESS.

Will you become one of our 5,000 patrons
by opening a Savings or Checking Account here?

Resources More Than One Million Dollars

THE BANK OF OREGON CITY