

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

BY MARY GRAM BONNER

SPRING TURKEYS.

"Hello, my children," said Father Turkey, one bright spring day.

"Hello, d.d., said the little turkeys.

"You're spring turkeys, aren't you?" asked their father.

"I suppose we are," said one of the turkeys. "It's fine to be a turkey in this nice world where we get such good things to eat."

"You must be careful not to get your feet wet, you know," said Father Turkey.

"Yes," said the little turkeys, "mother was telling us to be very careful not to get our feet wet for the first four weeks of our lives, for if we do we will never be strong or well turkeys, and if we're careful—well, we will be strong and well turkeys."

The little turkey drew a long breath, for he had said all that without stopping.

Father Turkey laughed and said: "Well, anyway, you know just what you should do. Your mother teaches you well."

"Why did you ask us if we were spring turkeys, dad?" asked the little turkeys. "Didn't you know whether we were or not?"

"Yes, I knew," said their father, "but I wondered if you had heard of the autumn and of Thanksgiving."

"No, mother hasn't told us about Thanksgiving," said the little turkeys. "Is Thanksgiving something to eat, daddy?"

"No," gobbled Father Turkey. "Thanksgiving is something which eats us. That is we are supposed to be good food for Thanksgiving and for Christmas, too."

"We are going to be eaten?" said the little turkeys, in frightened voices.

"Cheer up, little turkeys," said Father Turkey. "It sounds quite dreadful to you now, but it won't when I explain it to you. And it is best for me to explain it to you than for some one else who doesn't know and understand the whole thing."

"You see," said Father Turkey. "Thanksgiving day is a day when they give thanks for all the fine things they have in this world. When some people come over to this country years and years ago they set aside a day upon which to give thanks for their safe arrival in this land."

"Well, it's a day which is kept year after year after year, and in order to celebrate it in great style they have turkeys to eat. It's a great honor they pay us. And they also have turkeys for Christmas which is a day still greater than Thanksgiving day."

"And more than the compliment that they pay us is the fact that we're fed so well and given so much to eat before Thanksgiving day that we never have to hunt for our food; we are given all the goodies we want, and we are made fat in the most delightful fashion."

"To be sure, all of us aren't eaten, but it doesn't matter whether we are or not, for we don't know it when we are, and we do know all about the delightful days beforehand, when we eat and eat and eat and gobble and gobble and gobble."

"When your mother was looking after you I kept watch all the time to see that no harm came to you. I warned her whenever danger was near."

"I will teach you how to roost in the trees, and I will teach you how to put your heads under your wings."

"But probably your mother has already taught you these two things. So I will just have a good time with you and chat with you and gobble with you."

"You're a fine father," said the little turkeys.

"But you can still call yourselves spring turkeys," said their father, "because it is still spring, and it will be a long time before Thanksgiving day, and the following holiday, Christmas, and the snow and the cold weather."

"Yes, you're spring turkeys, you're father's own nice spring turkeys, and it will only be one more week before you can walk wherever you want, for you will be four weeks old, and after the first four weeks little turkeys don't have to be so careful."

And the spring turkeys gobbled and said that life sounded and seemed very pleasant.

That's True.

The teacher had been telling her class about the rhinoceros family.

"Now, name some things," she said, "that are very dangerous to get near to and that have horns."

"Motor cars!" promptly answered Johnny.

Mr. Wilson has reversed himself again. In his message to congress, the President has advised that the ban be lifted from beer and light wines and that after July 1, when national prohibition is to be effective, the people who want it shall still guzzle their beer and quaff their wine with laughter free.

It is reported that California, which swung into the Democratic column at the last election, celebrated vociferously when the news of Mr. Wilson's latest reversal flashed over the wires. The brewery whistles blew, old San Francisco flopped itself inside out and Hornbrook once more turned its gaze toward the Oregon boundary.

Well, well, here we are again. Will Elder Wilson never stay put? Shall we ever know where to find him? Has his prolonged stay on French soil altered his views? Or would he step light on those who befriended him with their votes in his hour of dire political need?

We of Oregon need not concern ourselves especially. We are dry in any case, and dry we shall undoubtedly remain. But our friends in California, if the advice of our side-stepping globe trotter is to be followed, will open their mouths and show forth his praise.

Brother Wilson gets away with many things, but we wonder what the people will say about this one.

CARE IN CONTAGION.

Contagious diseases are due to distinct living things, which are transmitted from one person to another and live like parasites upon a patient. This knowledge will help us to guard ourselves and our loved ones from the spread of contagion.

The best protection against contagion is robust health. One who is strong and vigorous is much less liable to yield to disease than one less robust. Wholesome food, exercise and fresh air are essentials in combating disease. An active body is far less liable to disease than an inactive one that has little outdoor exercise.

The need of fresh air, day and night, is one of the important factors in maintaining health. The belief that night air is dangerous and sleeping in an unventilated room is responsible for much ill health. Sleeping rooms should be well aired by day, bedding sunned often and a free circulation of air in the coldest weather maintained in the sleeping rooms during the night.

The eating utensils used by a patient, or indeed anything else which he uses or handles during a contagious illness, are a menace, as they are easily contaminated with infectious germs.

A diphtheria patient who has been ill in his mouth will contaminate spoons, cups, forks or anything which he uses. This is also true of other contagious diseases to a less extent. Consequently too much care cannot be taken of everything that the patient handles.

Allow no one to use or handle any of his utensils, toys or books. The utensils may be boiled; ten minutes will sterilize them, but toys, books or things that cannot be boiled should be burned.

Paper napkins and dishes of paper may be used, saving the care of linen and utensils, and these may be burned.

To ventilate a sick room without a draft, place a board four to six inches wide under the window, and of the same width; by shutting the window down on this board, a current of air will come up between the sashes, keeping a circulation of fresh air, without a draft.
