

LEGISLATIVE ACT ON BONE-DRY LAW NECESSARY, SAYS BROWN

SALEM, Or., Nov. 13.—The state of Oregon will operate under the present prohibition law until the legislature shall meet and enact legislation to enforce the "bone-dry" amendment to the constitution, adopted by the people at the recent general election, Attorney-General Brown today advised Governor Withycombe.

Under the opinion expressed to the executive by the attorney-general, the new amendment is not in conflict with the provisions of the present dry law and therefore the present law will be in effect until new legislation is enacted supplementing the total dry amendment.

The character of the new legislation, which will be essential to place the "bone-dry" amendment in operation, Attorney-General Brown advised Governor Withycombe, must be like that enacted in the state of Idaho. Until an act of this kind is adopted by the legislature, the attorney-general pointed out, the importation of intoxicating liquors for beverage purposes into the state cannot be punished criminally, since the new amendment does not carry a penalty clause.
