RECLAIMING THE HOME

(By Cecil Stark)

In this period of convulsion and reformation, we are slowly beginning to learn that reformative work to be most effective must go back to the sources of prevailing weakness and decay instead of juggling with the products of wrong methods used in the institutions of a people. However, we have yet to be convinced of the fact that the fountain head of all institutions, whether industrial, social, religious or governmental, is the home life of a people. It is there that the heaven of sweetness and purity must be set working. When the home life of a people begins to decay, then the society of a people begins to decay; and when the society begins to decay, then the nation begins to decay. Therefore, in order to save our nation and to make it strong and virile from within, we must purify it from within, burning the flame of purity upon the altars of our homes. We must reclaim the homes of our nation in order to save our nation.

It is during the formation period of life that the virtues and vices get their hold on the individual. Therefore, the home should be an attractive, wholesome place, so fulfilling its mission as an institution that all other institutions springing from it would be permeated with truth, wisdom and love. It is because these conditions do not generally exist that we must talk about reclaiming the homes of our nation.

The great fields to be reclaimed are the homes of the poor and the rich, which we find largely in our cities.

In the poorer families, the reclaiming must be almost altogether a matter of education. They come from countries where the home relations are lax. It is with the children that the reformer must begin to work. Our social settlements are doing this in the minds of these people, and by giving them ideals of right living.

The homes of the rich, which perhaps confront us with a greater problem, must be reclaimed by conviction—the conviction of their failure to contribute their share of responsibility to the social mass; the conviction that their lives, steeped in luxury and extravagance, are making stagnant the clear, refreshing waters of wholesome, clean living.

I have in mind a rich family in a suburb of Chicago in which material conditions are ideal for a beautiful home life, but the spirit and ideals are not there. The mother and father are selfishly ambitious for their children, expressing their love for them by satisfying all their desires and making life as easy as possible for them. The mother realizes that her children are lacking in true manly and womanly qualities, and yet she is too indolent to exert herself to enforce those things which would give strength of character. She openly admitted that it was too much trouble to see that her daughter carry little home responsibilities. The daughter is blasé at fifteen. A caretaker is employed to do the work the boys should be doing, while they are loafing or running at large in an automobile.

Living near this family, in the same suburb, is another family that has built a true home. Each child has daily tasks to perform, and the mother is never too absorbed in outside things to see that these tasks are done. The boy is kept busy outside of school hours, tending the furnace, the garden or lawn. The daughter is the mother's first lieutenant in the housekeeping. Their amusements are carefully chosen and temperately indulged in. The parents are companions to the children in their work and in their play. Each member of the family is contributing his share to the maintenance of that institution and furthermore, the parents are making home-keeping their business, and not a side issue. Now you may tell which family is producing the strong social unit.

You ask, "Is it possible that all the homes need reclaiming?" No. We find one valley in land now fast drying up, and in that valley are the homes of the middle class. Here the fathers and mothers are reigning in homes built on the foundation of love. Here they are kept too busy providing the necessities of life and instilling the principles of right into their children to let the vitiating elements of social evil creep in. The children have their share in maintaining the family institution—the boys are growing to be strong men, the girls are learning to be home-keepers. Even in the valley of the middle class we find the cacti of luxury, vitiating amusements and sloth gradually crowding out the golden grain of womanhood and manhood.

Some one is asking, "What is the effect of the woman's suffrage movement on the homes of America?" The anti-suffragists immediately answer that woman's suffrage is most detrimental to that most sacred of all institutions, the home. But this could hardly be said to be true when most of the suffrage leaders are women of fifty years and more who have reared their families to the age where they can care for themselves. They are women who realize the worth of pure home life to that extent that they have it upon their hearts to bring about conditions which will help to educate those families without ideals, and help convict those people who have lost sight of home ideals in living lives of luxury and selfishness, convict them of their duties and responsibilities. The sincere suffragists are seeking to reclaim the homes of the land.

A difficulty which presents a much graver problem than suffrage could ever present is that of woman in the commercial world. Woman's true sphere is not the commercial world but the home. We all know this, and yet the facts face us—she is there, and for reasons that involve us in lengthy discussions. The industrial world has edged itself into so many different phases of our life that, directly and indirectly, it has affected the home and other institutions. Better industrial conditions will improve home conditions and the reclamation of the home must improve industrial conditions.

Domestic storms, broken homes and divorce suits follow in the wake of ignorance, irresponsible, indulgent and luxurious living. Rome fell when her people reached this condition. Shall we repeat her story? Or shall we stop the flow of loose living? The homes of the future must be freed from these things and this can be done only by reclaiming the home-makers of the future. Upon your children and your children's children rest the homes of the future. Will you reclaim your home before it is too late for your children to reclaim theirs?

Our nation is dying, while we are busy in the valley with the ambulance. Let us be busy at the top of the cliff, building fences whose pickets are pure, sweet homes, where noble fathers and mothers are giving earnest, responsive God-fearing children to the world, which shall make our nation a nation among nations, its homes reclaimed for humanity and God—Child Betterment and Social Welfare.

Convention Saturday

A county convention of Rebekah lodges will be held at Molalla on Saturday with Oregon City, Gladstone, Milwaukie and Clackamas lodges attending as guests of the Oak lodge of Molalla. The Oregon City lodge, second oldest in the state, will be represented by 50 delegates. Grand lodge officers will be present, and Mrs. Nellie Watenburg of Klamath Falls, president of the assembly, will preside. The convention will be opened on Saturday morning by Mrs. James Shannon, chairman of the Molalla lodge. A dinner will be served at the noon hour, the afternoon will be devoted to business and the evening will be devoted to lodge work.

More About Dimick

For congress, to succeed Hawley in the event he throws his hat into the senatorial ring, the one man most discussed is State Senator Walter A. Dimick of Oregon City. His abilities make him a formidable possibility. Senator C. L. Hawley is a constructive man, and if a candidate for congress would give the destructive Dimick a hard race.

Among the democrats, Senator Garland, Oswald West, L. J. Simpson of North Bend, R. B. Mantague of Portland and Judge Bennett of The Dalles are mentioned for governor.—The Oregon Voter.

Summons
In the Circuit Court of the State of Oregon, for the County of Clackamas.

Sadie Althouse, Plaintiff,

vs.
Howard Althouse, Defendant.

To Howard Althouse, the above named Defendant:

In the name of the State of Oregon you are hereby required to appear and answer the complaint filed against you in the above-entitled suit, on or before the 29th day of March, 1917, said date being the expiration of six weeks from the first publication of this summons, and if you fail to appear or answer said complaint, or want thereof the plaintiff will apply to the court for the relief prayed for in her complaint, to-wit:

For a decree dissolving the marriage contract now existing between plaintiff and defendant, for the care and custody of Kenneth Althouse, the minor child of the plaintiff and defendant, and for such other and further relief as to the Court may seem meet and just. This summons is published by order of Hon. J. U. Campbell, judge of the Circuit Court, which order was made on the 14th day of February, 1917, and the time prescribed for publication thereof is six weeks, beginning with the issue dated Thursday, February 15th, 1917, and continuing each week thereafter to and including Thursday, March 29th, 1917.

JOHN N. SIEVERS,
Attorney for Plaintiff,
Oregon City, Oregon.

Miss Evadne Harrison Becomes Member of Mask and Dagger

Miss Evadne Harrison, a student at the Oregon Agricultural college, has been admitted to membership in the Mask and Dagger, an exclusive campus dramatic society to which membership is gained through tryout. Miss Harrison is one of 15 who won membership. She is a sophomore in the school of home economics. Miss Harrison's tryout was a reading of scene 1, act 4, from Shakespeare's King John.

The Mask and Dagger membership is limited to 40 and only those who show dramatic ability at the tryouts held at the beginning of each semester are eligible to membership. Harry G. Smith and E. C. Brownlee, of Oregon City, are charter members of the Mask and Dagger.

"Pinky" Lewis Will Fight

"Pinky" Lewis, the husky negro pugilist who recently cooled the ardor of Oregon City's Ben Borden, will battle the heavyweight, Simpson, for a newspaper decision at the smoker of the Falls City Athletic club at Masonic hall this evening. Other bouts on a good card are Carl Martin and Freddie Lough, Rooney and Schultz, Jimmy Moscow and Ping Bodie, Buck Smith and Warren and Joe Farrell and Tony Sheldon.

Constable D. E. Frost will attend the smoker to see that no boy under 16 is admitted. At past affairs a few youngsters have been present, usually with their fathers, but Mr. Frost will put a stop to the admittance of any boy under 16.

Concord Has Play

At the Concord school house the "Old Maids' Association" was presented on Friday evening under the direction of the principal, Miss Pearl Bailey. The receipts of the evening were $34, to be divided between the girls' and boys' baseball teams. A mock wedding was one of the principal features, during which Miss Marie Friedrich, of Parkplace, sang "Oh, Promise Me." Miss Lois Kennedy was the accompanist for the evening. Refreshments were served.

Will Hold Sale

A public sale of the high grade Jersey dairy cows, lately fresh, of the Lazell Rairy Co. is to be held at the Lazell place two miles south of Oregon City on the Pacific highway on March 3. Frank Weisenbeck is manager for the company and M. H. Hostetter is to cry the sale. In addition to 13 cows there are five heifers 9 to 18 months old and two heifer calves to be sold.

A FRIEND'S ADVICE

Woman Saved From a Serious Surgical Operation.

Louisville, Ky.—"For four years I suffered from female troubles, headaches, and nervousness. I could not sleep, had no appetite and it hurt me to walk. If I tried to do any work, I would have to lie down before it was finished. The doctors said I would have to be operated on and I simply broke down. A friend advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the result is I feel like a new woman. I am well and strong, do all my own house work and have an eight pound baby girl. I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation which every woman dreads."—Mrs. NELLIE FISHBACK, 1521 Christy Ave., Louisville, Ky.

Everyone naturally dreads the surgeon's knife. Sometimes nothing else will do, but many times Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved the patient and made an operation unnecessary.

If you have any symptom about which you would like to know, write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for helpful advice given free.

BIG BEN

There's Success
In His Wake

BIG BEN at 6 a. m. for the big man of business—who knows the luxury of ample time—who's up before duty insists. Try Big Ben in the business of living. Set him a little ahead.

"Click," goes the time-lock on sleep—you dart across the room—nudge him quiet—smile—with brain afresh and mind alert you're on good terms with a new day.

Puts an edge on your razor and appetite—and time to use both—brings a whistle that starts in the tub and puckers again at each lull in your work.

To get your salary up, a year of Big Ben get-ups is better than a pull with the Boss. You'll like Big Ben face to face. He's seven inches tall, spunky, neighborly—downright good all through. He rings two ways—ten half-minute calls or steadily for five minutes.
