THE VOTER'S OPINION OF US.

In his usual pleasing vein, C. C. Chapman, editor of The Oregon Voter, describes, in his last issue, the road meeting that was held recently by the Oregon City Commercial club. His story of the meeting was better than some we have seen. He starts this way:

"At Oregon City, the home of the bitterest opponents of the road bonding act, was held a Commercial club session which was the scene of spirited debate such as is characterizing road meetings being held in every county of the state.

"C. E. Spence of the Grange, J. D. Brown of the Farmers' union and Senator Walter A. Dimick, probably the bitterest opponents of the measure, were present, as was S. Benson, state highway commissioner, and Jay Bowerman, who drew the original bill as it was submitted to the legislature for consideration.

"The presence of Mr. Benson caused Messrs. Spence, Brown and Dimick to omit the most offensive personalities that they have been using to inflame prejudice against the senior highway commissioner, but otherwise the discussion was as lively as is usual at the meetings being held everywhere. All of the speakers were accorded close attention and were generously and impartially applauded wherever telling points were made."

Then Mr. Chapman uses some more space to tell of the speeches of Bruce Dennis, John B. Coffey, J. D. Brown, Jay Bowerman, C. E. Spence, S. Benson, William Little, H. T. McLean, Dr. H. S. Mount, Dr. L. A. Morris, Senator Dimick, Livy Stipp and V. F. Cooper. What surprises us most is the statement of Brother Spence, who told us that Oregon has the best market roads of any state in the union. We want to know. Harken to Mr. Spence:

"I am surprised at the way in which the speakers have been knocking Oregon," said C. E. Spence, Master of the State Grange, "when they run the state and its roads down so scandalously. They talk about California and Washington. Oregon has spent more money, per capita, for her roads than either one of those states. The difference is that they put their money all on the main highways and Oregon scattered it out over her market roads. Oregon has the best system of market roads of any state in the union."

The came Mr. Benson, chairman of the highway commission. Benson is a millionaire and made his own money. He has done more for the cause of good roads in Oregon than any other man. He ridiculed the idea of building laterals before the main highways. He poohpoohed the notion of "pay-as-you-go." Then he wound up this way:

"The only man that is on a cash basis now-a-days is the peanut man. Who wants to be a peanut man all his life? The man or the state that doesn't go into debt doesn't amount to much. My advice is, if you want to succeed and become a millionaire, is to go into debt; it is easy, but be sure you have a good investment when you go into debt.

"Don't let us keep on trying to lift ourselves out of the mud by the boot straps. Let us go into debt and do it in the easier and more profitable way. The farmers have to use trunk lines to get into town. No state pays as it goes and amounts to much. Any man who talks that way is not a good business man. Any man with good business judgment can succeed; all you have to do is to go into debt, judiciously, put your machine in the 'high' and let'er go Gallagher!"

Grant B. Dimick contributed his bit to the story, and he's probably right. He is quoted as follows:

"Ninety per cent of the business men of Oregon City and Clackamas county are in favor of permanently improved roads and are supporting the good roads' bonding act, according to former County Judge Grant B. Dimick, of Oregon City."

WOULD INCREASE TAXES.

Instead of bonding the state for road construction, the opponents of the bond issue are favoring what was known as the Pierce bill, providing for a millage tax of 1 1/2 mills a year to take the place of the present quarter-mill state highway tax.

Representatives of the opposition are acting in concert in praising this bill as the correct solution of Oregon's problem of state road finance, according to C. C. Chapman.

The bill was introduced during the closing days of the legislature by Senator Walter Pierce of Union county, president of the State Taxpayers' league. It passed the state senate, but was defeated in the house of representatives, on the ground that an increase of taxes would be received with such disfavor by the people that the whole roads program would go down to defeat at the special election at which it was proposed to submit the increase in connection with the bonding act.

Opponents of the bonding act express openly their purpose to defeat the act so as to make way for initiating the direct tax increase to be voted upon by the people at the general election in the fall of 1918.

This makes the issue squarely one of increased taxes as against a bonding program which involves no tax increase. The tax burden in Oregon is so intolerably heavy it is believed most of the taxpayers will prefer to bond at the expense of the auto license fees, as contemplated in the road bonding act, rather than vote a big increase of direct taxes to accomplish the same end. The people insist upon having the roads built, and the whole controversy is as to methods of financing—direct taxation or bonds based on auto license fees.

SAVE $500,000 A YEAR TAXES.

The Bean bill enacted by the legislature and up to the popular vote in Oregon June 4th, will put 3,000,000 acres railroad lands worth $40,000,000 on the state and county taxrolls.

If defeated it means that the voters of the state are in favor of relinquishing state control over this property and turn it back to the United States and enlarging federal control.

Three years back taxes are due on those lands and if the state relinquishes the right to tax and to retain its sovereignty it is very doubtful if any of those taxes due will be paid.

Federal officials have been promising for several years to pay these back taxes but have not done so, and this is the only way to force the hands of the federal government—assert the power to tax.

Some time ago the National grange asked to have a representative on the tariff commission. They indicated their desire to have a practical farmer named as their representative. We should like to have them point out which of the six members recently appointed by President Wilson is their representative.

CENTURY OLD POSITIONS.

One hundred years ago the state prisons of this country were hell-holes. The unfortunate inmates were placed in dark dungeons, clothed in striped suits, shackled to the stone wall, fed in little better than a bread and water diet and left to solitude. No helping hand was extended to them. No education was provided. No suggestion was offered to cause them to lead decent lives. They were treated like beasts and they became beasts. Upon release they preyed again upon society, without inspiration for another kind of life, with the ultimate result—their return to the prison cell.

Within the last decade conditions in many states have materially changed for the better. While penal administrators have perhaps been slow to recognize the economic evil surrounding the old system, the attention of thinking men and women became focused upon the prison situation, as it then existed. The problem of punishing for law-breaking became more and more one of economic value to the country, and gradually prison reform felt its way, until today in many states there are modern prisons, just as there are modern hospitals, and the people of these states have found that a modern well equipped prison, with plenty of light and air, with work for the inmates to do, is a paying proposition. They have also found that a modern prison is simply an economic investment that brings financial returns, as is noted in the states of Michigan and Minnesota, where the state does not appropriate a cent for the maintenance of the institutions, where convicts work and are paid wages, and where they go forth with a grubstake, and with a new view of life. The percentage of men returned to the prisons in these states is small indeed.

If the editorial writer in the Oregon City Courier had been writing one hundred years ago, he would have found many sympathizers with his position. It is evident, from a perusal of the article that appeared in the Courier in its last issue, that the writer knows nothing of the new penology and that he does not realize that the attitude he takes on the construction of a new penitentiary in Oregon is economically unsound, and that the state can make an investment that will pay.

The people of Oregon will be asked to indorse a measure at the June election appropriating $100,000 a year for four years for the establishment of a correct penological system. Every legislature is compelled to appropriate in excess of $100,000 for the maintenance of the prison, as against the system in Minnesota, where the Stillwater penitentiary is operated last year without an appropriation from any source, and paid nearly $75,000 in wages to its unfortunate inmates and also paid a net profit to the state of

COMMISSION DESIGNATES HIGHWAYS.

Irrespective of whether the state road bonds carry, Oregon will have a designated system of state roads. The designations were made formally by the State Highway commission at its session just held. The designation was required by the government as a condition to Oregon's participation in the benefits of the Shuck, Leford Act. The government representatives were present with the commission when the designations were made, and concurred in same, subject to formal approval by the authorities in Washington.

All the roads designated in the pending road building act were designated by the commission and formally adopted as part of the system of state highways. In addition to those roads, such other roads were designated as were required to make the state system more complete and fair, so as to connect all the counties with through lines of travel.

Joint work by the government and the state will proceed, even if the people fail to vote the bonds. It is expected that in the event of the failure of the state bonds, many of the counties will vote their own bonds for the sake of getting the benefit of whatever government and state funds may be available.

The funds available, it is estimated, would permit improvement of the main trunk lines in the most populous parts of the state during the five years. There would not be enough money for any paving on these. The roads to the remote sections would have to wait indefinitely. They would remain on the map as designated highways until funds were available for their improvement which might be many years, except as the counties voted the money for the principal part of the cost of improving same.

Should the bonds pass, the commission will have money to use on every designated road in every county. This would mean that every designated road in every part of the state would be put in a travelable condition during the five-year period, much of it surfaced, and from 500 to 600 miles of highway paved, as against no paving and all the current funds being expended on the trunk highways to the neglect of the roads connecting with the remote sections.

FORUM OF THE PEOPLE

LIBERAL, Ore., April 2.—(Editor Enterprise)—I own an interest in a farm of 160 acres near Liberal, Clackamas county. It is as good a farm as lays out of doors and produces most anything that river bottom land will produce, being on the Molalla river. The road leading to this farm from Liberal is anything but a good road. The Willamette Valley Southern railway and the Southern Pacific company, electric and steam lines respectively, are within 1 1/2 miles of the house, still at times only by horseback can we reach the station.

The county road leading to Molalla from Oregon City is in passable condition, still it, too, is anything but a proper kind of road for the traffic offering.

These conditions are such as to make me want good roads by any honorable method proposed.

The road bonding measure now before the people proposes to give to certain localities hard surfaced roads at state expense, but at no greater expense than at present. The bill to be voted upon by the people June 4, names the roads to get such state aid. None of these proposed roads named in the bill comes very close to Liberal, the nearest point possibly being Canby, but still I am in favor of the bond issue for the reason that some of my fellow farm owners will thereby get out of the mud. And when they get out of the mud they will be favorable later to helping my neighbors and myself get out.

I am convinced that there is only one way for me to get good roads in my district and that is to help myself get them, and, in this instance as in most others by helping my fellow in distress I will be helping myself, because the County commissioners are now spending large sums annually on the Pacific Highway to keep it in passable condition and when that road is once built of permanent material I know that there will be no more county expense on that section of road, thus leaving more money in the treasury at the command of the commissioners for construction and repairs of the other roads, one of the most important of which is the Molalla road.

Probably the only way I will ever see good roads from Liberal to the farm will be through a system of special taxes each year, but if the Molalla road gets its treatment next after the Canby road, the people around Liberal will see to it that the roads leading to the center are rebuilt.

I am for bonds and I hope to so interest all my neighbors in the proposition that this district will be on the right side when the votes are counted.

LIBERAL DIST. FARM OWNER.

April 2, Editor Enterprise:

With permanent, hard surfaced all-the-year trunk roads on both sides of the Willamette River south from Portland in Clackamas county as far as Oregon City and one such road south from Oregon City through New Era, Canby and Aurora to the county line, rural districts on both sides of the river will be benefitted when travelling to the county seat, or to Multnomah county and the metropolis, Portland, proportionately as the number of miles of such pavement is to the total miles travelled. And in addition thereto a further lasting benefit—for, when these trunk market roads are once completed, the heavy drain upon the road districts through which these trunk roads run, and upon the general fund, now necessary each year in order to make these roads passable under the heavy traffic, that money will each year be available for use on the laterals of the respective districts and from the general fund, giving in a short time what cannot now be had, a system of lateral market roads such as all have been working and praying for all these years.

The state should be charged with the building and maintenance of the state highways—the bond bill makes this obligatory upon the State Highway Commission and all that remains is for the people to order them to do so by their vote, at the same time providing the commission with the funds necessary to carry out the order of the people.

Oregon has spent millions of dollars in the past 20 years, but all we have to show for the expenditure is a system of channels better navigable by marine equipment in winter months than by vehicles intended for land—a system which can only be changed by the vote of the people, and we believe you, our reader, upon considering all the questions involved will cast your vote for the new system and for the bonds which go with it, to the end that some day, and that soon, Oregon will have a system of roads to be proud of.

General Sherman says the troops in his department have been placed in position to afford protection to the telegraph and mail lines across the plains. Troops are placed on the four principal routes of emigration. A portion of the troops will occupy garison and the remainder will be detailed as escorts and on expeditions between the ports.

On the 26th in the house Mr. Banks offered a resolution declaring that the house extends sympathy to the people of Ireland and Canada, and to all just efforts to maintain the independence of states, elevate the people and extend and perpetuate the principles of liberty. Mr. Robinson, of Illinois introduced a resolution reorganizing the belligerent rights of Ireland. It was lost by a vote of 10 to 127.

Baseball.—A number of the Clackamas Baseball club are called to meet on Tuesday evening. A delegate from the Portland club to the National convention at New York in December last, is expected by the next steamer. A club will be formed at Salem.

The Cliff House.—A friend, who has just returned from Oregon City says the Herald is elated at the accommodations found at the Cliff House in Oregon City. This establishment is near the steamboat laundry, and is far excellence the best house that has ever been established at Oregon City. When we say that it is under the supervision of Messrs. White & Rhoads, the matter is easily explained.

Flouring Mills.—There are in this county eight (if not ten) flouring mills. The first of these is the Imperial Mills at Oregon City, running six sets of burrs; second, the Standard at Milwaukie; third, Eagen's Mill or Butte Creek; fourth, including Cuttings Mill and Howard's Mill on Milk Creek; Harding's on Clear Creek; Foster's on Eagle Creek; Knowland's on Butte Creek; Dyhrman's just above Colfax. The 565,000 bushels of wheat to be annually made into flour in this county is a pretty good consideration that the closest estimates last year placed the total crop of the state at 2,500,000 bushels.

STATE GRANGE MASTER CALLED INCONSISTENT

C. E. SPENCE SCORED BY 12 DISCIPLES OF GOOD ROADS.

OREGON CITY, April 2.—(Editor of the Enterprise.)—Somebody said: "Consistency, thou art a jewel."

Mr. C. E. Spence, master of the State Grange, is credited with the statement first that "Oregon is a tax ridden people" and at another time with the statement "That Oregon should have a special state tax for four or five years of 1 1/4 mills for roads."

Now, which statement was made with his fingers crossed. One says he wants taxes reduced and the other he wants taxes increased.

His first statement was made before the legislature met. His second one after the legislature had referred to the people at a special election a bond bill for building state roads. This proposition is one which was not referred to Mr. Spence for his approval before it was passed by the legislature and is one which will build 600 miles of hard surfaced roads without one cent of expense to the taxpayers. After succeeding in carrying the legislation through 40 days of appropriation bills and providing for all state departments without increasing the state tax beyond the 6 per cent limitation, and finding a plan whereby the state can get a system of roads right away without any increased cost, then Mr. Spence comes forward and says it isn't a good plan, because it is bonds and bonds are not good—because—just because. Then he comes forward and says if the legislature had only taxed the state 1 1/4 mills per annum for four or five years they would have made it possible to get the same roads and to pay for them. But, how about the taxpayer? Did Mr. Spence forget the tax ridden state and the poor taxpayer? It would seem that he is not consistent to say the least.

No doubt there are other departments of the state that can be operated more efficiently if the system is changed. It certainly shows that the State Highway department can be more efficiently managed if in the past with the 1 1/4 mill tax we have not gotten much but surveys, while with the new system proposed and the money from the bonds we can get 600 miles of permanent roads without one cent of expense to the taxpayer. A better system.

The new State Highway commission is sworn to an economic program—"A dollars worth of road for every dollar expended," and the personnel of the commission is assurance enough to the voter that such a program will be carried out.

And, assurance is given that they will be consistent.

ED FORTUNE TO HEAD CONDON HORSE SHOW

Ed Fortune, of Oregon City, who had charge of the annual horse show of Condon, Oregon, last year, has again been appointed to take charge of the races for the coming show. This year's event is scheduled for June 6th to continue to and including June 9th. Mr. Fortune will also have charge of the horse shows that are to be "pulled off" in Washington and other sections of Oregon during the early summer, as well as at the Oregon State fair being official starter of races, and will also be in charge of the racing program of the Clackamas County Fair. Last year he was official starter of the Oregon State Fair, the Multnomah county fair held at Gresham and the Clackamas county fair held at Canby. He is one of the best posted horsemen in the Northwest.

Mr. Fortune has planned his racing program for the Condon show as follows:

First Day, June 6—220 trot, purse $125; 217 pace, purse $150; one-fourth mile run, purse $75.
Second Day, June 7—215 trot, purse $150; 216 pace, purse $150; one-half mile running race, purse $150; five-eighths mile running race, purse $100.
Noracingsgrrprgs 22sground Rat 2
Third Day, June 8—225 trotting race, purse $125; 225 pacing race, purse $125; four and one-half furlong race, purse $100; three-fourths running race, purse $100.
Fourth Day, June 9—Trotting race, purse $150 (free for all); pacing race, purse $150 (free for all); one-half mile running race, purse $150.

Pending in Oregon before the people for ratification at a special election held June 4 is a $6,000,000 bond issue for highways. In submitting this bond issue to the people, the legislature designated the highways upon which the money was to be expended, and in addition designated the roads upon which were to be expended the joint funds of the federal government and the state of Oregon for Post Roads and Forest Roads. The roads so designated are shown on the map; and way Commission, in conformity with the requirement of the United States government that each state lay its complete system of state roads before it may participate in the benefits of the Shucklford Act.

J. T. APPERSON DIES IN PARKPLACE HOME AFTER LONG ILLNESS. AGED 83

Captain J. T. Apperson, one of the most widely known and highly esteemed residents of Oregon, died at the family home at Parkplace, about one mile from this city, Tuesday at 4 o'clock, after an illness of several months. The remains are at the Holman undertaking parlors in this city, and on Thursday will be removed to the Masonic Temple, where the funeral services will be conducted at 1:30 o'clock, with the Masonic order in charge of the services. The interment will be in the Masonic plot, Mountain View cemetery.

Captain Apperson was born near Hopkinsville, Kentucky, De-held many public offices. He was state senator of Oregon from 1878 until 1880, and representative from 1889 until 1893. Previous to that time he was sheriff of Clackamas county from 1874 until 1878, serving two terms. He was a member of the board of regents of the Oregon Agricultural college, and took an active interest in the institution's affairs. Until his death he was interested in the college, having recently visited the same. He has always taken an active interest in the Oregon state fair, and was a visitor each year to the fair grounds. For some time he was president of the state board of agriculture.

Mr. Apperson was probably the oldest Mason in the northwest, also the oldest member of the I. O. O. F. lodge No. 3, and was recently presented with a handsome medal from the latter lodge for the membership of the longest standing.

He was master of Multnomah Lodge A. F. & A. M., at Oregon City, and was also a member of the Masonic Veteran association, the latter association with headember 23, 1834. With his parents, he crossed the plains by ox team in 1847, and has resided in the state since, except for a short time in California. He first made his home at what is now Fairview, and at that time there was but one settler besides the Apperson family. From Fairview he went to Portland in 1848, remaining there until 1849, and then left for California, where he resided until 1855, returning to Oregon and making his home in Clackamas county until 1860 when he went to Walla Walla, residing there for about one year he returned to take up his residence here, and engaged in farming on a small scale. During his residence in Clackamas county he quarers at San Francisco, having become a member of that organization about three years ago.

CAPTAIN J. T. APPERSON

Mr. Apperson was also interested in grange work, and was a member of Abernethy Grange at the time of his death. He was master of the grange for some time.

Mr. Apperson has always been a "booster" for the Northwest, and has been instrumental in promoting industries in the state of Oregon.

Deceased is survived by his wife, Mary A. Apperson, of Parkplace; one sister, Mrs. Elvira Fellows, who has made her home with her brother at Parkplace, for a number of years; one brother, Jacob Apperson.

THE SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS VERDICT

JUDGE CAMPBELL IS UPHELD IN SUMMERFIELD'S P. SUIT OVER GIRL'S DEATH

A supreme court decision received by Circuit Judge Campbell Monday upheld the verdict of his court on June 3, 1915, in the suit of Edward Summerfield, who lives near Canby, Oregon, against the Southern Pacific Railroad company. The verdict was against Mr. Summerfield, who had brought suit for $2999 for the death of his daughter, Alma Summerfield, who was struck by a train and killed near Canby on January 7, 1914.

Miss Summerfield was killed while walking on a railroad bridge with her sister, Rosa, aged 14 years, and Melvin Hagen, aged 18. The three saw the train approaching, and young Hagen carried the younger girl to safety, but was fatally injured when he returned for Alma Summerfield. The boy's father later received a Carnegie medal dedicated to the dead lad in honor of his bravery.

Fifty young women students in the New York Medical college and hospital for women, Nos. 17-21 West One Hundred and First street, are ready to serve the country in peace or war. (Some of them are seen in the picture.) Their determination to outline definite plans of preparedness for service was announced at the exercises with which the college's new buildings, including clinics, dispensaries and library, were opened.

If the government should need them in war they will serve under the direction of the surgeon general of the United States army, Dr. Cornelia C. Brandt, dean of the college, said.
