FARMS TOO SMALL

Ignorance of Settlers and Small Farms Blamed for Living Costs
Clackamas, Ore., Rt. 1, Feb. 4, 1917.
Editor Courier:

The high cost of living is surely a "grim tormentor" which all have to face. And it takes a little courage, a little forethought, some hard work and an abundance of common sense to face the greedy monster and overpower him with a "plenty."

One cause of the high cost of living is a shortage of crops, and another cause which is becoming dangerous is this constant abuse of the land holder or rather the cutting large farms up into small tracts and selling the same to people who do not understand farming and who would find it difficult to make a living on a large farm and pay the taxes.

The old lawmakers did not think one hundred and sixty acres too much for a man to support a family on. But some of our high school graduates who know but little about farming—or anything else that takes any hard work—took it on themselves to do settlement work. They have little idea what it takes to clear up a ranch; the hard work and the cost they know nothing about. But you constantly hear them calling the man with a large farm a "land hog," and many other names which would suit their own case better, as a hog is not supposed to have any brain, but has a habit of sticking his nose into most anything which he chances to run across, regardless of the damage he may do. So it is with some of these high school graduates who try to do settlement work. In a few localities two acres for truck gardening would be enough, but where a country is thickly populated it is the large farms that supply the markets. Along the Columbia river a fisherman can live on five or ten acres if he catches fish enough to pay expenses. So it is in other sections of the state. The law allows every farmer 160 acres. Now, Mr. High School Graduate, let us hear what you know about settlement work and the high cost of living.

MRS. VIOLA BURR.

A Seventy-Year Old Couple

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Carpenter, Harrisburg, Pa., suffered from kidney trouble. He says: "My wife and I suffered from kidney trouble and had rheumatic pains all through the body. The first few doses of Foley Kidney Pills relieved us, and five bottles entirely cured us. Although we are both in the seventies, we are as vigorous as we were thirty years ago." Foley Kidney Pills stop sleep-disturbing bladder weakness, backache, rheumatism, swollen joints.—Jones Drug Co.

FIVE ARE GRADUATED

Normal School Class Numbers 45. Large Demand for Teachers

Of a class of 45 students, who were graduated at the Monmouth State Normal school last week, five were Clackamas county young women. The class set a precedent in numbers for mid-year graduates at the Normal school. No exercises were held because of a faculty ruling that ceremonies at the mid-year would interfere with school work. There has been an emphatic demand for public school teachers this year, says President Ackerman, and some of the graduates have already started work as relief teachers. The attendance at the normal school has shown an increase of 2 per cent for the year, and it is certain that when the next school year opens at Monmouth 200 of those who were graduated with the 1917 class will be teaching.

The Clackamas county girls who finished their studies with the mid-year class this year are: Clara Ruth, Canby; Hazel Kerr, Oregon City; Ada Mass, Oregon City; Flossie Pierce, Clackamas, and Carmen Schmidt, Oregon City.

Woodward Quits

After more than four years of service as night policeman, George Woodward did not work Thursday night. Family objection caused the well-known officer to discontinue night work, and with his resignation Lee French, for many years a member of the force, left his position as operator of the municipal elevator to take up Mr. Woodward's duties. Both Mr. Woodward and Mr. French are deputy sheriffs, although Mr. Woodward will no longer be active as such.

RUSE OF A CHINAMAN.

Clever Way He Got Around the Law and Gained His Case.

A cemetery is the one sacred spot in China. To desecrate such a place is the worst of crimes. Some years since there lived in a village on the plain of the Yellow river a man called Tu. His little farm furnished him with a comfortable living, but nothing more. Like all farms in that part of China, there was no fence to separate his fields from those of his neighbors. One of these neighbors was a rascal, who, knowing Mr. Tu to be of mild disposition, resolved to impose upon him by plowing a few furrows of Mr. Tu's land and thus incorporating it with his own. This act did not pass unobserved, but Mr. Tu was cautious as well as mild. He knew that litigation came high and was uncertain. "Better," he said to himself, "to endure the wrong than to suffer loss of both land and money."

The next year the neighbor repeated the experiment and plowed up a few more furrows. Again Mr. Tu consulted with himself and determined, as previously, that law was too expensive a luxury for him.

The neighbor, encouraged by this complaisance, continued to add to his own acres at the other's expense. At length he became so bold as to incorporate in this way the family cemetery, where were buried Mr. Tu's ancestors.

Then Mr. Tu saw the chance for which he had been waiting. By plowing up this cemetery the neighbor had committed sacrilege. The only difficulty was that the punishment was so severe that it might not be possible, unless he was careful, to get his neighbor punished at all. For the law was that if the magistrate should take notice of the suit he would have to send up a report to his superiors at the capital of the province and request that proper punishment be inflicted upon himself, seeing that so heinous a crime had been committed in the district for which he was responsible.

Accordingly Mr. Tu brought the matter before the magistrate in a way that did not involve that official. He brought accusation against his father, who was dead, for having moved his grave off his son's land to that of the encroaching neighbor instead of abiding in the cemetery where he properly belonged!

The Chinese love humor and greatly admire shrewdness. When, therefore, the magistrate read this amazing document he smiled with genuine appreciation of Mr. Tu's cleverness, called up the offending neighbor, made him restore all the land he had appropriated and punished him with due severity for his robbery.—Youth's Companion.

Effective Danger Sign.

A contractor who has observed that pedestrians pay little attention to signs has evolved a new plan to guard against accidents to "innocent bystanders." A steam shovel working many feet below the surface of the street attracts scores of persons daily. They stop, lean over the board railing around the excavation and stare. Sometimes the crowd gets so large that there is danger of the railing giving way and plunging them into the excavation. "Danger" signs don't worry them; hence the new idea of the contractor. He has smeared the top of the railing with tar and grease. Now persons who never shudder at the "danger" sign flee from the greasy menace as if it were poison.—Philadelphia North American.

Fanny Crosby's Memory.

The blind hymn writer, Fanny Crosby, who immortalized herself with "Safe In the Arms of Jesus," was capable of the most amazing exhibitions of "inability to forget."

On one occasion she contracted to supply a publisher with ninety hymns. She composed forty-five of these, simply storing them in her memory without committing a word to paper. When she had finished the forty-fifth she began to dictate them, going right through without a pause. She then did the same with the other forty-five.—London Answers.

To Prevent Draft.

To keep windows open and yet feel no draft while sleeping, take an old sheet or a piece of cloth as long as the bed and about a yard and a half wide. Fasten a loop of tape or elastic to the corners of one lengthwise edge, loop over the posts at the head and foot of bed on side next to the window and you have a screen that will keep off all draft, but still give plenty of fresh air.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Ma Enters the Game.

"What do you want, ma?" "You must go to the grocery store at once and get a pound of butter." "But, ma, we're playin' war, an' I'm leadin' our army against the enemy." "Never mind. Play the commissary department has been shot to pieces and go after that butter."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Forever at Him.

Newitt—Fanny! I always associate your wife with a certain episode in my own life. There's just one thing she always reminds me of.—Honeck—I wish I could say that. There's lots of things she always reminds me of.—Philadelphia Press.

Impediments.

Floorwalker—Good morning. You wish to do some shopping, I presume. Bride (with hubby)—Yes. Floorwalker—Step up to the smoking room and the boy there will give you a check for your husband.—Exchange.

TEN NEW CITIZENS

Naturalization Application Cries to Clerk, "Mein Gott, No!"

A German citizen who cast his fortunes with the land of the free in 1910 when he arrived at Astoria aboard a merchantman, which he left when he was injured, presented himself in the county clerk's office Monday morning to petition for his final papers of naturalization. He was advised that his petition could not be accepted until his certificate of arrival was obtained from Washington. Mourning because he would have to wait still longer to be a full-fledged citizen, the applicant was asked if he would fight with the fatherland in case of trouble with the United States.

"Oh, mein Gott, no!" he exclaimed. Ten new citizens swore their allegiance to the stars and stripes on Monday. The dean of the group G. R. H. Miller, native of England and 84 years old. He is all American and all behind President Wilson, Mr. Miller says. The eight men admitted to citizenship are: Carl Schandt, Germany; Joseph Chulic, Austria; G. R. H. Miller, William Lawson, Henry J. Bigger, James Garvin Hamilton, England; Carl A. Johanson, Carl Henning Bergman, Johan Ekerson, Sweden, and William W. Laurie, Canada.

State fair. Mrs. Braden is the first woman to be honored with this position.

"The appointment came unsolicited," said Mrs. Braden, in discussing the subject. "Although I have received congratulatory letters from several commercial clubs over the state, I feel that it is the support of the people of Polk county that will enable me to make good. If they reward for my work as secretary of continue to have confidence in me, I hope to succeed. I have found my the Commercial club and as superintendent of the Polk County Fair association in the results obtained and shall bear the same attitude toward my new position."
