FOR SEVENTEEN YEARS

It Took That Long to Persuade Congress to Make a National Park

Judge Will G. Steel, who is known locally as the "father of the Crater Lake national park," told this story at a recent national parks conference in Washington:

"Forty-six years ago I was a farmer's boy in southern Kansas and attended school five miles distant. My lunch was carried in a newspaper. One warm day in May or June I sat in the schoolroom eating the contents of that paper. When through I scanned the columns, reading the short articles, among which was a description of a sunken lake that had been discovered in Oregon. It was said to be 5,000 feet below the surface of the surrounding country, with vertical walls, so that no human body could reach the water. In its center was an island 1,500 feet high with an extinct crater in the top. In all my life I never read an article that took the intense hold on me that that one did and I then and there determined to go to Oregon and to visit that lake and to go down to the water.

"I had two brothers in Portland at the time. Two years thereafter I went to Oregon with my parents and we were met at the steamer landing by my brothers. Before getting over the dock I asked them where that sunken lake was, and found that they had never heard of it.

"It was seven years before I was able to find anyone who had ever heard of it. Then I was told that there was something of the sort in southern Oregon, but my informant was not sure. Nine years later I found a man who had actually seen it, and gave me a good description of it, that greatly increased my desire to see it. However, I was not able to get there until the summer of 1885, when we made the trip in company with three friends, arriving there in July.

"Crater Lake was discovered by a party of twenty-two prospectors, led by John W. Hillman, then of Jacksonville, Oregon, June 12, 1853, and named Deep Blue lake. Mr. Hillman was the last survivor of this party and died in Hope Villa, Louisiana, March 19, 1915, in the eighty-third year of his age.

"While standing on the rim of the lake in 1885 with Professor Joseph LeConte, the thought occurred to me that no point around this wonderful cauldron had the hand of man yet defaced with the marks of desolation, and that something should be done to save it forever for the people of this great country.

"How to accomplish this was the question, so I turned to the professor for counsel. We discussed it at length and finally decided the only way was to have a national park created. Ways and means were discussed and the work of preparation commenced then and there. A petition to the president was prepared, asking for the withdrawal from the market of ten townships, which petition was granted the following January, when President Cleveland issued an executive order to that effect.

"The actual work of interesting congress commenced immediately and continued for seventeen years, when a bill was passed and signed by the president May 22, 1902, the anniversary of the marriage of my parents."

FUGITIVE COCHRAN

WILL FACE CHARGE

Constable Peterson, of Multnomah county, returned Monday night from Omaha with Clark Cochran, wanted here under an indictment charging him with non-support. Cochran fled from Oregon several months ago. He fought extradition, but Mr. Peterson succeeded in getting him returned with requisition papers issued by Governor Withycombe.

Cochran is also under closest investigation for charges of child murder which have been made by his wife. Although the District Attorney's office has not been able to substantiate these charges thus far a searching inquiry will be made of Cochran's past life.

Clark Cochran is the husband of the woman who came before local and Portland officials in a sensational manner upon several occasions. Her last outbreak was early last spring, when she left a note on Portland streets saying that her body would be found floating in the Willamette at a certain time. About that time Sheriff Wilson went to the Cochran home at Wichita station where the couple and a bevy of ill-kept urchins lived in filth and uncleanness. The sheriff found Mrs. Cochran hale and hearty except for decided signs of insanity which she seemed to him to possess.

Cochran seemed to be a hard-working man and his end of the business of home making was in good shape. He had a splendid flock of chickens, a cow and many provisions. He blamed all the family strife to his wife and she in turn gave him all honors for the trouble. Mrs. Cochran had lived a melodramatic life featured by frequent threats to take her own life.

AMES IS "SOME" HUNTER

Federal Agent Gets 20 Bobcats and Seven Cougar

A. G. Ames, of Estacada, who last May was appointed federal hunter for this district and who makes his headquarters in the mountains near the headquarters of the Clackamas river, is at home for a few days and brought several valuable hides of predatory animals from the mountains. From January, 1917, until his government appointment, Ames had trapped and killed six cougar, eight bobcats, three bear, one coyote and several smaller animals and since his appointment as federal hunter has to his credit 12 bobcats, one large timber wolf, one nine-foot cougar and three bear. The latter were caught in traps set for wolves and were injured to such an extent that it was necessary to kill them. As bear are not classed as predatory animals and are harmless, they are not purposely molested.

Mr. Ames lately killed the so-called "Oak Grove Butte mountain lion," which for years had defied hunters and trappers. This animal, an old male, measured 9 feet 2 inches from tip to tip.—Portland Telegram.

CONSCRIPTS TO GO TO EXCELLENT CAMP

When the men drafted into the new national army go into training at Camp Lewis, American Lake, Wash., they will find a wonderfully efficient military cantonment, sanitary in the extreme, in a beautiful location with splendid barracks and every convenience. The United States government has spared no expense to make this reservation as near perfect as possible.

In addition to all that the government has provided, the army Y. M. C.

has, through the national war work council, erected six association buildings and one administration building for the use and comfort of the soldiers.

These buildings are manned by an efficient corps of trained secretaries under the leadership of O. E. Tyler. They are open to the enlisted men at all times. There he finds recreation, amusement, companionship and all the comforts that honest effort and money can provide for him. He also finds writing paper and envelopes with which to write home. These are furnished without cost and he is urged to make use of this privilege as often as he desires.

The army Y. M. C. A. furnishes educational instruction to those who desire to improve their time while in the service and it furnishes religious inspiration for those who seek it. It supplies physical instruction, entertainment and recreation. It seeks in every way to fill the idle time of the enlisted man and to help him physically, mentally and morally.

Fifty trained men are in charge of army Y. M. C. A. activities at American Lake. These men serve the soldiers at all times. They arrange motion picture shows, musical programs and athletic tournaments. They administer to the comfort and the needs of the men and the army Y. M. C. A. building always extends their creed.

The government has completed a sanitary survey five miles from the camp in every direction and has taken steps to remove every influence of an evil nature or considered in the least bit harmful. Camp Lewis has two miles of deep water frontage on Puget Sound, a fresh water lake for maneuvers within the reservation, a sewage system emptying into the sterilizing waters of the Sound and a fresh water supply capable of supplying the 46,000 men to be stationed there. It is an ideal camp.

PETITIONS ARE FEW THROUGHOUT SUMMER

Deputy County Clerk Fred Miller in charge of naturalization petitions, Tuesday estimated that applications had fallen off approximately 80 per cent since early spring, but he was unable to definitely assign a reason for this in view of the fact that it is said increased petitioning has been noted throughout the country.

Since April, Deputy Miller figures, only 32 applications have been filed, whereas there were sometimes more than that number in a single month. Examiner Hazard of the immigration service has advised Mr. Miller that the total for the nation is considerably higher than it has been, and together they believe that the permanency of residence in this county and the large Teutonic population is having a marked effect upon the petitions.

Why Enlistment Lags

Perhaps you have been quietly wondering why there has not been a great rush on the recruiting offices, why enlistment has been so slow. In the September American magazine, a writer says:

"I read an article the other day by a man who expressed wonder that our people should be so 'apathetic' toward this war. He contrasted the slow, quiet enlistment that had been taking place this summer with the enthusiastic rush to the colors in '61 and '98. If he had lived in New York, if he had been as close to the heart of relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Mrs. ETTA DORON, Ogdensburg, Wis. Physicians undoubtedly did their best, battled with this case steadily and could do no more, but often the most scientific treatment is surpassed by the medicinal properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs contained in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If any complication exists it pays to write the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for special free advice.

Woman Thought She Would Die. Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Ogdensburg, Wis.—"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."
