

David and Jonathan

(Mary Newton Badger)

You'd never see us far apart, being born twins; you see I was a part of Jonathan, and he was half of me. David and Jonathan, we were, Ma that she named us well. But which was Dave and which was Jon, it bothered her to tell.

It didn't matter, tho, if she called Dave both rascals came, Or if she wanted Jonathan, it always was the same. No closer friendship could exist, until the trouble came That frosted both our lives, and left us only twins in name.

It was the preacher's little girl, dear Emily McLain, (She was but seventeen, and we were nineteen when she came.)

She played the mischief with our hearts—not that she was to blame:

A girl of kinder, sweeter ways has never lit the flame Of love in any fellow's breast. Jon was hard-hit I see; As for myself, there never was another girl for me. And Emily? She didn't know which twin she loved the best, Until we boys, sore jealous quarreled, and Jonathan went west.

The years slid by; he never wrote. When Ma was laid to rest By Pa, and I felt free to go, I followed Jon out west, Sold out, but kept on prospecting, as tho I had no means. A mule team couldn't drag me out—not till cold weather came.

Yet 'long about Thanksgiving time, no matter where I roam, I get a restless feeling and a hankering to go "home."

So on November third or fourth, a raw and blustery day, I started out to take the train, some thirty miles away. If you had somehow missed the trail, and thot to spend the night, Hungry and tired beneath some tree—then some old fellow's light

Blazed out upon the mountain side—what would your feelings be? Well, Pard, that little speck o' light meant "heaven on earth" to me.

It seemed a mile or two away. I stumbled on thru bogs, Tripped by the matted undergrowth, rocks and half-rotten logs;

Then climbed up rocky ledges, altho often slipping back, I kept my eye upon the light and somehow reached the shack.

A miner doesn't stop to knock when he's in such a plight, And so I waded right on in, half-blinded by the light. A startled cry—"Why Dave, old boy!" and there before me stood The man who'd severed, years before, all ties of brotherhood.

With one arm across my shoulder, he gripped my hand like sin, Not pestering me with questions, for he saw I was "all in."

Stretched on a bear-skin by the fire, enjoying warmth and rest, I watched the old black frying-pan-a-workin' at its best. Talk of perfume, perhaps you think that nothing smells so sweet, As roses, violets, and the like, but bacon has them beat; Bacon and coffee, when a man's "all in" and well-nigh froze, Bacon and coffee give a miner holler to his toes!

When I had stowed away the grub, Jon came and sat by me, His eyes fixed on the fire; at last he asked, "How's Emily?"

It startled me, not having heard our sweetheart's name in years; Jon understanding, turned his head, to hide the foolish tears.

"You hadn't heard then? Man, she died the year you went away. I think your going killed her, she was different from that day."

He paced the floor a good half hour, his bronzed face drawn with pain, Then gave my hand the old-time clasp, that made us twins again.

In turn I gave him what I prized above my wealth of gain; It was an old daguerreotype of Emily McLain.

Hostetter Must Vacate

At the instance of R. S. Eccles, who some time ago brought a vacation suit against W. H. Hostetter, the latter was on Saturday ordered to vacate 105 acres in section 32, township 1 south, range 3 east, and to pay court costs. Execution was stayed by Judge Campbell's order until December 20.

The Courier and Farmer $1.00.

WILSON PREDESTINED TO FREE WORLD, 'TIS SAID

Woodrow Wilson was predestined to free the world. What preparatory stages did he undergo to fit himself for this high calling? I speak of preparation advisedly, because that is one of his cardinal doctrines. He believes in being thoroughly prepared before undertaking any enterprise. He believes in making himself thoroughly ready for any task before he attempts it. He inherits this from his sturdy Scotch ancestry. His father believed in it before him, for no effort was made to teach the son his letters before he was nine years old. Mental stamina and a solid foundation were first established before his mind was burdened with the grind of school life.

As an evidence of the wisdom of this course, he was prepared for college at 17, and was tutoring in Greek before his eighteenth birthday. He began his life work only after he had reached the age of 30. In these days when a young man desires to engage in active business before he is out of his short breeches, so long a period of study seems a needless waste of time, but he was thoroughly grounding himself for the serious work of life. Mr. Wilson does not believe in tackling life's problems in a haphazard, unprepared, unprepared manner, but only after having fitted himself for his task.

While at Princeton three authors greatly interested him. The first was Burke, whose essays he greatly admired and whose life determined him to become a great orator. In carrying out this plan, he followed in the footsteps of Demosthenes, substituting the woods around Princeton for the seashore. He used to steal away from his associates and declaim to the surrounding hills Burke's rounded perorations. He read Bagehot, who probably had a greater influence upon him than any other author. This led him to make a study of government, its functions and the proper relations of its various branches. He devoted the major portion of his future student life to a thorough mastery of the theory of government. That he succeeded in his undertaking is evidenced by the books he has written, which are now standard text-books upon the science of government.

Democrat of the most pronounced type it would have been more natural for him to select as his field for future labors a section in which democratic principles were popular. Yet he accepted a position to teach politics to women at Bryn Mawr, located in Pennsylvania, a rock-ribbed republican state, in which there was no opportunity for a democrat ever to come into power. His next move was to Connecticut, a New England state scarcely less hostile to democracy. Finally he settled in New Jersey, which had usually gone republican, and in Princeton, a district which is always republican.

Still we are informed that Mr. Wilson never considered teaching as his life work. It was purely preliminary. He bided his time, prepared for the emergency, mastered the situation, and was ready for the call when it came.—W. H. Crawford, in "Leslies."

FINE KICKS AT FOOD

Wants Sheriff to Serve Him Kosher Dishes in County Jail

There appears to be a new food classification in demand in Oregon City as a result of the recent incarceration of Joe Fine, Hebrew candy maker, who is suspected of being a slacker, in want of information to the contrary. The other day Sheriff Wilson took a basketful of good, wholesome food into the county jail. When he returned the basket was left—but the food had been completely accounted for by friend Fine. Fine had a grudge, however.

"Sheriff, I don't like dat food. Give it to me some different kind food. I can't eat it the pork chop—I want kosher food." Whereupon the Sheriff started to scout about the city for a regular Yiddish cook. Without success, however, for at last report Fine was still eating Protestant food.

CLUB SHOWS THANKS

Mrs. A. L. Hughes Gets Fine Guernsey Bull for Her Work with Club

To show their appreciation of the splendid efforts of Mrs. A. L. Hughes, secretary, in connection with the life of the organization and its activities, the Clackamas County Guernsey Cattle club has presented Mrs. Hughes with a full blooded Guernsey bull calf, valued at $500. Mrs. Hughes was a persistent booster for the club's plan of importing high grade stock into the county, and it is largely as a result of her efforts to build up the Guernsey herds of the county that the recent $11,000 importation was possible. Mrs. Hughes and her husband, J. Hughes, are among the well-known Guernsey fanciers of the northwest and their herd is one of the best in the state.

CLARK PLEADS GUILTY

Will be Sentenced. Holland to be Tried December 27

G. W. Clark, indicted some time ago with Harry Holland for the robbery of the Bolds' home at Tualatin, last week appeared before Judge Campbell and changed his plea of not guilty to one of guilty, and asked for a delay in sentence. He will be sentenced by Judge Campbell on December 27. Harry Holland, who maintains his plea of not guilty, will be tried in the circuit court on the same day. It is alleged that the pair backed an automobile up to the Bolds' place, from which the occupants were absent, and removed much valuable loot in the way of furnishings.

Forsberg Enlists

where he will be assigned to duty. Raleigh Forsberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Forsberg, of Sixth by the Crown Willamette Paper company, has enlisted for service in the navy, and expects to leave from some time, and will continue this Portland for Goat Island this week, work in the navy.

Your Christmas present from The Courier is a subscription to the Oregon Farmer and a merchandise order—if you are a new subscriber or if you renew your subscription and pay one full year in advance.

612 MAIN STREET

OREGON CITY, ORE.

Prudden
OPTOMETRIST

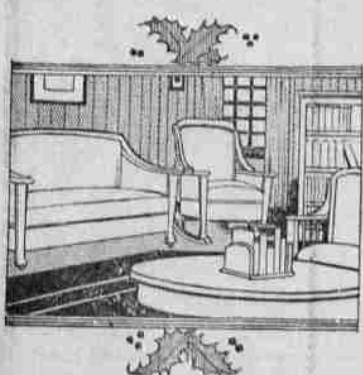

Merry Christmas Merry Christmas

Holiday Headquarters

FURNITURE - AND - HARDWARE

Give Furniture for a lasting Gift. What can be more appropriate? What will keep it fresher in the recipient's mind? We are surely stocked up for the holiday season this year and our lines of FURNITURE were never more beautiful and practical. We have just received a large shipment of the latest designs in bed-room, living-room, parlor and kitchen furniture.

Below We List a Few Items for Your Consideration--

A CHRISTMAS SPECIAL

Here is a Xmas special that is hard to beat. We have listed this combination so low that the margin of profit is very small.

6 DINING CHAIRS $16.75

6-FOOT EXTENSION TABLE

The whole outfit is finished in beautiful Golden Oak. A good value.

A VERTICAL FEED SEWING MACHING

Xmas Price, $25.00

This machine is second hand—but it has had the best of care and is absolutely guaranteed by us. It is in Golden Oak finish. The machine cost $75.00 new. We also have other New sewing machines that are very reasonably priced.

A CHRISTMAS SPECIAL

We are offering from now until Xmas a beautiful Overstuffed Rocker, finished in Spanish Design, solid in construction, extra braces on the frame, etc.

AN EXCELLENT VALUE
Reg. Price, $16.15
Priced for Xmas $9.85

BEDS—We certainly have a fine line of beds this year. They come in the latest designs—Ivory, White Enamel, Venas Martin, etc. Priced from $3.50 up.

TOYS—Drop in and look over our Toy department. It is complete—Mechanical Toys, Erectors, etc. Priced from 25c up.

Why not buy a CONGOLEUM RUG for that present this year—we have all the shades and sizes.

A FEW SUGGESTIONS

Regular $4 Aluminum Tea Kettle that is guaranteed for 15 years—will make a fine present this Xmas—now selling for $2.95

ALUMINUM PERCOLATORS
Electric and others—priced from $2.00 up.

HOODIER KITCHEN CABINETS
A step-saver for the housewife. You can buy this cabinet on practically your own terms—$15.75 up.

HOGG BROS.

OPPOSITE COURT HOUSE

OREGON CITY, OREGON

Merry Christmas Merry Christmas