

SEEN FROM THE OPTIMIST'S TOWER

The Optimist plans to hike for parts unknown for a few days. Hence his remarks this week will be short and sweet.

"Misfit" Column of the Albany Daily Democrat says: "There is a big misfit in the item about the old man back east who took his first auto ride this week; though 90 years of age, he was killed the first and last time."

Candidly the Optimist always supposed that a cat was the only animal that had more than one life. But here was a man who was unfortunate enough to be killed for the first and last time. The Ford must have gotten all his nine lives at once.

Which reminds us that the following announcement appeared years ago in an Eastern paper:

"Lost, a cow, by an old woman, with brass knobs on her horns."

The following was a more recent advertisement:

Mr. Editor: I desire to thank the friends and neighbors most heartily in this manner for their cooperation during the illness and death of my late husband, who escaped from me by the hand of death last Saturday. To my friends and all who contributed towards making the last minutes enjoyable and the funeral a success, I desire to remember most kindly, hoping that these few lines will find them enjoying the same blessing. I have also a good milk cow and a roan gelding horse eight years old which I shall sell cheap. God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform. He plants his footsteps on the sea and rides upon the storm. Also black and white short cheap.

Mrs. Samantha Muggins.

Another clipping from the Albany Democrat reads:

"George Sanders and family and Alton Coates and family have returned from an outing over on the ocean. They got two deer."

The scribe forgot to state whether they captured them with hook and line or harpooned them. Those deer must be of the same variety as the two hatched out in the McKenzie fish hatchery, of which mention was recently made in this column.

Some enterprising citizens want to know of the district attorney if it would be breaking the law to ship in a carload of grapes, make them up into unfertilized juice, then allow them to ferment. The scripture gives us two or three precedents. If I remember aright, an old customer collected a lot of gold, made the mould of a calf, melted the metal and poured it into the mould. To his surprise it came out a calf. When the leader brought him up on the carpet for leading the people into idolatry, he excused himself by saying that all he did was to prepare the mould, melt the gold and pour it in, and the measly stuff actually was perverse enough to come out a calf.

Again, a certain man of Galilee had a bunch of pupils. One of them went to the ward bosses, who were lying for this man, and said:

"Give me thirty bones and I'll show you where you can find this man. I'll go up and kiss him when I see him, and of course I'll not be to blame if anyone sees me show my love for my teacher."

He got the tin and carried out the program. Of course Judas Iscariot was not to blame for the arrest and slaying of Jesus. We are ready to acknowledge that he was no bigger hypocrite than the old soak who is willing to plan to make intoxicating wine to satisfy the craving to which he is a slave, but who thinks that because the process of "ripening" may take a little longer in the cellar than it would in a "winery," that he is evading the law. He deserves to be fined twice—once for breaking the prohibition law and once for being a hypocrite.

"Whatsoever a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Why will men call themselves good citizens and yet seek to evade the law. Optimist thinks that the man who makes illicit wine in such a way as to evade the letter of the law is just a shade worse than the church that erects its edifice with doors that swing inward instead of outward and that puts chairs in its aisles; and is only about ten degrees better than the church organization which goes into secular business, gets rich upon the profits, but uses its sacred calling to avoid paying the state taxes. Maybe I am wrong—but I believe—every church—should pay taxes—on every bit of real-estate it owns.

Optimist is a little old fashioned, maybe. He thinks that all church property should be taxed. Why not? The Bible is not allowed in the schools. That would be union of church and state. Why then is it not union of church and state for some religious bunch to dip their hands into the state treasury and help themselves to money paid in by people who would not directly give them a cent for their cause, even if their lives depended upon it? Any church that cannot get along without grafting on the state should die anyway. There are too many churches as it is, and the law of survival of the fittest is a law of God, and should have full play in Ecclesiastical matters. There is no great church that will not do better by leaving the state alone, and traveling on its own trolley.

"The June bug comes in early June. The lightning bug in May: The bedbug takes his bonnet off And says: 'I've come to stay.'"

"The June bug has a wing of gauze, The lightning bug, a flame. The bed-bug has no wing at all, But he gets there just the same."

Divorce Court Turns Out One Finished Product in Week

Four couples came to the bat in the divorce court game this week in petitions filed in Circuit Judge Campbell's court. As usual, they have various reasons for not liking the business of life in a double harness and would relieve themselves of the yoke of matrimony where divorces come at so many-for-a-dollar. Only one divorce decree was signed this week by Judge Campbell.

On Friday Claire W. Buchanan made known to the world that she and her hubby, F. G. Buchanan, found life together a horrid nightmare rather than a pretty dream. They were married in Benton county on August 8, 1909 and have no children or property rights to entangle in the meshes of the law that will separate them. She alleges in the complaint filed that Mr. Buchanan often told her that he had no love for her and he has treated her in a cold manner for some time.

It might have been perfectly within the bounds of married rights and righteousness for Orie J. Haworth to slap Grace M. Haworth so hard that the blow knocked her down, and to repeat the measure three times, or as rapidly as she could rise from the floor—and all before members of her family. If it was right Grace didn't think so and she lays stress upon this point in the complaint which she filed on Saturday. The couple was married on Saturday on July 18, 1910, and Orie's treatment became so unloving that Grace had to leave home in February, 1911. There are no children nor properties and she wants to resume her maiden name, Grace M. Morey.

Ora B. Eckles enters the game and in a complaint filed yesterday seeks to have William Eckles counted out. This couple tied the matrimonial knot at this place the day the connubial knot at this place tied the connubial knot at this place. They were married on July 12, 1915, when the defendant deserted his wife.

The complaint filed late Wednesday by Catherine E. Fischer against William F. Fischer is noted elsewhere in this issue.

Judge Campbell signed a decree this week separating Pearl Mary Bonness from John Robert Bonness upon complaint filed by the former some weeks ago. The case went by default.

Squadron to Start

The flying squadron, talking in the interest of tax limitation, and rural credits, ex-Governor Oswald West, Robert E. Smith and Charles E. Spence, head of the state grange, will start a 10-day campaign in eastern and southern Oregon September 14. Their first stop will be at Roseburg, and the way will be through Medford, Klamath Falls and as far east as Pendleton. The trip will be made by automobile.

We saw a fly spit on his fists and rub them together that he was washing himself. Now we know better. We watched one on the wall the other day. First he gathered a wad of typhoid, or some such microbes, into his fists, and rolled them up ready for action, then with a fenshish leer in his off eye he made for the butter. But we coralled him with a swatter before he succeeded in planting them there. Some think all evil is caused by wrong thoughts. Possibly that is true. If a good thought kills a bad one we sincerely wish some one would get busy on the fly proposition right away.

Did you ever sit in a barber's chair with your mouth full of lather watching some galoot try to give away your panama hat?

SURPRISE CREAM.—Use for this a cup of any sort of canned fruit. If of the larger varieties, like peaches, chop. Add the whites of five eggs, unbeaten, a cupful of water or juice from the fruit and two cupfuls of sugar. Add half the sugar and taste and add the other cupful sparingly, as some fruits are so sweet that they do not need so much sweetening. Turn into the freezer and freeze. Serve with fresh sponge cake.

Coffee Souffle.—Mix together four egg yolks, a cupful of sirup—made by boiling together equal parts of sugar and water four minutes—two whole eggs, a small cupful of black coffee and a pinch of salt. Heat over hot water, beating with an egg whisk until it has reached the consistency of mufin batter. Have ready half an ounce of gelatin soaked in cold water and dissolved in a little hot water. Strain into the cooked mixture, pour into a mold and pack in ice and salt for three hours.

Orange Ice Cream.—Boil for twenty minutes a cupful of water, the juice of three oranges and a cupful and a half of sugar. Beat the yolks of four eggs until creamy and lemon color and slowly pour over them, beating all the time, as you would for bliscuit tortoni, the hot sirup. Add a pinch of salt and beat over hot water on the fire for three minutes. Then remove from the fire and beat until cool. Then add three cupfuls of rich cream and freeze.

Strawberry Ice Cream.—For strawberry ice cream boil together two cupfuls of sugar and four of water for half an hour. Then add two quarts of strawberries and cook for a quarter of an hour longer. Freeze, and when the dasher is removed fold in a pint of whipped cream.

Strawberry Pudding.—Strawberry pudding is a more elaborate strawberry frozen dessert, but is really worth the trouble. To make it, heat a pint of milk, add an ounce and a half—three tablespoonsful—of sugar, a piece of stick cinnamon and a few shreds of lemon peel and then the beaten yolks of four eggs. Cook until smooth and thick and strain into a cold dish. Cool and add a quart of strawberries mixed with half a cupful of sugar and rubbed through a sieve. Freeze in a ring mold and turn out on a dish and fill the center with fresh, slightly sweetened strawberries. Or else freeze and serve in dessert glasses, with a few ripe, large strawberries in each glass.

Judge Bagley of Hillsboro Will Occupy Bench for One Day

The circuit court docket for September is heavy with cases to be heard in J. U. Campbell's court. For three days, September 21, 22 and 23, the calendar is empty, for at that time Judge Campbell plans to accompany a party to the Round-up at Pendleton.

A suit brought against Clackamas county will be heard on September 18 by Judge Bagley of Hillsboro, but at other court sessions Judge Campbell will preside. Cases have not been set for October.

Three hearings are set for September 5, the first day of the term, and all cases are listed as follows:

FAIR OCTOBER 4, 5, 6

Event at Estacada Will Be Aided by the County

The annual East Clackamas fair will be held this year October 4, 5 and 6. The directors of the association expect a more successful fair at Estacada this year than in any year in the history of the organization.

Prizes of several hundred dollars in cash have been offered by the P. R. L. & P. company, the Portland Union Stockyards company, Judge Grant B. Dimick, the Columbia Supply company and others.

The county appropriated $500 this year for the fair, which will aid the directors in financing the enterprise. The feature will be the juvenile hog judging contest open to boys and girls under the age of 15 years, who are not graduates from any agricultural course.

Experiments at the Forest Products laboratory at Madison, Wisconsin, have resulted in the discovery of a method whereby the yields of alcohol and acetate of lime from the destructive distillation of hardwoods have been increased fifteen per cent.

30,000 TROUT PLANTED

Railway Company Cooperates With State and Forest Service

Thirty thousand steelhead fingerlings, from the state rearing ponds at Bull Run, have just been placed in five different lakes in the Mt. Hood and Mt. Jefferson regions, on the Oregon National forest. This difficult work was done by the state of Oregon, the Forest service, and the P. R. L. & P. company in cooperation, and required seven days to complete.

An auto truck, furnished by the P. R. L. & P. company, and driven by O. C. Graves, covered the 250 miles in making the trip from Portland to the accessible points nearest the lakes. Fifteen thousand of the fish were carried in the first load to the end of the road sixty miles from Bull Run. This point was reached at eleven o'clock at night. This was the first time an auto truck ever made the 32-mile trip between Government camp and Clackamas lake. Here the fish were held over night, constantly attended by four men, who kept the water thoroughly aerated. The next morning the cans were placed on fourteen pack animals, in charge of Rangers Dee Wright, Joe Graham, and Hiram A. Wilcox, and conveyed the 24 miles to lakes Monan and Olallie, where the fish were placed in the water. No stops were made on this trip. These lakes belong to a group of 36 lakes in the Mt. Jefferson region, and can be seen from the summit of Olallie mountain.

The truck returned to Bull Run and secured another load of 15,000 fingerlings, which were taken by truck as far as Government camp, which is at the base of Mt. Hood, where they were transferred to the waiting forest service pack train in charge of Rangers Wright and Wilcox. Forty-five minutes later 12,000 of these fish were released in the waters of Mirror lake, 2,500 were placed in Mud lake and 500 in Veda lake.

The waters stocked with these trout are not reached directly or indirectly by the railway company's lines. A desire to cooperate in upbuilding the game fish resources of the state of Oregon was its only motive in furnishing assistance. Besides the forest officers and Mr. Graves already mentioned, W. H. Patton of the power company helped plant these fish.

This fish planting operation is one of a series of cooperative plans which are being carried out by the state and forest service officials.

Divorce Sought by Woman Who Alleges Brutal Experience

Left to her fate by her husband while in a pasture with a vicious bull and with a wish by him that the bull would kill her, was the experience of Catherine E. Fischer, according to a prayer for divorce from William F. Fischer, which she filed in the circuit court late yesterday.

The couple was married at Vancouver, Wash., on September 14, 1915, and the complaint alleges, the husband has been guilty of all manner of cruel and inhuman action toward the plaintiff. He has struck her and beaten her, called her foul names, choked her, threatened to kill her and induced neighbors to assault her and do her bodily harm.

Fischer is alleged to have asked neighbors to beat his wife and has watched the proceeding without interference. He helped a small boy who had come from an aid society to live with them, to beat the woman on one occasion. Mrs. Fischer asks $2500 permanent alimony and $250 court fees. She states that Fischer has property and livestock valued at about $14,000.

On one occasion the husband took his wife to a pasture where he kept a bull known to be vicious. Here he left her to the mercy of the animal in spite of her pleadings. When he found her at home later he said he had hoped the animal had killed her.

COOVERT ENDORSED

Multnomah Delegation Uses Steam Roller for Candidate

At a meeting of the Republican County Central committees of Clackamas, Multnomah and Columbia counties, held at Portland on Tuesday evening, endorsement was given to the state senatorial candidacy of E. E. Coovert, attorney for S. Benson, the Portland millionaire.

The central committee of Clackamas county's republican party attended the meeting which was called for the purpose of designating the party's choice of a successor to George M. McBride, who resigned from the senate to become a candidate for county judge in Multnomah county. Coovert's supporters absolutely dominated the meeting, say Clackamas county republicans, and other candidates stood no chance at all against the numbers representing the metropolitan commonwealth. H. A. Lewis of Russellville and Dr. H. M. Patton of Portland were candidates for endorsement. The former received 14 votes while Coovert received 258. It is understood that Lewis will remain in the race in spite of this vote.

George Swafford of Oregon City was chairman of the joint central committee.

Lizzie Beard Sued

Lizzie Beard is defendant to a suit started in the circuit court on Friday by Ralph E. Maloney in which he asks for $500 damages from Lizzie Beard for the alienation of the affections of his wife, Mrs. Clara B. Maloney. The defendant, Maloney alleges, induced his wife to leave their California home and to come to this state to live. This took Mrs. Maloney away from her husband and the Beard woman, says the complaint, has so poisoned Mrs. Maloney's mind against her husband that she no longer loves him and refuses to return to his home. Maloney also asks for costs and disbursements of the action.

STRIKE ORDER ON

Trainmen Refuse to Heed President Wilson's Requests

"No power under heaven, short of a satisfactory settlement by the railroad, can prevent the railroad men from striking Labor day," W. G. Lee, trainmen leader, declared Wednesday after talking with Secretary of Labor Wilson.

President Wilson yesterday was exerting every effort to secure from the railroad brotherhood leaders a withdrawal of their strike order, effective September 4.

Believing that congress is certain to pass legislation such as the brotherhoods are demanding, administration officials have pointed out the trainmen would have nothing to gain by striking and everything to lose. In fact, they say, if the men carry out their strike orders while congress is actually debating on measures favorable to labor, there would be a tremendous reaction in the country against the union men that might turn the entire trend of events.

Thus far, however, the brotherhoods have indicated no intention of rescinding their strike orders.

It is the hope and belief of administration officials that, following the president's action of Tuesday, there will be an immediate response from the country, urging delay of any strike action by the employees until congress has had time to pass the legislation before it.

The railroad strike, tying up every piece of rolling stock in the country, will be in effect Monday, brotherhood men said. The order includes every brotherhood man in the United States, both in passenger and in freight traffic.

While the freight men are the only ones making demands, the passenger men are included in the strike order. The reason that they also did not make demands is that the eight hour day now applies to passenger service, while the pay is based on mileage, or, on the slow trains, on a monthly guarantee.

The unions have decided formally that President Wilson's legislative program will not alter their determination to strike; prominent brotherhood men reiterated today that only railroad acceptance of the eight hour day, 10 hour pay proposal, can head off the tie-up.

Asked if he had been definitely requested to postpone the strike, A. B. Garretson, head of the trainmen, replied: "We have not," and gave the same answer to a question as to whether he had postponed the strike.

TAX MONEY COMES

Deputy Harrington Urges Payers to Bring Receipts for First Half

A new system of receipting for tax payments in the tax department of the sheriff's office relieves the force therein of a great amount of work in connection with collection of the second-half payments, and is also a great time-saver for taxpayers. The system eliminates the necessity of writing out a full receipt at the time the second half tax is paid.

When the first half tax was paid this year receipts were issued and when the second half is paid the payment must be accompanied by this receipt. The second payment is receipted on the same paper, and makes it possible for Deputy George Harrington and his helpers to keep a much better account of the payments. It also aids the taxpayer because of the fact that the collectors can accept payment and make out a receipt in a fraction of the time formerly required, and the wants of many times more people can be attended to in a given time.

Deputy Harrington urges taxpayers who come to his office with the second half taxes to bring the receipt for the first half payment. By remembering the receipt for the first half payers will save themselves and the deputies a great deal of time and trouble.

Tax payments for the second half are coming in already and, although collections have not been large, they are increasing each day. October 5 is the last day on which last half taxes can be paid without also paying interest and penalty for delay. But, whether or not the tax is paid before the time limit, the first half receipt must be brought to the deputy's office.

WANT PENALTY

Water Board Members Find Many Who Break Rules

A penalty for residents who do not obey the rules of the board of water commissioners is to be embodied in an ordinance which the Oregon City council will soon be asked to pass in behalf of the board, according to a statement made this week by members of the board.

Many complaints have been made to the board and many evidences of disobedience to the rules have been discovered by members of the board this summer. Householders allow their water to run all night in many cases and the faucet in the kitchen sink pours a steady stream in many homes. This uses a great amount of water that should be saved in the city reservoirs, and to correct it the board must have a penalty provided for the infraction of rules. Superintendent McCausland has found nearly 100 people to have broken the rules of the board within the past week. The only penalty provided at present is that the water may be shut off if rules are not lived up to. The householders must pay $1 to have water service after it has been suspended for such a cause.

Toozie-Cardridge Case

Attorneys for F. J. Toozie, city school superintendent, argued a motion to strike out the answer of Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Cardridge in the $20,000 damage action against them, in the circuit court here on Monday afternoon. Judge Campbell has taken the case under advisement and will probably render a decision early next week.
