Relief for the Farmer

All sorts and conditions of stories are being retailed about the road bond issue. It is whispered that the so-called paying trust is interested in the outcome, that the horses will not be able to travel over smooth pavement, that the banks will reap a rich harvest on the sale of the bonds, that there is a big, black nigger in the wood-pile, and so on.

Stripped of all of these stories, the outstanding fact remains that the authorization of $1,700,000 worth of road bonds will pull Clackamas county out of the mud, and that their defeat will mean a continuation of our present road program, that suffers from inadequate funds. Nearly 2,000 farmers have expressed a desire, in writing, to have this question submitted to the people at a special election. Hundreds of farmers from every section have become so dissatisfied at the pace we have been traveling along the lines of road construction that they have practically demanded relief, which can be obtained only by borrowing sufficient money to proceed to building permanent roads without delay. Any other plan is bound to mean delay. The pay-as-you-go system has been tried and found wanting. There is an insistent clamor for immediate road construction and the county court is beset from ever side with petitions for road money, and has been compelled to turn down meritorious appeals because of the lack of available funds.

If the road bonds should go down to defeat, the weeping and wailing will come from those farmers who have a right to expect better things when they are willing to pay the bills. The whole proposition is simply a question of paying less than 5 per cent interest for 20 years in order to secure 144 miles of hard surfaced roads and the construction of the new Oregon City-West Linn bridge. Clackamas has cheerfully voted down every road bond movement submitted in the past and may do so again, but we doubt it.

The Red Cross drive is on in full force in this community this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Murray, of Washington state, have been visiting relatives near the village during the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Baird and family of Newberg, spent Sunday at the Angus home.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH THE AMERICAN RED CROSS. In Roumania.

Soon after the entrance of the United States in the war the successes of the Central Powers in Roumania had reduced that country to a most tragic condition and in the summer of 1917, the American Red Cross dispatched its first Roumanian relief contingent. Two hospitals were at once taken over and operated by the Red Cross, a canteen for the starving refugees established and food and clothing distributed over a large area. Transportation was one of the toughest problems with which the Red Cross workers in Roumania had to deal. Here is seen an oxcart used by the Red Cross to carry its relief supplies up into the mountains.

INJUNCTION WILL STAND IN STRIKE OF MINERS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—The government cannot accept the proposal of organized labor to end the coal strike by vacating the injunction against the officials of the United Mineworkers of America. Assistant Attorney General Palmer, announced today that the government could not abandon its position as the strike was a violation of the law.

Judge Ames issued the following statement:

"The strike is a violation of law. As long as it continues, we are going to proceed in the courts. The dispute between the mine owners and workers is an entirely different question that they can settle in their own way. The government cannot tolerate continued violation of the law such as this strike constitutes."

Refusal of the government to vacate the injunction means a long fight in the coal fields, while its withdrawal would have opened the way for settlement of the strike within forty-eight hours, according to Edgar Wallace, legislative representative of the United Mineworkers of America.

The statement of Judge Ames was in reply to a statement by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, that if the federal injunction was withdrawn, "a way would be opened for settlement of the difficulty."

WILBUR APPEAL DROPPED

SALEM, Oct. 31.—The appealed case against Julius Wilbur, at one time proprietor of the notorious Friars' club at Milwaukie, has been dismissed in the United States supreme court, according to information received by Attorney General George M. Brown. Wilbur was convicted in the Clackamas county courts on a charge of violating the prohibition laws, but later appealed the verdict to the Oregon supreme court. This tribunal affirmed the decision of the lower court, whereupon Mr. Wilbur appealed to the United States supreme court.

Because Mr. Wilbur failed to file a brief in the United States supreme court, and has left the country, the attorney general urged the dismissal of the action. Wilbur now will have to serve a six months term in the Clackamas county jail and pay a fine of $300, or forfeit his bail bond.

RED CROSS HOUSE GIVES CHEER AT LEWIS

For the Red Cross, the war did not end with the armistice, and even yet there are thirty thousand soldiers and sailors still under treatment in army and navy hospitals. The Red Cross convalescent home at Camp Lewis stands next to home itself in the affections of hundreds of boys who, sick or wounded, looked forward to the day when they might leave the bare and cheerless ward in the base hospital and spend part of each day enjoying its easy chairs, its music, its books, its pictures, and its good cheer. Even now, a year after the armistice, there are overseas men, patients at Camp Lewis, not yet well enough to be discharged, who sit before the great fireplace these autumn days, thankful that The Greatest Mother is still mindful of them. The picture is duplicated in army hospitals all over the land, and wherever throughout the world American boys are still in Uncle Sam's service.
