PROGRESSIVE FARMERS

The Courier has made bold several times to express its opinion regarding the employment of an agricultural advisor in Clackamas county, and in view of repeated attacks upon the creation and maintenance of the position of county agent we must speak again.

At a meeting of the Live Wires in Oregon City on Tuesday local business men approved the employment of the county agent. One farmer present spoke against the office, saying that it was a waste of money, that it would increase already excessive taxation and that it would bring all manner of ills to the county.

It is up to Clackamas county farmers to look at the thing like business men and so act in the matter. If the county appropriates $1500 for the maintenance of the office it will cost each farmer about four cents each year. Is it not worth $40 to every farmer in the county?

The fact that you or I have been farming for 20 years and know more than a dozen agents about Clackamas county farm conditions and possibilities does not make the agent any the less valuable. Were he not a practical farmer at all his service would be worth his cost. If he eradicates 1000 moles in a year he has earned his four cents from YOU. If he saves you $3 a ton on the cost of your lime, how many times over has he earned your share of the expense of keeping him here? He will maintain seed distribution agencies that will prove him worth every cent he gets.

Those are only surface arguments. We believe there is not a progressive farmer in Clackamas county who does not see the value of a county agent. His office is a clearing house for farm activities; his aid and his advice, gleaned from sources that are sometimes not available to the average farmer, are of immense value to the progressive soil tiller.

Every big business in the nation has a high salaried man as an efficiency expert—which means that they pay well for advice. The farmer represents the biggest business on earth, and until he has adopted business principles to the transaction of his affairs how dare he hope to occupy his proper place in the community, and asks little in return except legitimate patronage. If the county auditor receives a word of praise he redoubles his efforts next week, if he hears no praise, he bends his energies toward getting out a better paper in order to please his readers; and thus he plays the game throughout the days and weeks and years, and often leaves nothing as a heritage to his children except a pleasant memory of "daddy and his print shop."—Maysville News.

IT CONCERNS ALL

The man, woman or minor who is not concerned as to the outcome of the present struggle is to be pitied and enlightened. He or she is really unconcerned through ignorance. They have failed entirely to grasp the true inwardness of the situation confronting us as a people.

Let us suppose that the history of our country were to end with the present generation. Does any one imagine that our statesmen would be materially interested in the settlement of the questions in dispute? Hardly?

Naturally, then, it is mainly the future of the country that is to be considered. What the future is to be will depend upon our action now. It is to the credit of the American people that they have always had a clear vision of the duty of the present generation to posterity. That vision was responsible for the Revolutionary war. It was the stimulus in the war of 1812. And when the Mexican question assumed grave proportions the same thought was at the fore in the national mind. Not so much the interest of our own posterity as that of our fellow man was the stimulus in the brush with Spain. But throughout her whole life this country has never failed to place the true interests of posterity before present ease and comfort.

What can be said, then, of the young man or woman who is not concerned over the outcome of this struggle? That they have no concern for the best interests of their own. Present ease and comfort weighs more with them than the future of their children, or of the race in general.

No nation of people can ever come into their own until present can be subordinated to future. No present is ever entirely what it should or could be. By the sacrifice of the present we stand a chance of realizing on the future. If all else is to be subordinated to the present, there is every possibility of there being no future worthy of the name.

THE HOME PAPER

The home paper has a mission in the community totally different from that of the city daily. The home paper publishes the story of a tragedy with genuine regret, while the city paper rushes out a special edition and gives the gruesome details, often highly colored, to satisfy the demand for sensationalism at so much per copy. The home paper offers sympathy to the wounded and broken hearts, and spreads a mantle of charity over the imperfections of the transgressor, while the city paper delves into the archives of the past to drag forth a family skeleton and exhibit it before an unsympathetic multitude, who find a sweet morsel in startling disclosures. The home paper is always ready to aid the unfortunate, overlook shortcomings, praise public enterprise, and sanction every cause for the betterment of the community, and asks little in return except legitimate patronage. If the county auditor receives a word of praise he redoubles his efforts next week, if he hears no praise, he bends his energies toward getting out a better paper in order to please his readers; and thus he plays the game throughout the days and weeks and years, and often leaves nothing as a heritage to his children except a pleasant memory of "daddy and his print shop."—Maysville News.

We express the fervent wish that the hundreds of Clackamas county farmers who prayed for rain during the fall are getting just what they asked for and no more.

Farm machinery is the artillery of agriculture, says the food administrator. Tune up the plow and harrow before spring and you will do much to put General Apathy and Private Indifference to route in Clackamas county.

"When U'Ren of Oregon City comes along next spring with his progressive land tax, or something of that sort, what are you going to say to him?"—Gresham Outlook. The Courier doesn't care a snap what you say to him, but for the love of Mike remember U'Ren "was" not "is" of Oregon City.

When the farmer has done his utmost to produce maximum grain crops in Clackamas county to make wheat for our fighting forces he does not appreciate the thought of the product of his labor being used for the manufacture of whisky to impair the fighting power of American men. He favors national action in the matter of prohibition.

The Aurora Observer, Canby News, Corvallis Courier, Newberg Enterprise and Gresham Outlook are among the fancy-covered Christmas editions that have been received by The Courier. And in each case they show a great effort on the part of progressive publishers to serve the community well. Each of them, however, will pardon the justifiable pride The Courier takes in its own Christmas effort.

Most newspapers with pronounced patriotic views appear to be of fending pro-Germans. There is no neutral ground for anyone to take in the war, nor can anyone straddle the fence. It simply amounts to this. One is either a patriotic, loyal citizen or an enemy of the United States and the sooner pro-Germans are gathered up and placed in detention camps the better. That appears to be the sentiment of a large number of newspaper men.—Tillamook Headlight.

M. J. Brown, editor of the Benton County Courier, has sung the prelude to his swan song. Mr. Brown will retire from the Corvallis paper on January 1, leaving A. E. Frost in complete charge. That Mr. Brown will return to Oregon City, where he was formerly editor of The Oregon City Courier, to engage in the publishing business, is strongly denied by him. Oregon will lose a notable figure when Mr. Brown retires. His fearless exposition of his own ideas and ideals have long been the envy of his less favored brothers in the newspaper game.

Lo, the poor Indian! He has about vanished from sight. But he has vanished, not so much from the earth, as into a higher status, where we had not expected to find him so soon. Wallace Lewy, an Indian, holds a seat in the Maine legislature. One of the best sermons the editor ever heard was preached by a full-blooded Indian minister. An Indian was champion rough rider of the world two years ago. The brainiest football player we ever saw on the field was an Indian youth from Carlisle. We know of one district where an Indian last year cleared $30,000 in wheat and he owns the biggest wheat farm in his country. We know a singer who draws a packed house wherever he sings—he is an Indian. There's a kindly little lass on the French battle front relieving by her tender ministrations the affliction and suffering of her fellows and she is a dark-skinned girl from the American Indians' tepee land. Scores of young braves are shouldering arms for America—some of them are officers. Lo, the poor Indian.

Obituaries
