The Sharp Type

I do not like this sort of a girl. I am afraid of her.

She is very bright, she usually stands head of her class at school but she rarely is elected to fill any important office. She isn't popular, except among a certain number of girls who like her. She has a sharp tongue, and will use it behind your back as well as to your face. That's the worst of her. If she would say the mean things to people, not much harm would be done. But when she says them about people, she is undermining those persons in an unpardonable fashion. Of course, she says these things so wittily that every one laughs, yet the sting is there. She has an uncanny habit of seeing the mean streak in other folks. It amounts almost to a second sight. Practically everyone has a certain amount of meanness in them, they say, but some folks keep it so suppressed that it practically doesn't exist. But this sharp girl will see that side. And often she'll bring it out, and make a lot of people miserable. She's like the man in Hawthorne's story, who had a snake in his own bosom which made him able to see the snake in other's bosoms.

Of course this girl isn't thoroughly rude; few people are. Her tongue is a bit to sharp, that's all. And as people enjoy hearing bright sarcastic things, they often encourage her. Her greatest danger is that she will grow genuinely and incurably mean as she grows older, instead of soft and

Speed Devils Halted Snyder Stops Court Officials Over Limit

Halted by a vigilant speed cop at Molalla corners Friday night, the entire personnel of the county court of Clackamas county, with Deputy District Attorney J. Dean Butler, received a reprimand for driving over the limit through the town. Judge Anderson and Commissioners Proctor and Harris were in the party, which had been out examining some roads in the vicinity.

Mr. Harris was driving the car at a fast clip and when he struck the pavement at Molalla, he "stepped on her." Officer Snyder spotted the official quartet and ordered them to stop.

"We're the county court," explained Harris.

"That makes no difference to me," said Snyder. "You can't exceed the speed limit at Molalla."

The party drove toward Oregon City at a snail's pace and arrived here shortly before 11 o'clock.

BRYAN TO SPEAK

Information was received here Thursday by Secretary Beattie that William Jennings Bryan will speak at the Chautauqua on the evening of Sunday, July 13.

Helping Our Neighbors

We take it that every resident of Oregon is proud of his own state, otherwise he would be moving on to a state more satisfying to his personal desires.

If we are to pull together for the advancement of Oregon we must take the broad view that whatever helps any section of the state is going to be of benefit to the entire commonwealth, and we should not refuse our aid to any legitimate proposal on the ground that it is of no immediate interest to our own town and county.

Over in Eastern Oregon, separated from us by a range of mountains, are many thousands of acres of land of little value. These lands are arid, but when irrigated they produce bountiful crops and add much to the state's wealth, some estimates placing the increase to the taxable wealth of the state as high as $100,000,000. Many Eastern and Central Oregon communities have bonded themselves to pay the cost of bringing water to these broad acres, and because of the manipulation of bond buyers, these bonds have been sold in some instances, notably at Vale, in Malheur county, for 90 cents on the dollar. The residents of that enterprising section have lost $75,000 on a single district bond issue of $750,000, and this money might just as well have been saved to the people of Malheur, instead of going into the pockets of the rich bond brokers. The market value of the lands has been pounded down because no one but the settlers themselves and their holdings were back of the bonds.

The legislature, recognizing the injustice to these people who are working hard to build up homes for themselves and their posterity, has submitted to the people at the special election June 3rd next, a constitutional amendment, which provides, in substance, that the state shall lend its credit to guarantee the interest on irrigation and drainage bonds, whenever an individual project shall have received the approval of a commission, consisting of the state engineer, the attorney general and the state superintendent of banks.

Under the terms of the amendment the state will pay the interest on the bonds for the first five years after the date of issue. The bonds will be issued by the state which will mean they will be sold for not less than par and the state will pay the interest for not to exceed five years and the amendment provides that the state is to be reimbursed, with interest, six months after the maturity of the bonds.

This appears to us to be a fair measure. Western Oregon, generally, knows little of irrigation, and many of its residents, unfortunately, care less. This is all wrong. If we are to build up our state we should make it possible for the eastern part of Oregon to work out its own salvation and meet its own problems on a business basis. We are asked only to lend the money needed, at the legal rate of interest, and ample provision is made for its repayment.

Vote 304 yes.

WEEKLY SOLDIER LETTER

"I sent you a package a few days ago containing a lot of junk I had collected in my footlocker. I wish you would keep them for me."

"Everything is the same as usual, except that the weather is a bit warmer and the mosquitoes are more frequent. Life is intolerably dull, and there doesn't seem to be any hope of getting out of the army very soon. The papers say that the army will be back by September, as that is likely to be the date of my discharge."

"When I last heard from Devel he was stationed at Fort Wright, Spokane, but Happy said he had re-enlisted for foreign service."

"I got foolish a while back and sent one of my 'near-poems' to a publishing company, and wonders of wonders—it was accepted and I was sent an agreement to sign that they should sell it for the commission of ten per cent. of the sale price, but by that time I had changed my mind, so I tore up the agreement and resumed the more or less, even tenor of my way."

"I am commencing to believe that this part of the state is rather pretentious. Lewis E. Madden, son of Mrs. L. B. Madden, who is stationed at Camp Pike, Arkansas, has written the following letter to his mother:

Camp Pike, May 5, 1919.

"Dear Mother:
"I haven't heard from you for quite a while, but I don't believe I answered your last letter. I haven't answered anybody's lately because of the usual lack of stamps.

"But the mosquitoes and malaria effect it a whole lot."

"This place has one over Arizona for bugs, and I guess that must be the reason that there are so many birds here."

"Idaho has the reputation of being wild and woolly, and its natives barbarians, but Arkansas is so far behind Idaho in its journey towards civilization that it is like comparing the modern Frenchman with the ancient Gaul."

"I tried my hand at writing a sonnet the other day. What do you think of it?"

To Howard O. Wolfe of Co. B. 21st U. S. Infantry.

(Killed in Action)—

He died at St. Mihiel
His bayonet dyed red
With blood on which it fed;
Where ghostly smoke wreaths reel
In hopeless dumb appeal
O'er all the valley spread,
Bemoans the martyred dead
On that heroic field.

He died. His name reverberates
Who 'neath Old Glory fought,
And there so bravely fell,
Untouched by shame or fear,
As death his hot cheek sought
And great guns roared his knell.

"LEWIS E. MADDEN,
"16th Company, 162d Depot Brigade, Camp Pike, Arkansas."

Madden has been in the regular army for five years, and when the armistice was signed, he was transferred to the National Army and sent to Camp Pike. He was drilling instructor for some time at Camp Pike.

He says it can't be any worse to get killed than to belong to the Depot Brigade in Arkansas.

HELPFUL HINTS AND RECIPES.

A French preparation for soup seasoning is made of two ounces each of sweet marjoram, parsley, savory, thyme, lemon peel, and one ounce of sweet basil.

The herbs are dried, ground fine and sifted until well mixed. This powder keeps indefinitely; it should be used sparingly.

Kitchen Bouquet.—Put one cupful of sugar in an iron frying pan and stir until it melts to a dark brown color. Add half a cupful of water, stir, add a clove of garlic chopped, a chopped onion, six whole cloves, a teaspoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of black pepper and a dash of tabasco sauce. Simmer 20 minutes, strain and bottle for use. This will keep for months. Nice to color and to flavor sauces.

Amber Marmalade.—This is better than the original orange marmalade, if the bitter taste is at all objectionable. Take one orange, one grapefruit and one lemon; wash and wipe dry, cut in thin slices, discarding the seeds. Add 12 cupfuls of water, three quarts, and let stand over night. The next day cook until the peel is tender, then set away again over night. The next day add ten cupfuls of sugar and cook until it is thick. Put in glasses and cover with paraffin. This makes a dozen good sized glasses.

To make a cheap strained honey for the table with the honey flavor, add a quart of water to five pounds of sugar, and boil, add one pound of strained honey to the strup while warm, mix well and it is ready to use.

Mixed Spice for General Use.—This is an old and valued New England recipe. The mixture is used in plum pudding, fruit cake and mince pies. Mix and sift thoroughly twice, two tablespoonfuls of powdered cinnamon, one tablespoonful each of powdered cloves and allspice, two tablespoonfuls of powdered mace and one grated nutmeg. Put away in a tin box or tight glass jar and keep ready for use. The flavor improves with age.

The young couple will make their home at Molalla.
