HUNS WILL BE FORCED TO SIGN PEACE PACT

PARIS, May 14.—Immediate measures tending to the further subjugation of Germany if its delegates refuse to sign the peace treaty were indicated by the announcement that Marshal Foch had been sent to the Rhine by the council of four to take such action as may become necessary in the event that the treaty is not signed.

The council of four of the peace conference appointed this afternoon a sub-committee comprising one member from each of the five great powers (Great Britain, France, Italy, the United States and Japan) to deal with objections and proposals from the German plenipotentiaries.

The answers of the council of four to the German notes on prisoners of war and labor subjects were delivered this afternoon.

Telephone Rates Ordered Lowered

SALEM, May 14.—In the case of the Home Independent Telephone company of La Grande against several telephone systems operating in Northern Willamette county, alleging that the defendants in the town of Florida charge and collect unreasonable rates for transmitting long distance messages to and from the connecting lines of the complaining company, the public service commission yesterday issued an order finding in favor of the plaintiff. The defendant lines were the Three Ridge Telephone company, of Paradise; the Paradise Telephone company, the Florida Telephone company and the North End Telephone company, the latter having its offices at Troy.

Too Many Districts

At a road meeting in Estacada Wednesday night County Judge Anderson and Roadmaster Tom A. Roots referred to the advisability of consolidating some of the road districts in Clackamas county. They argued that 57 districts are too many by far, and that more effective road work could be done with fewer districts. They further contend that with 57 districts it is impossible to map out and carry out a program of road construction.

All right, gentlemen. The Enterprise said this five years ago, and about that time the county court took the bull by the horns and eliminated two road districts. Meanwhile the court has wrestled with the hydro-headed problem of 57 districts, bucked against the 70 per cent district fund law, and has been brought face to face with the impossible task of building a highway system in Clackamas county with 30 per cent of the road money, and with 1400 miles of road and about 400 span bridges to maintain.

It is up to the county court to solve its own problems, when the state law has distinctly clothed them with authority, and it may be assumed that the court is preparing the people for the shock. The state law provides that county courts, at the September term of each year, may fix the boundaries of road districts to their liking, adding to the existing number or eliminating down to one district if they choose.

We shall watch, with some interest, the action of the Clackamas court at the September term upon the question of the number of road districts to be maintained for the year following.

GROCERYMEN WIN FIGHT ON BREAD PRICES

The grocerymen of Oregon City have won their fight to lower bread prices recently increased by the Portland bakers.

This increase was made without warning and reasons given were that the bakers had been given an increase of $1.00 per day and other materials for bread had also increased.

The local merchants decided the increase unnecessary and thought it bordered on profiteering as this increase of wages only meant a few dollars per day and the one cent on each loaf of bread meant several hundred dollars more income to the bakers.

The merchants decreased their bread orders of the Portland product and used local products and also advised their customers to bake their own bread.

Mr. Rittman, a Portland baker, came to this city to try to justify this increase but the merchants were firm and refused to handle any more Portland bread that possible.

The Portland bakers have lost on the deal for the home product had been placed on the market more firmly than ever and the people are satisfied with it and will continue its use.

TEACHERS ASSOCIATION ELECT OFFICERS AT BORING MEETING

The Clackamas County Teachers' association met at Boring Saturday. The principal addresses were delivered by Miss Julia Spooner of Portland, who described the benefits of teachers' organization, and W. S. Arant, principal of the high school at Oregon City, speaking on the best methods of getting and keeping young people in the high schools.

The principal items of business were the election of officers and the reorganization of the association along more progressive lines. The new officers are: W. S. Arant, president; Miss May Erisco, vice president; Mrs. Grace Otto, secretary; Mrs. Altman, treasurer; publicity editor, Mrs. Barnum, retiring president.

The new plan of reorganization calls for a division of the county into six zones, each with a teachers' organization properly officered and represented by a member on the executive committee. The zone headquarters and representatives are: Sandy, Mrs. Nelson; Estacada, Principal M. B. Signs; Gladstone, Mrs. C. E. Shaw; Molalla, Miss Rosa Ten Eyke; Canby, Mrs. H. B. Cartledge; Wilsonville, Professor Chester A. Lyon.

The plan calls for closer cooperation with the county superintendent and it is desired that the meetings of the association be held in connection with the local institutions outlined by him.

PROBATE COURT

Emaline Turner Myers filed Monday for probate of the will of the late Amanda Turner, who died in this city January 12, 1919. The estate consists of real property valued at $700 and there are several heirs.

GLADSTONE PAVEMENT QUESTION DISCUSSED

After a protracted hearing Friday afternoon, the county court took under advisement the question of which of the two roads leading into Gladstone on the North should be paved this summer. The question is of more than local interest as either road forms a link in the main highway along the river road from Oregon City to Portland.

The matter before the court involves the expenditure of special road money, along with general funds, levied by Road District No. 47, running from the Milwaukie section to Gladstone, and residents of the district, except those living in the vicinity of Jennings Lodge, Mel-drum and Glen Echo, argued that it was the intention of the taxpayers to provide for the improvement of Steel avenue in a westerly direction, continuing to the bottom of the Hollow hill on the river road. Gladstone residents, however, who have provided for the paving of Portland avenue this year, want the court to improve the road running from the eastern part of Steel avenue, coming south and connecting with the northern limits of Gladstone at Portland avenue.

The river road from near the bottom of Hollow hill is in the corporate limits of Gladstone, but the people living west of that section of the road are a part of Road District No. 47, and have paid a 10-mill special tax for the last six years. They have the backing of taxpayers who live at points near the center and farther north in the district, and hope that the court will not only authorize the improvement of the river road to the limits of Gladstone, but will also continue the paving on the river road up the Clackamas river, connecting with the paving laid in Gladstone last year from the Clackamas river bridge to Portland avenue.

The river road through Gladstone is in a bad condition and County Judge Anderson, at the conclusion of the hearing, pointed out that Gladstone had done nothing to keep the road in condition.

OREGON TROOPS ARE WELCOMED ON HOMECOMING

PORTLAND, May 8.—Exactly on the 8 o'clock day this morning the special carrying the 316th sanitary train arrived at the Union depot. From the time it was seen out near Troutdale, whistles and sirens blew, folks all along the way waved flags and aprons, hats and brooms. It is hard to tell who were happier, the boys or the home folks.

Three hundred and eighty-seven officers and men were on the train. Nearly all are Oregonians. The units were the 364th field hospital and 20 men of the 364th ambulance company, in command of Major Karl J. Swenson, of Portland; the 361st field hospital and a few members of the 362d ambulance company, in charge of Major Robert W. Clancy of Medford; the 363d ambulance company, in command of Major Harry B. Moore, of Portland; the 363d field hospital, under Major John Hunt, of Seattle; the 361st ambulance company, Captain D. F. Miller commanding; a part of the 316th supply train, under Lieutenant K. L. Cooper, of The Dalles, with Lieutenant R. L. Sabin, Jr., of Portland, second in command. Two other officers, Lieutenant F. C. Campbell, of Tacoma, and Lieutenant L. M. Ellis, of The Dalles, came across the continent on the Beaver special.

UNKNOWN WOMAN IS SUICIDE AT MILWAUKEE

Coroner Ed Johnson was called to Milwaukee Thursday evening at six o'clock by the suicide of an unidentified woman whose body was found floating in Johnson Creek.

Mrs. Arighi of Milwaukee, saw the stranger cross the bridge about 5:00 o'clock, and afterwards notified the coroner of this after the body was discovered by two men on the 5:30 car, who were standing on the platform and noticed it in the river.

After the woman crossed the bridge she descended a very steep bank and removed her shoes, hat and gloves. She wore a heavy black veil and this was left on when she committed the deed.

The scene of the suicide was about 400 feet from the railroad bridge and the body was evidently not in the water long for it had only floated about 200 feet.

When the body was discovered by the two men they got a boat and secured it so that it could not float away and notified the coroner, who recovered it and turned it over to Holman & Pace of this city.

No papers of any kind were found that would identify the body and the purse contained $1.03 and a torn handkerchief. The handbag was of an old headed design.

The suicide was dressed in an old-fashioned black coat, low shoes with white tops, a black skirt, a small black hat and white gloves. She was a small woman and was very grey-haired and was a cripple as she walked with a crutch.

She wore three rings, one worn very thin and evidently a wedding ring. One of the others was a band ring and was engraved with the wording: "A token of friendship." The third ring contained a setting and was also badly worn.

MOONSHINE OUTFIT IS DISCOVERED ON ISLAND

A moonshine still that was complete and in full operation was discovered Tuesday on the Tualatin river about one mile from the main highway, and the officers, Special State Officer A. J. Bell and three federal men demolished the outfit. This was on the property of Ulsky brothers, a farm of about 40 acres.

Bell had been watching the place for the past two weeks and when he had the evidence called the federal officers to assist in the raid.

The officers first went to the house and found an outfit for making the mash in the barn. There were about 60 gallons of this ready for the still. After further search of the place Bell led the party to the river where a boat was found. This was taken and the party crossed to a small island. The brush was very dense over the bank but a landing place was found and a trail leading into the woods. After a short distance this trail wound into a good road and the house where the still was located was found.

This house was made of heavy pulp felt and completely covered with brush. It was so well hidden that anyone not looking for it could easily pass without seeing it.

Two complete stills were found in the house, both in operation. The operators had run as soon as they knew the officers were after them and had made their escape. The stills consisted of copper boilers, oil stoves, coils and there were several barrels of mash in the house. The officers found about 25 or 30 gallons of whiskey ready for use and confiscated enough for evidence and destroyed the rest.

The still was located about four miles from Oregon City and not far from the famous "Crawfish House." Bell spent three nights near the place in his search for evidence and as soon as he could get ready made the raid.

The officers estimated that the still had only been on this place for about a month but the apparatus has been used for some time and it is thought it has been moved recently.

Bonding For Roads

The Enterprise does not propose to give its unqualified endorsement to any road bonding scheme that may be proposed in Clackamas county. The question is not at issue and it should become an issue here, and we anticipate that it will, this newspaper proposes to form its judgment upon the question at that time and upon the merits of the particular measure to be submitted.

But there is a constitutional amendment before the people to be voted upon at the special election June 3d that Clackamas county should be deeply interested in. The legislature has submitted an amendment to the people, providing that any county in the state may vote bonds for the improvement of its roads up to 6 per cent. of its assessed valuation. The present constitutional inhibition is 2 per cent. of the assessed valuation.

This amendment carries no appropriation with it, and ought to be adopted, as it is manifestly unfair for the people of one county to deny to the people of another county the right to incur indebtedness for permanent road construction, if the people of any county choose, by their votes, to assume such debt.

The amendment imposes no burden, nor does it force public improvement upon unwilling counties. It costs nothing, and it confines the application of the privilege to the counties electing to apply same—it is the concern only of the county desiring to use the opportunity. This is purely a local option measure; no county need assume burdens unless it desires.

The amendment is the first on the ballot at the special election, and it is numbered 300, yes, and 301 no.

The amendment should be adopted, so that the people of any county may proceed with their road program in their own way.

CITY PLANS FOR PAVING FROM MAIN TO BRIDGE

Paving of the old macadamized link from Main street to the Abernethy bridge will be undertaken by Oregon City early this summer.

Washington street from the bridge to Fourteenth street and Fourteenth to Main will be hard surfaced out of the city road funds.

The council will soon ask for bids for this improvement on an open basis as to types of pavement, leaving it to the bidders to specify the character of pavement to be provided. It is understood that a local contractor will offer to pave the two streets with six inches of concrete for about $1.50 per square yard, and that pavement will be laid to a width of 15 feet.

Some months ago the city proposed to lay asphaltic concrete, to be put down at cost with the county paving plant, but it is possible that the paving program of the county may not permit its handling the city job, and it is not considered likely that any paving concern would care to come here and undertake a comparatively small job.

The county has agreed to pave for the city to Milwaukie, at the cost of the Foster road hill. The pavement extending from the Southern Pacific overhead crossing at the west end of the city, the main street of that town will run north as far as the available money of the city will permit.

Sandy Boys Are Drowned Saturday

PORTLAND, May 12.—The body of Robert Rutherford, one of the two canoeists drowned in the Willamette river near the Inman & Paulson Lumber company's plant Saturday evening, was recovered Sunday afternoon by City Grappler Brady and turned over to the coroner. Search for the body of Walter Krebs, who was drowned with Rutherford, continued all day, but without success. Both boys came from Sandy, Oregon, and were employed in local shipbuilding plants. Rutherford's body was turned over to relatives and taken to Sandy for burial.

NEW CHAIRMAN NAMED FOR OREGON BOYS WELCOME COMMISSION

SALEM, May 13.—W. L. Whittlesey has been selected to succeed O. C. Leiter, resigned, as chairman of the Oregon Welcome commission in New York City, according to information just received by Governor Olcott from Miss Peggy Curtis, secretary of the commission. Mr. Whittlesey, who was a former Oregon newspaper man, has continuously devoted himself to the work of the commission since the inauguration of the Oregon headquarters in New York.

Only about 16 per cent. of the Oregon men in service overseas have been returned up to this time, according to Miss Curtis' letter, but the commission expects the final debarkation of Oregon troops during September, providing the peace treaty is signed within the next 30 or 40 days. Oregon units have been landing in New York almost daily. Miss Curtis states, and the welcome commission is doing everything possible to make the returned fighters understand the spirit in which Oregon has provided for their first reception.

CAPACITY OF PAPER MILLS IS INCREASED

The Hawley Pulp & Paper company has let contracts to the Hurley-Mason company, Portland contractors, to increase the capacity of their wood pulp mill 40 per cent. The expenditure on this work will be $150,000.

This improvement was necessitated by the increased volume of business of the paper company and in addition to the work now being done to the sulphite mill, on which $100,000 is being expended.

The work on the sulphite mill will be completed in June and that of the wood pulp mill by October 1. With these two improvements the output of the Hawley Pulp & Paper company will be greatly increased and more business brought to Oregon City.
