Time Is Here for Sowing Clover Seed

Now is the time to plant clover and timothy seed, if planted in the fall according to a prominent farmer of the Oak Grove district. If clover and timothy are planted during the next few days the frost will not catch it in time to do much damage. Timothy seed is selling at 17 cents per pound, while good clover seed is selling around 55 cents. This is the highest clover has ever gone during the past half century, and Harvey G. Starkweather, who sowed a large tract last week in clover seed, paid 55 cents f. o. b. Portland. Mr. Starkweather makes a practice every year of planting clover and timothy in the fall, about this time, and has had wonderful success with the harvest.

I Owe My Life to PE-RU-NA

Mr. McKinley's letter brings cheer to all who may be sufferers as he was. Read it:

"I can honestly say that I owe my life to Peru. After some of the best doctors in the country gave me up and told me I could not live another month, Peru saved me. Travelling from town to town, through the country and having to go into all kinds of bady heated stores and buildings, sometimes standing up for hours at a time while people made a nuisance of it, it is only natural that I had colds frequently, so when I would hear I paid little attention to it, until last December when I contracted a severe case, which, through neglect on my part, became very bad. When almost too late, I began doctoring, but without avail, until I heard of Peru. It cured me! so I cannot praise it too highly."

PREFERS LOCKUP TO PAYING $13 FOR ROOM RENT

There is at least one person who believes in challenging the profiteers to a showdown. High living costs bring no fears to him. He is E. T. Newberry, a traveling man from Portland, who stopped at the courthouse yesterday.

Coming from Denver, he arrived at Colorado Springs. It was here that the prices seemed to soar, so much so that his financial status could not meet the charges asked by the proprietors and marchants of that town.

He went to several of the hotels and lodging houses, but the prices for rooms were so high that he could not even give them consideration. One hotel had the effrontery to ask $13 for the use of a room for the night.

This was too much for Newberry, who began to think of a way to meet the situation. At last he found the solution.

Walking down the street, he spied a policeman. "Sir," he said, "I am going to break that electric light."

The watchful cop looked at the stranger with threatening mien.

"I'll arrest you if you do," exclaimed the guardian of the law.

"That is just what I want," replied Newberry. "You see this town is so expensive that I haven't a place to sleep tonight—that is, unless I am willing to pay $13 for a room. And I haven't got the price. If I am sent to jail, I can at least get free lodging."

Immediately the officer grew courteous. He had been detailed to investigate the high cost of living in the town. Here was a chance to help combat the exorbitant charges.

"Yes, we have some vacant cots down at the police station. Tell Mike, the watchman, I sent you down; he'll take care of you all right."

And the stranger forthwith paid a visit to the city hostelry, where, even if sleeping quarters were not so convenient and inviting, he at least had peace of mind to enjoy his slumber.

And he also consoled himself with the thought that he had put one over on the money-grabbing hotel keepers.

LACK OF FUNDS MAY HALT MT. HOOD HIGHWAY

Increase in the cost of road building since the first of the year will necessitate the reduction of the construction program of the United States forest service in Oregon in 1920.

The forest service will attempt to begin work on the route to the Oregon caves, an 11-mile stretch, which, owing to the fact that it is on a side hill canyon, will cost $215,000, but it will be impossible to carry operations far. The other four important roads which may be deferred for the present are not long stretches. On the one south of La Pine there are 18.2 miles to be cared for; on the Lakeview one, eight miles, and on that from Crescent, 22.1 miles. From Eugene to Florence 15.7 miles are in forest lands.

"We're either got to leave out these roads or the Mount Hood loop," said the engineer. "Prices have gone up to such an extent that the forest service has found itself under agreement to cover a certain mileage that will cost more than was originally estimated."

"When the cost of the Mount Hood road was first estimated in 1917 the figure was $244,000. In January, 1919, the price had advanced to $514,000. Last summer we were informed by contractors that it could not now be put in for less than $699,000."

"Work is now being done on the loop, that is, workmen were there until the snow sent them in a few days ago. We have $262,000 of the project contracted, but there is small chance of anything more being done on it for the present."

GAS MOUND FOUND

ABERDEEN, Wash., Oct. 31.—A gas mound said to be a duplicate of the one near Tahola in size and volume of natural gas issuing, has been found near the southeast boundary of the Quinault Indian reservation. This mound is about 12 miles east of the one at Tahola, where J. A. Paulhamus started to sink a well in 1913.

Making Budgets

County courts, city councils and school boards, vested with authority to draft budgets for the expenditure of public funds, are confronted with difficult tasks. They are hemmed in and restricted by a constitutional amendment, which prohibits an increase of more than 6-per cent of the amount levied during the previous year, and yet, because of after-the-war conditions, costs of all kinds of supplies and of salaries have gone forward at a swift pace, in comparison with which the 6-per cent limitation counts for little.

Notwithstanding the unusual conditions surrounding the administration of public funds, these several boards are confronted with problems not easy of solution and must keep their budget estimates within the constitutional provision or plunge the taxpayers into debt.

The Oregon City school board has been the first local administrative body to go up against this situation, and the board, much against its own inclinations, has felt obliged to cut from its tentative budget all proposed salary increases, all of them merited and really necessitated because of the rapid and unprecedented advances in living costs. Operation and maintenance of a good school costs money, the chief item being salaries of teachers, who, after years of preparation, are paid less for their work than the average mechanic, but school boards are responsible to the taxpayers and should be responsive to the constitution of the state, however unfair and impracticable it may be at times. The downward revision of budgets is a heart-breaking proposition to men of liberal natures, but the stern hand of the law considers no alternative.

FARM BUREAU NOTES OF INTEREST

Edited by R. G. Scott, County Agent, and Reprinted From Farm Bureau News

WHICH WILL BREAK FIRST?

How long will present high prices last? That is the question uppermost in the minds of most farmers today. When will wages go down is the next question. Here is a chance for a real prophet to prove himself. If anyone is gifted with foresight and can predict the future, let him come forth and enlighten us. But mere guesses are valueless. Now the County Agent is not going to answer these questions; but certain facts stand out which throw some light on the whole matter. In the first place, the world's surplus of food has been used up. Much of it lies on the bottom of the ocean, a lot of it went up in smoke. At any rate, it has gone. In the second place, conditions in Europe are not such as to replace their supplies quickly. There is not yet settled conditions there. In the third place, until industrial conditions settled in Europe, they will not have much cash or credit to exchange for our food supplies. Another factor to be considered is the industrial unrest in our country. Every day new strikes are reported. Laborers are clamoring for lower food prices. They claim that unless food comes down they will go on further strikes. Meanwhile the farmers are having trouble to get help to handle his crops, and the wages which have to be paid for farm labor are an incentive to doing the work yourself and letting the rest go. There is the vicious circle of high prices for labor, high prices for food, high prices for machinery. Which will break first?

It is sound advice to play safe. Do not plan to farm more than you can handle yourself. Go ahead with your regular rotation. Improve your soil. Keep better livestock so that your profits will be greater. Keep a record of your farm business. Learn what it costs to produce your crops, and then organize with your neighbor to get the best price that is to be obtained. The Farm Bureau exists for the purpose of assisting in this improvement and organization.

THE FAIRS.

The State and County Fairs have passed into history leaving behind them a feeling of satisfaction among those who were able to attend. They were a success. The part taken by Clackamas County in the State Fair was particularly gratifying. No elaborate preparations were made for our county exhibit; the work was done by a few, and the exhibit probably did not show the best that Clackamas County can produce. Still, it was a creditable showing, and was considered good enough to draw down the first prize for the Willamette Valley. We did not have a large exhibit, but we did have good quality in the things exhibited. Oats from Molalla took the first prize for the State. Bluestem wheat from Molalla took the first prize for that variety against the rest of the State, and was a close second on sweetpeas. Cabbage and cauliflower from Hazella came out ahead, as usual, and we had a number of other firsts and seconds. Our county had the tallest corn from the Willamette Valley.

From the time the fair opened there was constant interest in our exhibit. Mr. Cook who was in charge, was kept answering questions from early in the morning till late at night. If anyone had any doubts about the value of that exhibit to advertise Clackamas County and our resources, fifteen minutes standing around listening to the questions, would have convinced him.

This year is a lesson to us. After the State Fair is worth attending; it is worth putting up a County exhibit. And in order to take our proper position among the counties which exhibit, we must be able to take up the very best products of our county. We need the cooperation of everyone in locating and securing the different articles.

The County Fair was also a success, as most people can testify. Those who took blue ribbons are to be congratulated for having the best that Clackamas County produces. It is hoped that next year there will be still more competition among the community clubs and granges, for there are two beautiful cups and substantial prizes for the winners. The livestock exhibit should be strengthened. Those who brought stock consider that it paid them well from the advertising standpoint. There is much good stock in our county, and it should be exhibited at the County Fair. Now is the time to make plans for next year's show.

A WORKER.

All real boys have a lot of energy which they have to work off in various ways.

One boy in Clackamas county decided to be a real club worker and so while the rules of club work say that a child can only enroll in two projects some way or other this boy got enrolled in four, and when the present county leader came into the county he found Vernie Jarl of Boring enrolled in poultry division 2 gardening, corn growing and potato raising.

His record is an enviable one. He finished his four projects and filed his final reports in all four on time. His corn was not very good and he knew it, but he had done his best with it. It was not his fault that the blight struck his potato patch and they ripened early. He had said when he signed up for his project he would make an exhibit, and he did in all four lines.

The results of his exhibit at the state fair were to win the first place in division 2 poultry.

At the county fair he won second on potatoes and third on poultry. He has spent a busy summer, which is the profitable kind. He will be one of Clackamas counties representatives at O. A. C. next summer.

RESULTS OF THE FAIRS.

Each year brings the harvest. Each undertaking has a time and place some where in its existence when those in control stop and go over the results attained thus far, and see how they measure up with others in the same line of endeavor.

The work of the Boys' and Girls Industrial Club is no different in this respect than are other lines of business.

We look to the County Fair as a means of gathering together the results of the work at home, and to the State Fair as a means of measuring the efforts of the boys and girls of Clackamas County with those of the boys and girls in other Counties of the State.

Clackamas County has made a record for itself in club work, and was very anxious that this record should be upheld.

So altho hampered by the fact that the State Fair was held before the County Fair, those in charge of the work got together the best work they could and went down to Salem to show the rest of the Counties what the Clackamas County Club workers had been doing.

Judging was slow and the results uncertain for most of the week and it was not until Friday morning that ribbons began to appear, and not until Friday night that the ribbons were placed on the booths.

It is a great satisfaction to be able to tell the boys and girls who have worked hard and conscientiously all summer, that measured by the exhibits of the other Counties they were not found wanting, and that they stood just a trifle higher, just enough to bring the blue ribbon than the boys and girls from any of the other counties represented.

It is a pleasure to be able to tell those engaged in poultry raising that the blue ribbon and the $15. prize for the best exhibit of juvenile poultry, came to them, and we are also glad to say that the first honor, that of having put up the most artistic booth comes to Clackamas County.

It is seldom one county wins the three first prizes and the boys and girls have a right to feel proud of their efforts, and the parents and local leaders should be proud of their boys and girls.

The county leader and county school superintendent hope to be able to thank personally each child and each parent and leader who made the success at the state fair possible. With the splendid cooperation of people the results would have been far different.

Last Call For Loganberry Tips.

There are a good many people who have half made up their minds to set out loganberries next Spring, but have not yet ordered the plants. This year there was a shortage of plants, and the same will probably be true next year, as the growers only tip as many plants as they have orders for, and the tipping must be done this Fall. In fact it is already getting late to get in on this profitable industry, now is the time to order your tips. Get them from your neighbors if you can, and if you cannot find any other source for plants, possibly the County Agent will be able to put you in touch with someone who can.

Benton County Also Has Thistles.

Yes, and they are beginning to look after them. The County Court has named Sam Moore to see that the Thistles do not go to seed. He found that out of eighty farms along the Willamette River, all but three or four were infested with Canada Thistles. In the past the seed from these farms has been coming down the river and lodging on Clackamas County farms. Marion County is also a bad offender in this regard. Our own county will have to take some very stringent measures to keep the thistles under control.

GIRL MAKES DRIER.

Miss Ethel Baker of the Hazella neighborhood after having seen the Home made cook stove drier demonstrated by the Home Demon. Agent at Chautauqua went home and made a drier for herself. This drier was successfully made out of pieces of lumber on hand and tin cut to fit the bottom so that the wood could not come in contact with the stove. In this she has dried out the following fifteen pounds of Petite prunes, ten pounds of Italian prunes, five pounds of pears, six pounds of cherries, four pounds of peaches, six pounds of apples and six pounds of corn. Those of you who saw these dried products in the Clackamas County Booth at the State Fair or in the Hazella Community Booth at the County Fair will surely say that nowhere can such quality in dried products be surpassed.

ANOTHER MOLE POOL.

This week the County Agent marketed 760 mole skins which have been accumulating since July. The largest number sent in by one person was 100 by Linnie Willbrod, of Aurora route 4. The average price for all these skins was 23c. This is good, considering all the poor skins sent in. It is certainly an inducement to the boys and girls to trap moles and protect the garden. Where consistent trapping has been done, the moles have been pretty well cleaned out. On the other hand where the moles have not been trapped, they do a great deal of damage. The present time is not the best time to trap, as the moles are for the most part going through their molt, and the skin is not an prime as it will be after the first of the year.

SCHOOL LUNCHES.

Again we have with us the problem of the school lunch. Its task to be faced each week day morning and no small one for the busy farm woman.

Because it is such a task we have sometimes neglected it, letting the children put up their own lunch. They have usually grabbed a biscuit, or something from the breakfast table, and are off for the day. When we allow this we are neglecting a very serious problem and decidedly that belonging to the women only. Because our child in so many cases depends entirely upon the box lunch for his noon meal. We must make it appetizing. If only each school furnished one hot dish to their children at noon. It adds materially to the happiness, efficiency and nourishment of each child and precious to the teacher who sees it in that light. But even with the hot soup or cocoa we must have add sandwiches fruit and dessert. It still remains a big problem.

The sandwich is the main bulk of the lunch. These may be varied by using not only white bread but by substituting brown and nut breads. Then instead of always having egg in sandwiches use leftover meat, beans and a little salad dressing and you have a variety in filling. Cottage cheese, with jelly and jams is good, raisin filling adds a variety and is a sandwich every child enjoys. Peanut butter and sweet ground chocolate is delicious. Then in addition to our sandwich, cup custards or simple bread and cereal puddings are good. Canned fruit or preserved fruits, nuts and plain cake finish up the lunch basket.

Why Not Own A Pressure Cooker?

The steam pressure cooker now coming commonly into use, is indeed a labor fuel, and time saving device. The cookers are made of aluminum with a lid which clamps down in order to hold in the steam and to this lid is attached a safety valve which can be regulated up to 30 pounds pressure, a petcock to release the steam and a gauge which registers the steam pressure inside the cooker.

The Home Demonstration Agent has been experimenting with one she has and the results have been interesting indeed. She has cooked whole meals in it and they have been excellent. One meal consisted of pot roast, browned potatoes and steamed squash. The meal, a tough piece, was first browned in the bottom of the cooker then a little water was added. The squash was put in a small pan and set on top the meat. The lid was clamped down and the steam pressure brought up to 15 pounds and kept there 30 minutes over a slow fire. At the end of 30 minutes the cooker was opened and potatoes added and then closed again. The pressure was brought to 10 pounds and kept there 10 minutes and then the meat, potatoes and squash were removed from the cooker and gravy made out of the juice in the bottom. The potatoes and squash were beautifully cooked and the meat had a most delicious flavor and was very tender and moist.

At another time roast pork was put in the cooker, left there under 15 pounds pressure for 30 minutes. The cooker was then opened potatoes placed around the meat and a pan of cauliflower on top. The lid was placed and the steam brought up to 10 pounds and held there for 10 minutes. A delicious meal resulted. At another time a Chinese pheasant who had spurs a inch long was cooked for 30 minutes in the cooker and came out very tender, juicy and of very fine flavor.

If you are at all interest in one of these labor saving devices call on the Home Demonstration Agent and for a demonstration of this splendid cooker.

Many Bust Forms Made.

Up to the present time the Home Demonstration Agent has helped thirty-five women in Clackamas County pad forms for themselves. In each case the expense of these have been less than five dollars. A French lining is made and fitted to the woman and this is then padded out with cotton and newspapers and a foundation bust forms. Since the bust forms are raising in price it will be desirable in the very near future to use plaster of paris on the linings and then stuff the linings with excelsior and paper.

Just at present it will be impossible for Miss Anthony to help any more women with forms, but to the help being given to mothers who are Nutrition problem with their babies and small children.
